THE FASHION CHANGES

INITIAL showings of fall models in women's dress lines in New York's big garment trade center this week interestingly reveal a trend back toward a softer, less sophisticated feminity. The styles are full of pleats and drapes, full sleeves, and pre-war waistlines. There are high necklines and here and there Queen Anne ruffs.

Milady, it would appear, is out to recapture some of the charms of the years agone, some of which depend considerably on not putting the entire attraction into the lobby display.

This all is of a piece with apparently remote but really kindred developments in the other arts. There seems to be a reaching back for romance and sentiment.

Glamour does not grow in test tubes.

The motion picture has recently been discovering some part of this ancient truth and it is being gradually revealed that while it may be desirable to call a spade a spade, there is also an allowable option to leave it in the tool house and talk about something else.

NOT THE ANSWER

NOW Universal's newsreel is to exercise a camera boycott on the State of Ohio because it seems that Mr. John W. Bricker, attorney general of that state, has been instrumental in putting newsreels back under censorship and raising the screening fee from $1 to $3 a reel. The move may be considered well enough warranted, but a familiarity with the methods of journalism suggests that it would be possible for a reasonably alert contact man to find quite a bit of entirely legitimate screen news in Ohio—and several other states—which could be presented nationally with more immediate and positive effect on the local patriots. Today's newsreel is no more especially dedicated to amusement than today's newspaper. It can have the same rights if it will take them—with the instruments at hand.

"BILL" IS BACK

THIS week pleasantly sees the return to Broadway of Mr. C. L. Yearsley in behalf of Mr. S. Charles Einfeld's campaigning for Warner's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." A large goodwill goes with the mellowed experience of this Bill Yearsley who so many years ago set out to the ends of the world and a share in the varied adventures of the late and picaresque Mr. J. D. Williams of Parkersburg, the black tent circuits, Vancouver, Sydney, London and way stations. Dreamers of dreams that now and then come true, one can even now only guess how much was "Bill" and how much was "J.D.", and they themselves couldn't tell.

DETROIT'S GESTURE

THE action of the Detroit Free Press, and its managing editor, Mr. Malcolm Bingay, in discontinuing a Hollywood chatter column as invasive of the interests of the screen and Detroit's theatres, is the most conspicuous and emphatic gesture of goodwill that the industry has had from the press in many a day. All too commonly newspapers have looked upon the motion picture and its people as subjects for exploitation for circulation purposes only—and the bad news is always hotter.

Meanwhile, in sequel to the Detroit move, something of a national check-up on the subject of the Hollywood column by Mr. Sidney Skolsky syndicated by the Daily News of New York, was reported in progress among circuit theatres, according to Motion Picture Daily.

Without reference to the specific influence of Mr. Skolsky's copy, it may be observed that there are many other contributors to the pabulum of the daily and fan press whose contributions are possibly even more provocative of attention.

The motion picture may properly ask of the American lay press why it should be singled out for the special sort of "consumers' research" attention that it is given by the daily movie critics and columnists. The newspapers do not find it their great public responsibility to publish critiques of soap, pickles, motor cars, silk stockings, beauty parlors, restaurants or other public services and commodities—or of anything that can really be tested and measured with scale, yardstick and litmus paper. They do choose, however, to become authoritative and analytical on the subject of screen merchandise, the value of which is in imponderable, intangible emotional contents.

The motion picture is merchandise and is entitled to such consideration in treatment at the hands of the lay press as it accords to other merchandise.

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

"Stake in America"

Charging that the film code had turned the industry over to "the criminal motion picture trust," and the independents were saved by only the supreme court decision in the NRA case, Representative Francis D. Culkin of New York in an address inserted in the Congressional Record this week urged enactment of his bill to outlaw block and blind booking.

Assailing the producers and Will H. Hays, Mr. Culkin asserted "the movie trust is definitely a violation of the antitrust act." The federal suit now pending in St. Louis will have a far-reaching effect, the representative wrote.

Mr. Culkin saw some hope in the fact film companies have become financially indebted to the Chase National Bank and Western Electric (Erpi), since "the gentlemen of these directorates have a large stake in the future of America." Since introducing his control measures, Mr. Culkin said, he has had communications from 244 organizations and 121 individuals expressing approval.

Into the Open

E. B. Derr this week came out into the open to join Pat Casey in their minority stockholders' fight against the Young and Kolbe voting trust interests in control of Pathe Exchange, Inc., adding to Mr. Casey's suit for an accounting his own motion for a mandamus order to compel the management to permit him to examine the corporation's books.

The fight was proceeding merrily and will reach open court hearings Tuesday. Developments leading up to the controversy and subsequent events are detailed on page 18.

Trailing the Fox

By reason of the requirements of the national banking act of 1933, The Chase National Bank of New York published this week in financial newspapers the details of its international interest in the motion picture industry through considerable ownership of its affiliate, Fox Film Corporation.

Revealed for the first time are the far-flung ramifications of the parent company, affiliates and subsidiaries, of which there are 207 in the United States and others in 30 foreign countries.

Most of the subsidiary companies are under National Theatres Corporation, the new Fox theatre affiliate controlling 338 theatres in the middle west and far west. Chase owns 58 per cent of National Theatres, Fox 42 per cent.

The report shows three newsreel subsidiaries, four realty subsidiaries, one copyright subsidiary, one story purchasing subsidiary, and one laboratory subsidiary. Foreign activities are controlled by United American Investment Corporation and Fox Film Export Corporation.

The family relationship between the various Fox and allied concerns, the uncles, aunts, cousins, nieces and nephews, is explained in the story on page 17 and in the detailed tabulation starting on page 35.

"Uncle Sam presents"

The list of incorporators of the American National Theatre and Academy that was created this week by an act of Congress for the revitalization of the stage reads like the social register of the Atlantic Seaboard.

Awaiting the signature of the President was the Wagner-McLaughlin bill establishing the Academy as a "non-profit organization without capital stock," ostensibly to be supported by the 44 incorporating patrons of the drama, and with the avowed purposes of (1) presenting theatrical productions of the highest types; (2) stimulating public interest in the drama as an art belonging both to the theatre and literature; (3) advancing interest in the drama throughout the country by furthering production of the best plays, interpreted by the best actors, at a minimum cost; and, (4) further developing a study of the drama of the present and past in our universities, colleges, schools and elsewhere, and developing the art and technique of the theatre through a school within the National Academy. See page 55.

The Government's participation appears to be confined solely to the use of its name as godfather of the idea. The incorporators apparently must follow through from there.

Codedoggling

Once again in the preliminary stages of code-drafting, the industry, through the Voluntary Industry Committee, is considering many proposals for a trade practice agreement to carry on the beneficent features of the "dead-as-a-dodo" Blue Eagle.

A tentative draft of a voluntary agreement has been formulated. Submitted by the Council on Trade Agreements established by the Trade Association Executives in New York City and the American Arbitration Association, it provides for the arbitration of commercial disputes under the laws of the states. Central control would be in a board representing all interests.

It seems that a new organization or all-industry agency not dissimilar to the NRA Code Authority and its administrative functions will have to be set up to supervise any voluntary agreement. Such a proposal is embodied in a plan formulated by Tyree Dillard, Jr., retired general counsel of the Code Authority.

The latest reports come from Washington that NRA is convinced voluntary agreements will prove futile, and that control of industry will be sought through legislation in Congress. The story starts on page 13.

Print That Moves

A curiously exciting volume entitled "Eyes on the World," produced and directed by M. Lincoln Schuster, an interpretive photo-chronology of history-in-the-making for 1934-35, brought forth this week, is the closest approach to a motion picture that has yet been achieved by the art of printing on paper.

The big, thundering volume is published by Simon & Schuster, the same house which ten years ago ventured to bring forth a ponderous two volume history of the motion picture, "A Million and One Nights" by Terry Ramsaye.

"Eyes on the World" is dedicated to Laurence Stallings, who, it will be recalled, put together for Simon & Schuster the spectacular picture book entitled "The First World War." Mr. Schuster's technique is a considerable amplification of that in the prior book and develops a living sense of the active present progressive tense by the use of various ingenious montage effects and the pictorial application of newspaper excerpts and headlines, which are to be seen and felt rather than read. The makers of motion pictures are likely to find "Eyes on the World" provocative, and a startling approximation of the cinema's most advanced technique effected in cold, immobile ink.

The book is effectively addressed at a picture minded world, and the great school of hit and run "readers."

16-mm. Politics

Deep in international politics, the question of a world standard for 16-mm. equipment and sound-film manufacture will be aired at a specially called conference of the International Standards Association and the International Congress of Scientific and Applied Photography, in Paris Sunday. The meeting was requested by the Sectional Committee on Motion Pictures, Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith of New York, chairman, under the American Standards Association, which will press its claims through George Friedl, delegate, for international adoption of the American specifications.

Leading the opposition to America will be Germany, which has adopted its own standards, fortified by Italy. The Nazi program of a self-contained national economy, plus the obvious quest for markets, is assumed to have impelled German engineers to draw up specifications directly reverse to American standards.

The story starts on page 61.

Kobayashi Rises

Developments in Japan are heading toward a first-class jousting for theatre domination of Tokyo, with the rapid rise of the name Ichizo Kobayashi in the exhibition field.

The latest move of this progressive businessman is to apply for a permit for a 4,000-seat house showing first-runs on "at least" a double featuring policy and at a low admission charge, something for the Shochiku theatres to think about.

The situation is traced back by the Herald correspondent to the past year's improvement of public taste cinematic, which drew the active interest of Mr. Kobayashi, an improvement which demanded, and obtained, a higher type of product for Japan's theatres. See page 54.

Restricted Release

A new system of restricted release of a motion picture, with one year's protection given to every theatre playing the film, will be put into effect by Warner Brothers for "A Midsummer Night's Dream," produced by Max Reinhardt with a cast including James Cagney, Joe E. Brown, Dick Powell, Jean Muir, Victor Jory. It is now being edited for release in October.

Warner Bros. has decided that it shall be exhibited only on a reserved-seat basis and under special conditions which must be agreed to by the theatre.

Every theatre booking "A Midsummer Night's Dream" under the special terms applying to this production will receive one year's protection. No other exhibitor in that territory shall be permitted to play it for one year after the beginning of the original engagement on any other than a roadshow basis.

The world premiere will take place in New York, probably at the Hollywood theatre.

Welsh Threat

A three month's booking embargo by British showmen against any American distributor violating the promise of 1931 to hold down percentages on pictures was proposed from the floor of the summer conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, closed last weekend at Cardiff, Wales.

The suggestion followed addresses in which it was shown that $250 was the average weekly gross of 1,250 theatres in Britain.

Horror pictures were decried by the Right Honorable E. E. Shortt, K.C., president of the British Board of Film Censors. Mr. Shortt said the onetime flow of "undesirable" pictures from America represented only a passing phase of life which had been recorded by Hollywood.

The story of the convention is on page 67.

Conspiracy War

One independent exhibitor, R. M. Fuller, Texas, lost his conspiracy fight in federal courts this week against distributors, while another, operating the Astor theatre in Chicago, was listening to out-of-court settlement offers from the companies.

The large interests became defendants in antitrust suits filed in Los Angeles and Chicago, independents suing Fox West Coast and the large companies in California for $425,000, while in Chicago a group named Loew's and MGM, charging coercion.

These and other developments in the "antitrust war" between distributors and exhibitors are related on page 78.

Paramount Free

With predictions of the trustees for clear sailing ahead, the new management of the new Paramount Pictures, Inc., took control of operations this week, the court ordering the transfer of assets from the trustees to the officers, who, at the same time, ratified a five-year contract for John Edward Otterson, as president, at a reputed annual salary of $100,000, and elected R. Earle Anderson vice-president in a financial supervisory position. Mr. Anderson's resignation from Erpi, where he served as treasurer, was preceded by the borrowing of H. M. Wilcox, Erpi vice-president, for the post of Otterson executive aid, with special duties pertaining to a general survey of the Paramount properties. The story of Paramount's last week of its 29-week status as a bankrupt is told on page 63.

Buying Originals

June brought 50 additions to Hollywood's story supply for 1935-36 production, 16 companies buying 24 original manuscripts, 19 books and 7 plays—including a dozen of the season's biggest successes of stage and bookshelf. These acquisitions increased to 200 the number of properties purchased since all producers began in April to buy up material for the new season by the wholesale.

The convention of United Artists that gets underway in Hollywood on Monday will be the last sales meeting to be held, all other large companies having already sent their sales forces from convention headquarters into the field to the exhibitor.

These new-season product activities and those of other companies are reported on page 57.

Allied Regionals

Solutions of the problems of the independent theatre owner will be pursued by Allied States Association of Exhibitors at a series of regional conventions, the vice-presidents calling all members in the Midwest to Indianapolis, on July 10 and 11, and members in the Atlantic States to Atlantic City, on August 21 to 23. These follow a New England conference held last week at Boston.

On the program for Indianapolis will be an attempt to muster all independent owners for a battle to push the Pettengill anti-block booking and the Duffy copyright bills in Congress.

Meanwhile other exhibitor organizations were debating the problems of operation during the week. On page 80.

Columbia Convenes

Columbia Picture Corporation's sales force, in convention in Chicago, was told this week that the company would release 52 features and 125 shorts next season. Twelve outdoor features are included while the shorts include 10 series of one-reelers and 26 two-reelers.

VOLUNTARY CODE DRAFTED; NRA INQUIRY THREATENS

Washington Officials Say Film Industry Is "Behaving Itself on the Whole" While Congress Remains in Session

Of various proposals received by the Voluntary Industry Committee set up last week to draft a basis for a voluntary code of fair competition for the motion picture industry, outstanding suggestions are plans recommended by Tyree Dillard, Jr., Code Authority general counsel, and a proposed draft for a voluntary agreement developed by business executives and arbitration groups.

President Roosevelt this week instructed the Federal Trade Commission to negotiate for voluntary agreements. The Dillard plan, submitted to Washington, calls for an American Motion Picture Institute to adopt fair trade practice rules. Local boards would handle trade disputes, others labor matters. Appeals would be taken to the National Motion Picture Industrial Council in New York, labor appeals to the National Motion Picture Labor Council. A Production Labor Council would handle the studios.

Federal Inquiry Considered

While the four-man subcommittee of the Voluntary Industry Committee was studying the mass of data already submitted preliminary to a report next Monday, word came from Washington that an exhaustive investigation of all phases of the industry, going back to the very inception of the business, is under consideration by the new National Recovery Administration. The study would be a part of a survey of 14 major industries planned by the NRA, on the basis of which legislation may be recommended to Congress next session for industrial control. As the possibilities of creating a voluntary structure were being debated, it was evident that:

1. Antitrust laws and decisions in film cases constituted formidable obstacles to any new code basis.

2. Distributor apathy was developing, largely because these companies have little or nothing to gain by any code of fair practice. Distributors continued fair practice provisions in new contracts.

3. Exhibitors who had assailed the compulsory NRA code were now urging some machinery be created for mediation. Government officials are understood to consider as a substitute for the voluntary code the "basic plan" or model trade agreement developed by the council on trade agreements.

Mr. Dillard, whose duties as general counsel of the Motion Picture Code Authority terminated officially Wednesday, has formulated a plan embodying the principles of a voluntary code which has been submitted to J. Robert Rubin of MGM, head of the Voluntary Industry Committee, and to Austin C. Keough, chairman of the sub-committee which is exploring the legal aspects.

Continuing as general counsel of the new group, Mr. Dillard is devoting his attention to a proposal whereby a voluntary agreement could be effectuated within the constitutional limitations identified with the supreme court's decision voiding the NRA, and machinery set up to perpetuate the beneficial features of the compulsory code. The administrative machinery of Mr. Dillard's plan and under the various other proposals being considered by the new committee presupposes the existence or creation of an all-industry organization vested with central control. Mr. Dillard favors a skeleton organization representative of national, state and regional industry groups, which is not dissimilar from the setup of the Code Authority. The committee is expected to make public Mr. Dillard's proposal next Monday.

Seek to Retain Many Provisions

The Dillard plan, reported to have received the tentative approval of national labor groups, recommends that all industry elements be given equal representation on the local and national boards. Production Labor Council would include various west coast groups.

Final determination of the feasibility of a new code structure, and its provisions as well as membership of the board of control, will in the last analysis, depend on the extent to which industry elements are willing to participate. So far, exhibitor opinion has been divided largely because of the manifest impotence of the compulsory code to obtain enforcement. The distributors are "on the fence." They are unwilling to court trouble through the antitrust laws and are inhibited by court decisions under the Sherman act relating to arbitration and clearance and zoning.

In distributor circles there is also the feeling that film companies will acquire no benefits but decided legal liabilities through a voluntary code, which, they say, was the case with the NRA pact.

Tentative Model Agreement

In the month that has elapsed since the supreme court's NRA decision, there has been widespread desire of individual exhibitors and exhibitor groups to retain many of the provisions of that much-criticized act.

While the distributors originally favored the NRA and its codes, discussions of a voluntary agreement now leave them cold. Allied and other exhibitor organizations who fought the industry code are now pleading for some sort of tribunal.

Since announcement last week of the Voluntary Industry Committee, John C. Flinn, its secretary, has received a number of requests from other industries and organizations for any plans that may be evolved. The committee also is drawing on the experience of others and has obtained numerous suggestions from outside sources, including a plan for voluntary self-regulation from the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and a proposal outlined by A. Lincoln Filene, Boston merchant, whereby supervision of voluntary industry agreements would be vested in the Federal Trade Commission.

Plan of Code Authority's Counsel Provides for Central Board; "Model Agreement" for Businesses Is Studied

Careful consideration is being given to guiding principles and practices for trade agreements and a tentative model agreement for self-government of industry developed by the Joint Committee of Trade Association Executives in New York City and the American Arbitration Association. The proposals were submitted by the Council on Trade Agreements established by these two groups with the broad objectives of serving as clearing house for the filing of voluntary agreements and "to serve as a medium for further advancing the conception of self-government by industry" through voluntary codes.

Both the basic principles and practices for agreements and the proposed draft for a code are suggestions only, and the Council recommends that their applications to the problems of the film industry or any other industry should be with advice of counsel. While the Voluntary Industry Committee is tapping available sources of information, it realizes that any draft of a general code has its shortcomings because of the legal prohibitions peculiar to the film industry. Arbitration, the compulsory type of which was outlawed for the film industry by the Thacher decree, is provided in the draft as the means of settling disputes. It also is contemplated that the administrative machinery be placed in a central agency embracing all factors.

The tentative model proposals of the Council on Trade Agreements flow from the experience of the American Arbitration Association in setting up arbitration machinery in many industries and the experience and knowledge of the Trade Association Executives, consisting of managers and heads of trade and industry associations.

The Arbitration Association several years ago assisted in formulating the arbitration provisions in the standard exhibition contract. It has a large panel of arbitrators for the settling of disputes in the theatre and film industry, including Gabriel Hess, general attorney for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Adolph Zukor, chairman of Paramount. Will H. Hays formerly was a director of the association, and John E. Otterson, president of Paramount, now is on its board.

Agreements Must Be Voluntary

The Council points out that members of an industry desirous of taking common action to establish and carry out the objectives of the NRA codes, must now do so by voluntary agreements—voluntary from the standpoint of entering into them, not voluntary from the standpoint of observance.

"In our opinion," suggested the Council, "trade agreements should be open covenants openly arrived at; should be in writing; should reflect the ideas and aspirations of the major portion of an industry; should contemplate equitable relations between employer and employee; and should contemplate the public welfare in its broadest sense. Such agreements must conform to the constitutional and legal requirements of the federal and state governments. They must not be against the public policy."

It is advised that any preamble reciting the inspiration or purposes of the agreement should not refer to codes, since they have been declared null and void and do not constitute a legal basis for an "agreement," and, the Council adds, "inference of their continuation under a new development might raise complications."

Self-government by an industry, according to the basic principles set out, should express itself through the three usual separate and distinctive channels—legislation, administration and adjudication. The actual administration of the agreement embracing the explanations and application of its provisions must be vested in some strong centralized control conversant with the industry and commanding the respect of industry members; and the desires of the majority, both in numbers and productivity of the members, must be the guiding factors in the matter of trade practice and other provisions.

The suggested principles continue: "We deem it necessary to the competent administration of agreements that there be in each industry a strong trade association and in the article on administration that provision be made for its structure and purposes, manner of choosing its governing body, payment of dues and establishment of budget, with provision that none of the members becomes a partner by reason of the agreement, and that no officer or agent of the association acting in good faith shall be liable except for wilful misfeasance or nonfeasance. These guarantees for an administrative body should be afforded to all signatories and a copy of the by-laws of the administrative body should be furnished them.

Administrative Budget Advised

"We consider it an unnecessary requirement that all members of the industry shall be members of the trade association before they can become signatories to the agreement. It is necessary only that they accept the association as the administrative body for the agreement and contribute their share to its maintenance." It is recommended that each association provide a budget for administration and that an itemized statement be sent to each proposed signatory together with the manner of assessment or apportionment, and that no additional costs be incurred without the specific consent of the signatories. Where there is an actual arbitration the cost shall be paid by the parties in accordance with an established schedule of fees."

"By adjudication," says the principals, "is meant the quasi-judicial function of interpreting the provisions of the agreement, determining violations of breaches thereof and fixing damages therefor. This function should be vested in an agency not subject to control by the administration but independent thereof and its proceedings and findings.

"Disputes will arise between parties thereto which cannot be settled by conciliatory methods available within the industry, and which it is not advisable to submit to litigation. In such instances industry may wish to provide for an impartial determination of the facts by an independent tribunal." The model code suggests that the tribunals maintained by the American Arbitration Association provide such means.

Separate Agreements Suggested

It is further recommended as "more practical for the trade association to prepare identical but separate agreements to be signed by each member separately entering into contract with each other and with the association, and specifically stating that it is not a partnership agreement, and attached to such agreement when submitted for signature should be a memorandum containing the by-laws of the administrative body, the names of its officers and a list of the names of members of the industry being invited to sign the agreement.

". . . It is obvious that for purposes of study, comparison, and limitation, the agreements adopted by the various industries and administered through their trade associations, as we suggest, should be more or less standard in form and content.

"Press statements indicate that, during the past week, some 16 trade-practice agreements have been filed with the newly created Administrator of the National Recovery Administration. We believe that, pending a declaration of policy by the Administration on the subject, it would be better for the trade associations themselves to develop their own agency for the purpose and avoid possible embarrassment by premature action in the premises.

"As for the filing of such agreements with the Federal Trade Commission, it would seem desirable only to the extent that the subject matter of such agreements come within the scope of the commission's prerogatives and activities."

Arbitration Law for 10 Years

A federal arbitration law covering controversies coming under its provisions has been in force for 10 years. Arbitration of disputes as provided in the suggested code would have all the effect of law under the arbitration statutes of 14 states: Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Utah, Washington, Wyoming and Georgia. In certain other states, such as Arkansas, Florida, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Montana, Ohio, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, arbitration submissions of commercial disputes are enforceable only when made a rule of the court. In some states, including Indiana, Kansas, Ohio, South Carolina and Washington, the filing of a bond may be necessary to insure performance of the award.

Penalty for failure to comply with the code's provisions could be by expulsion from the trade association, by blacklisting to members of the industry, or by other means. In states having arbitration laws, performance of arbitration board's awards can be secured through court procedure. The courts also could be resorted to to compel members to arbitrate. Legal machinery is provided for appeals to the courts from arbitration awards.

Meanwhile, government control of industry in at least interstate operations is under consideration by officials of the National Recovery Administration, it was learned this week in Washington. Fearing that premature disclosure of their plans might lead to radical changes in methods in the industries to be studied as a basis for control legislation, which would defeat the purpose of bringing out the "evils" of the present competitive situation, officials of the NRA are reluctant to discuss the proposal, which they assert is only in a tentative stage.

Film Trade Among 14 Singled Out

The industries which would be studied are not necessarily the largest in the country, but, rather, those in which it is believed there can be shown evils in competition or in the conditions under which labor is employed. On the basis of the information developed, it is proposed to frame recommendations for legislation which would restore to the Government a measure of the control it exercised prior to the supreme court decision voiding the NRA.

NRA officials are said to be convinced control of industry can be secured only by legislation, and place little confidence in the new provisions of the recovery act authorizing voluntary codes.

"Behaving Itself on the Whole"

On the whole, it was said by Washington officials, the film industry is "behaving itself," but it is believed that if any breaks come in any industries they will occur after the adjournment of Congress when there is assurance that new laws cannot be enacted for several months.

Sales executives of major companies in New York this week revealed that with few exceptions fair trade practice provisions in the standard exhibition contracts as provided in the film code will be continued in 1935-36 contracts. Included are optional arbitration and the 10 per cent cancellation privilege.

A new independent exhibitor organization being formed at Cincinnati to replace the erstwhile Greater Cincinnati Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, recently dissolved, aims to work with the Cincinnati exchanges and the Film Board with a view to obtaining satisfactory adjustment of clearance schedules.

K-M Favors Grievance Board

At Kansas City, the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association, in annual convention, approved the formation of a grievance board of three to clear all complaints filed by members.

Confirmation of the arbitration award directing RKO to pay the Apollo and Hollywood, New York theatres, $45,000 damages and effect policy changes is sought in an application filed in the state supreme court this week by the owners of the two theatres, which are under lease to RKO. This application was to conform with the state arbitration procedure.

Counsel for RKO was to ask the court to vacate the award, and both petitions were scheduled for hearing next Monday. RKO will contend that the award is partly indefinite and partly impossible to fulfill.

Fox won default decisions against five theatres in New York Film Board of Trade arbitration proceedings when the defendants failed to appear.

Following is the complete text of the "Tentative Model Agreement for Self-Government of the A.B.C. Industry":

ARTICLE I—Declaration of Policy

In order to give the agreement an appropriate foundation there should be recited in Article I thereof basic reasons why it is desirable for the members of the A. B. C. Industry to join forces for the realization of objectives which the major portion of the industry believes are desirable.

Such a declaration of policy might read as follows:

"Whereas, the A. B. C. Industry desires to preserve the essential qualities of fair competition within Federal and State laws; to eliminate unfair trade and competitive practices; to maintain fair conditions of employment; to promote the common welfare of industry and labor, and to advance business recovery and expansion, the following agreement is hereby offered to the members of the A. B. C. Industry as the method best adapted to achieve these purposes."

ARTICLE II—Consideration

Since every contract, to be binding, must contain such fundamental requirements as

TEXT OF "MODEL AGREEMENT" PLAN

"Meeting of Minds," "Valuable Consideration," etc., it is highly essential that, in order to make the agreement binding, these requirements be fully observed.

Foremost among such requirements is that of Consideration. Since in the majority of cases the members of an industry will be numerous and scattered throughout the country, it is desirable that individual agreements be prepared for submission to such members of the industry, a list of their names and addresses being attached to the document and made a part thereof.

The consideration necessary to support this contract is supplied (1) by the agreement on the part of the association to administer the agreement and to secure the signatures of other members of the industry, and (2) by the fact that each member becoming a party does so in consideration of the promises of the other parties who join in the agreement.

The document representing the assent of each member might read:

"This agreement is made in consideration of the commitment of the A. B. C. Association to administer the provisions thereof and execute its duties, as herein contained, and to endeavor to secure similar consents from at least . . . other members of the A. B. C. Industry, and in consideration of . . . members of the industry becoming signatories hereto and being bound by the provisions hereof; each subscriber so subscribing upon consideration of the like subscription of the others."

ARTICLE III—Things Agreed To

This article should be divided into two distinct groups, the first headed Labor Provisions, the second Trade Practice Provisions. It is, of course, a vital part of the document and should be prepared with extreme care and thoroughness.

1. Labor Provisions.

These should include provisions for: (a) minimum wages; (b) hours of labor; (c) elimination of child labor. To simplify the agreement, it might be advisable to set forth any particular provisions in a schedule annexed to the agreement.

2. Trade Practice Provisions

Each agreement should contain the proper trade practice standards that the particular industry wishes to observe.

These should include the generally acceptable practices already established within the industry. These might very well include, among others, prohibitions against deceptive advertising and general misrepresentation; commercial bribery; interference with contracts; defamation of competitor; false invoicing, marking or branding; secret rebates and other concessions; coercion.

ARTICLE IV—Administration

The A. B. C. Trade Association should be the administrative agency for carrying out the operation of the agreement.

If the A. B. C. Industry does not have a trade association, it should create one, because agreements are not self-enforcing, nor from their very nature, under present conditions, can the A. B. C. Industry look to governmental authority for the administration of the agreements.

For the A. B. C. Trade Association to undertake this task of administration of the agreement naturally involves the incurring of expenses for which the members of the A. B. C. Industry must assess themselves. Provision for the setting up of a budget of anticipated revenue and expense should be included and equitable ways and means devised for obtaining the necessary funds from the signatories to the agreement.

This article should make provision among others for the following:

1. The payment, by all of the signatories, of their proportionate share of the expense of administering the agreement.

2. Provision that none of the signatories or officers, agents or employees of the association become partners by virtue of the agreement and that no officer or agent of the association acting in good faith be liable for anything other than willful misfeasance or nonfeasance.

3. Provision for the filing and handling of complaints of violation by the association, giving the association power to investigate complaints in the first instance and to adjust them wherever possible. This can be done through the creation of appropriate committees.

4. Other administrative details deemed advisable in any particular industry.

To avoid unfairness resulting from the activities of such members of the industry as do not enter into the voluntary agreement, consideration might be given to temporary suspension of certain provisions to meet such condition.

ARTICLE V—Adjudication

It is suggested that the administration agency have the function of receiving and investigating complaints and of facilitating adjustments through conciliation or mediation. This has long been a function of trade associations and machinery is already provided in many of the by-laws.

While it is true that under "Administration" it is contemplated that, to a very great extent and in the majority of cases, questions arising under the operation of the "Agreement" of the A. B. C. Industry will be dealt with by the Trade Association through its officers or executive committee or appropriate other committees, nevertheless, it is almost certain that from time to time questions and issues will arise which cannot be disposed of through these normal channels.

It is also certain that many disputes will be of such a character that members of the Trade Association cannot justifiably act in the capacity of judges of fellow members of the industry, or that the members of the industry who are involved in the dispute will not consent that they so act.

Provision for violation of any of the standards created by the agreement can take two forms:

(a) A provision that each signatory agrees to pay to the treasurer of the .... Association, certain specific amounts, in trust, for liquidated damages, and not as penalties, upon determination by arbitrators of violation of any of the established standards.

(b) The other method for handling damages for violation of the provisions of the agreement would be to submit the entire question of damages to arbitrators, and authorize the arbitrators to award such sums as they find to be fair, with a limitation that they should not award damages in a sum greater than........ dollars for any particular violation.

To amplify or serve as an alternative to damage provision, a provision may be incorporated whereby each party stipulates and consents that an injunction may be issued against him, in the event of any future violation of the agreement, where the arbitrators specifically find that his violation was willful or intentional.

If it is desired that publicity be given to violations or awards of arbitrators, or to those observing the agreement, or if labels are to be used as measures of enforcement, these provisions should be clearly set forth in the agreement.

The agency for determining facts of the breach of the agreement, where penalties such as the foregoing are to be determined, or whenever a party desires to appeal from the findings of the administrative agency, should, in our judgment, be an independent tribunal, not subject to the administrative agency.

It is suggested that as the American Arbitration Association has facilities in 1,600 cities and standard rules under which all arbitrations, wherever held, are conducted under the same procedure, that it be the agency used for arbitration and that each agreement contain a provision along the lines of the following:

"Any controversy or claim arising under, out of or relating to this contact or the breach thereof, between the...............Association and any of the parties hereto, shall be settled by arbitration in accordance with the rules, then obtaining, of the American Arbitration Association, and judgment upon the award rendered may be entered in the highest court of the forum, having jurisdiction; provided, however, that the executive committee of the association may have a period of 15 days after the filing of the complaint, or demand for arbitration, within which to endeavor to mediate and adjust the controversy or claim. The arbitrators shall not, however, award as damages any sums greater than those provided in this agreement for violation of any specific provision of paragraphs . . . hereof. The arbitrators may, in their discretion, reduce liability for payment of damages where they find that such violation was an innocent or unintentional one, or where it had resulted in no material injury, or where there are other extenuating circumstances."

ARTICLE VI — Adherence — Suspension— Amendment

The agreement should be made operative only after the consent of a given percentage of (a) number of units in the industry, or (b) production capacity or sales volume, has been obtained. Provision should be made as to the method of determining these percentages. When determined, the agreement should become effective upon written notification by the association to each of the signatories stating that such execution and delivery have taken place.

The duration of the agreement should be made for one year or some other period from the date that it is declared effective and may be continued from year to year thereafter, subject to cancellation as of the end of any such year by any signatory (as to such signatory) on giving the association sixty (60) days' notice of such cancellation, in writing, before the end of such year and subject further to cancellation by the association at any time by giving each of the signatories identical written notice of such cancellation.

Provision should be made that the agreement may be executed in counterpart originals, all of which, when taken together, constitute the complete instrument. This will eliminate the difficulty of having all parties sign the same document.

Provision should be made that nothing contained in the agreement be construed or applied to deprive any signatory of any rights or causes of action in his favor against any of the other parties arising out of the provisions of the agreement, but it should be suggested that such claims or controversies should be settled by arbitration.

The agreement may provide that each signatory pay the premium upon and furnish to the treasurer a surety bond in a stated sum to secure the faithful performance of the agreement or make a cash deposit to accomplish the same result.

FOURTH OF STARS FOREIGN-BORN, SAYS MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC

1935 - 36 Edition, Out This Week, Shows Average Age of Leading Players of Box Office Champions Is 34 Years

The international character of the screen of today is reflected in the fact that more than one-fourth of America's ace stars are not Americans—at least not originally.

Twenty-eight per cent of the 96 stars who headed the casts of the Box Office Champions of the past year were born in other lands, from the British West Indies to Dalmatia. Half of the foreign-born players were from English-speaking countries, Great Britain and its possessions. More than 12 per cent of the 96 leading players have appeared in foreign product at one time or another.

Most of the leading stars are well along in years—the average age is 34 years. If life really begins at 40, the men stars are just about ready to start living, for their ages average 39. The women stars are younger, it's true, but at that they're just on the threshold of the thirties, in an averaging of ages that stretch all the way from Shirley Temple's six years to May Robson's seventy.

The 1935-36 issue of 'Motion Picture Almanac', a Quigley publication, out this week, presents a new service for exhibitors as well as motion picture editors of newspapers, in a section of complete Showmen's Reviews of each of the Box Office Champions of a year and a half, the winners by months as well as annual, with casts and credits.

Stories and plays purchased by producing companies in the season begun in September, 1934, are listed in the 1,208 page volume, with identification of authors, companies, and stars tentatively chosen for the productions.

75 Million Weekly Attendance

Weekly attendance at motion picture theatres in the United States approximates 75,000,000. Of the 18,250 motion picture theatres in this country, about 13,500 are in actual operation. There are approximately nine persons to every theatre seat in cities of more than 100,000 population, whereas total seating capacity of all theatres is placed at 11,132,000.

The number of prints required on each feature varies from 50 to 250, the average of simultaneous daily runs per picture is 200, and the average screenings per print are 200 times. Maximum bookings per picture in general are near the 10,000 mark, with a minimum general average of 2,000 bookings.

New Broadcasting Rates

Between 75 and 85 per cent of all adult admissions to motion picture theatres are purchased between 7:30 and 8:30 p.m.

The Almanac this year carries a complete record of the revised rates for broadcasting charges, by station, of both the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Company.

Among the many departments are personnel listings of companies in all phases of the business, titles and other information of all pictures made since the introduction of sound, financial statements, the corporate structure of the industry, theatre circuits and key theatres, screen organizations, deaths of a year, and all-time "best-sellers" of the world scene of the motion picture, legitimate plays, books, and radio programs.

Truce in Union Fight As Pickets Are Arrested

Following a few days of comparative calm, 26 members of Local 306, New York projectionists' union, were arrested during last weekend in Brooklyn and Manhattan. The indication is that Mayor LaGuardia is keeping his promise to prevent disorder among pickets and that efforts looking to arbitration of the difficulties among the three rival units, Allied, Empire and 306 are making little headway. Frank Tichenor, published of the Outlook, appointed by the mayor as conciliator, succeeded, however, in arranging a truce on mass cross-picketing at a meeting with representatives of Empire and Allied. Local 306 did not participate.

The Massachusetts House last week passed a bill prohibiting the granting of temporary or permanent injunctions in labor difficulties until after a finding on the facts has been made by the courts. The bill also exempts labor organizations from responsibility for the acts of its agents unless it can be proved the organization specifically authorized the acts. In its monthly bulletin the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees charges that the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is engaged in a raid on IATSE jurisdiction, sponsoring legislation to monopolize electrical work.

New Studios To Be Built By NBC in Hollywood

Hollywood is about to take its place as a radio center, as well as a movie capital, it was revealed Tuesday with the announcement by Richard C. Patterson, Jr., executive vice-president of National Broadcasting Company, that NBC has completed arrangements for building radio studios there.

NBC has leased the entire building of Consolidated Film Industries' laboratories on Melrose Avenue, and construction of broadcasting studios will be started immediately. They will be ready next fall. The new plant will include four studios.

"The increasing use of radio stars in motion picture productions, and of movie stars in radio, has emphasized the need for more adequate studios in Hollywood," Mr. Patterson said. "Hollywood has become a great reservoir of talent for radio, and we expect that many more programs of national interest will originate in southern California as soon as we have provided proper facilities."

Approves Plan of Fox Metropolitan

Federal Judge Julian W. Mack in New York last week gave final approval and confirmation of the Joseph M. Schenck-Fox Theatres plan of reorganization for Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, despite the plea of counsel for the Sabath Congressional committee, studying reorganizations, to delay his approval until the committee has had time to investigate the Fox Metropolitan plan.

I. Alfred Levy, counsel to the committee, told the court efforts to subpoena Mr. Schenck and A. C. Blumenthal, called "prime movers" in the reorganization, had been unsuccessful despite repeated efforts. The judge refused to grant the delay on the ground that the court already had undertaken an exhaustive study of the plan, and that a new delay might be injurious to the interests of creditors. However, he declared that if any improprieties were shown, he would act accordingly, vetoing any member of the proposed board, as is his right.

The membership of the proposed board is: Mr. Schenck, Herbert B. Swope, William P. Phillips, Samuel S. Allan, Milton C. Weisman and William Rhinelander Stewart. Hearing on final steps in the reorganization is set for this week.

The Fox Metropolitan trustee last week reported a net loss after depreciation, amortization, interest, expenses and other deductions of $410,855 for the period from August 17, 1934, to January 31, 1935.

Elmer C. Rhoden, operating head and president of Fox Midwest Theatres, left for Kansas City this week to attend a meeting of four district managers. He will sign a new five-year contract with National Theatres next week, under which he will be president of Fox Midwest and receive a percentage and salary.

Court Rules Film Cannot Be Impounded Without Bond

Warner won an important and significant point in a copyright infringement action last week when the United States circuit court of appeals in San Francisco reversed a decision of the lower court, and ruled the court could not impound a film unless the plaintiff posts a bond adequate to pay the defendant in case he should win the case.

The decision came as the result of an appeal by Warner in an action brought by M. P. Echevarria, who charged that Warner used his story, "Milias Pilia," as the basis for an old silent film, "Across the Pacific," starring Monte Blue.

Nathan Liggett Dies

Nathan Liggett, father of Sam Liggett, head of the non-theatrical department of Columbia, and of Jules Liggett of Universal, died last week in New York.

CHASE BANK HOLDS AN INTEREST IN 207 MOTION PICTURE CONCERNS

47 Are Subsidiaries of Fox Film, Others Units of National Theatres Corp., Operating Fox Theatres, Commission Told

Chase National Bank's considerable interest in the motion picture industry, as represented in Fox Film Corporation, affiliates and subsidiaries, and elsewhere, and made public this week by the bank, includes in this country 207 companies—functioning as holding, producing and distributing organizations, as well as theatre operating, real estate and investment groups. Subsidiaries, chiefly distribution, are also located in 30 foreign countries.

Of the total, 47 are subsidiaries of Fox Film and the others subsidiary to National Theatres Corporation, recently organized in New Jersey to take over operations of all Fox theatre properties. The report shows for the first time that the company's theatre holdings in Australia also are now controlled by National Theatres.

Chase National reveals that it controls a majority of the outstanding "new" voting stock of Fox Film Corporation, and that it jointly owns with Fox Film the stock of National Theatres Corporation, controlling 338 theatres. The division of ownership in National Theatres is 58 per cent under Chase National control and 42 per cent Fox Film.

Publication of the report by Chase National is to comply with requirements of the National Banking Act of 1933, which directs national banks to publish details of their affiliates. The report, which is as of March 30, 1935, and concerns itself only with the bank's Fox Film affiliation, was published this week in New York financial newspapers.

Fox Film reported to the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington last May that the Chase National Bank was the holder of 1,549,507 shares of its Class A common stock as of March 9, representing 72.30 per cent of this group, while 86.18 per cent of Class B, represented by voting trust certificates, is held by General Theatres Equipment, Inc., controlled by Chase National.

The Fox Film subsidiaries listed in the Chase report, other than theatre holdings, are for foreign distribution and production and newsreels, and for real estate in New York and California. All of the Fox theatre operations have been grouped under National Theatres Corporation of New Jersey since Fox West Coast was lifted out of bankruptcy, and in this collection of subsidiaries holding and operating theatres in the Middlewest and on the West Coast are 158 companies, of which 19 are inactive and one in process of formation.

One of the principal holding companies of National Theatres is National Holding Corporation of Jersey City, which controls stocks and obligations of underlying companies. Fox Midcontinent Corporation, another holding subsidiary, controls the former Fox Rocky Mountain Theatres, now emerging from bankruptcy at Kansas City, while Fox West Coast Service Corporation is a holding and operating unit with headquarters at Los Angeles.

NAMES TABULATED ON PAGE 35

Here, and in the tabulation starting on page 35, is explained in detail the worldwide corporate structure of Fox Film Corporation, as revealed by the Chase National Bank of New York in compliance with the requirements of the National Banking Act. Revealed is Chase National's interest in Fox Film and National Theatres Corporation, as well as details of the holding companies, operating companies and subsidiaries—in the United States, Canada and abroad.

Two realty companies directly subsidiary to National Theatres are Fox Philadelphia Building, Inc., of Jersey City, operating the Philadelphia theatre and office building, and Foxwis Realty Corporation of Jersey City, which owns real estate in Wisconsin.

Seventy-two individual theatre companies are operated out of Los Angeles, with 22 other groups which lease theatres and mercantile buildings, six of them owning mercantile buildings and theatres and subleasing them. In process of formation is Orange County Theatres Corporation of Los Angeles.

There are three newsreel subsidiaries: Movietone News, Inc., British Movietonews, Inc., and Fox Movietone, Ltd., of Australia; four realty subsidiaries, Fox Realty Corporation of California, Fox Film Realty Corporation of New York, Dundas Holding Corporation, Ltd. (Canada), and Phillips Square Holding Corporation, Ltd., New York; one copyright subsidiary, Movietone Music Corporation; one story purchasing subsidiary, Rural Pictures Corporation, and one laboratory subsidiary, DeLuxe Laboratories, Inc., New York.

Because of state law requirements there are two United States distributing subsidiaries, Fox Film Corporation of Texas and Fox Film Distributing Corporation of New Orleans.

Foreign distribution is controlled through a holding corporation, United American Investment Corporation, and also through Fox Film Export Corporation of New York. These, in turn, operate through subsidiaries in England, France, Canada, and Argentina, Australia, Austria, Brazil, Chile, China (Shanghai), Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Greece, Holland, Hungary, India, Italy, Jugoslavia, Latvia, Mexico, Norway, Panama, Poland, Rumania, Spain, Sweden, Singapore (Straits Settlements) and Japan. Fox has two companies in England and a production company in France.

The Australian concerns now under National Theatres Corporation include eight holding companies, six theatre operating companies and three inactive concerns.

Plane Crash Kills Stumar and Wylie

Charles Stumar, Jr., ace cameraman, and Harrison Wylie, art director, both of Universal's Coast studio, were killed instantly last week when an airplane, owned and piloted by Mr. Stumar, crashed in Triunfo Canyon, 30 miles north of Hollywood.

Officials of Universal said the men were inspecting the area as "location" for a planned feature. Mr. Stumar was 44 and Mr. Wylie 40. Both were wellknown in Hollywood production circles, and were married.

Preliminary investigation indicated that the cabin-type plane had encountered mechanical difficulty. Apparently an attempt was made to land under unfavorable ground conditions. The torn condition of the earth showed where the plane skidded after its landing gear was torn off in the first shock. The plane smashed against a tree and was demolished, according to the report of deputies who went to the scene after the report of a rancher that he had seen the plane fall.

Exceptions Filed on Five RKO Claims

Exceptions were filed Tuesday in New York to the allowance of five claims against RKO aggregating approximately $9,400,000 and a hearing of the exceptions was set for August 2 before Federal Judge William Bondy.

The claims to which exceptions are taken are those of Rockefeller Center for $8,270,000; Karl Hoblitzelle Enterprises, $888,666; Broadway and 47th Street Corporation (Mayfair), $337,500; Criterion Advertising Company and Fort Worth Properties. These claims, together with numerous others, were recommended for allowance two weeks ago by Special Master Thomas D. Thacher. The exceptions to Judge Thacher's report were filed in federal court by Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard, counsel to Irving Trust Company, trustee of RKO.

New York Critics on Air

Leading newspaper critics of the motion picture in New York will be guest speakers on behalf of the Music Hall theatre during a series of radio broadcasts this summer. Starting Sunday, and continuing every Sunday thereafter through July and August, one of the following will speak: William Boehnel, World-Telegram; Kate Cameron, Daily News; Andre Sennwald, Times; Bland Johaneson, Daily Mirror; Thornton Delehanty, Post; Regina Crewe, American; Rose Pelswick, Journal.

DERR OUT IN OPEN IN PATHE FIGHT

Joins Casey in Minority Stockholders' Action Against Young-Kolbe Voting Trust Interests

E. B. Derr came out in the open this week to join Pat Casey in a joint minority stockholders' fight against the manner in which the Young and Kolbe voting trust interests are conducting the affairs of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Mr. Derr, who previously had been charged by the defendant interests with being the unnamed sponsor of Mr. Casey's supreme court suit for an accounting, abruptly entered the controversy on his own on Monday morning when he filed an application for a mandamus order to compel Pathe's management to permit him to examine the corporation's books.

Although the relief sought independently in court by Mr. Casey and Mr. Derr differs in the technicalities of the titles of the applications, both basically charge "gross negligence" on the part of the present Pathe officers.

The legal battle will be resumed next Tuesday in New York County supreme court, when Mr. Derr will be heard on his mandamus application.

Martin E. King, New York, personal attorney for Pat Casey since 1925, who last month filed Mr. Casey's petition for an accounting, said Wednesday that although both plaintiffs are acting technically as individual minority stockholders they are actually proceeding in combination.

Mr. King's admission that the plaintiffs are together in the fight was the first official verification of the opinion of Broadway and Wall Street. He is counsel for both plaintiffs.

Mr. Casey's action still is pending. The defendants had been given 20 days within which to answer charges of "wrongful acts" in office. The answers already filed are understood to enter general denials.

Will Suggest Actions Be Joined

When the issues come out into the open courtroom, both Mr. Derr and Mr. Casey will be charged by the defendants with "acting in bad faith for the purpose of annoying the management and its officers," according to a spokesman for the legal affiliates of the company.

Further, the defendant will suggest that the actions be joined.

From interests close to the Pathe management it was learned this week that those in control of the company believe both Mr. Derr and Mr. Casey are in reality acting for a third person, whose identity they are anxious to ascertain. Mr. Derr, it was said, had sent a telegraphic offer to purchase Pathe some weeks ago, and they do not believe he was submitting the offer on his own account.

It is to be recalled that both Mr. Casey and Mr. Derr have these many years maintained a close friendship and association with J. J. Murdock, now retired and living in Hollywood. Mr. Casey was connected with the theatrical and vaudeville interests of Mr. Murdock and his associates in the heydays of UBO and the Keith-Albee-Orpheum organization, and also through Mr. Murdock's subsequent motion picture connections leading up to the P.D.C.-Pathe merger and its sequels. Mr. Murdock is credited with having taken a large fortune with him in his retirement.

Motion for appointment of a temporary receiver pending a trial on the issues had been filed originally, last month, by Mr. Casey, but he suddenly switched the procedure, withdrew the receivership application and substituted a demand for an early trial of a suit for an accounting.

Judge Dore has not yet ruled on Mr. Casey's plea to give the accounting action preferred position on the calendar.

Followed Young's Answer

Mr. Casey decided on the new course, foregoing the demand for receivers, after reading "revelations" of Pathe's financial condition set forth in an answer made by the defendant, Robert Young, to his original receivership motion.

Mr. Casey was accused in the Young answer of acting for Mr. Derr, a friend and associate of Mr. Casey and onetime major executive in the motion picture affairs of Joseph P. Kennedy in FBO, Pathe Exchange and for a brief time in First National.

Mr. Derr, said the Young answer, is a "former employee of the company who is hostile to the company . . . and who, furthermore, has anything but the best interests of the corporation at heart." Moreover, added Mr. Young, "Mr. Derr had the audacity to ask that the management of the company be turned over to him."

Pathe Deficit Reduced

Meanwhile it was reported this week that Pathe Exchange, Inc., and subsidiary companies had reduced the accumulated deficit by $16,120.51 in the 13 weeks ending March 30, 1935, leaving the total at $6,399,820.65. The deficit balance on December 29 last was $6,415,941.16.

The reduction is represented by profits of an equal amount for the quarter, as compared with a profit in 1934 for the same period of $31,725. The profit was carried to the deficit account.

The consolidated statement for the quarter shows net sales for the film developing and printing laboratory of $163,459.64, with a net profit of $12,699.28. Dividends of $49,000 received from DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation accounted for most of the non-operating income totaling $56,646.06. Operating expenses of the laboratory during the quarter were $146,270.68. There was a loss in excess of $3,000 in other operations.

Payments in interest on the funded debt and premiums on bonds redeemed totaled $35,086.33. The deficit included a provision of $135,000 for possible losses on loans and advances. Earnings of DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation for the first quarter of 1935 applicable to the company's interest therein were in excess of dividends paid.

Eugene A. Lauste, Film Pioneer, Dies

Eugene Augustin Lauste, 78 years old, a stormy petrel of early motion picture patent controversies, died at the Community hospital in Montclair, New Jersey, June 27.

Mr. Lauste was for some years employed at the West Orange works of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., beginning his service in the phonograph department. He established a contact with William Kennedy Laurie Dickson, variously employed in the Edison laboratories and finally assigned to the execution of Mr. Edison's designs for a motion picture machine. When Mr. Dickson, toward the end of his Edison association, turned his attention to parallel effort in the Latham shop at 35 Frankfort street in New York, he placed Mr. Lauste in the employ of the Lathams. When Dickson left the Lathams before the consummation of their project and went to the K.M.D.C. Syndicate, which became the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company, he took Mr. Lauste with him. Early in the Edison-Biograph controversy leading up to a final peace and formation of the Motion Picture Patents Company, Mr. Dickson went abroad and took Mr. Lauste with him. Mr. Lauste was often on the witness stand in behalf of employers and other persons seeking to invalidate Edison patents and claims.

The Latham loop device, famous in motion picture history, and sometimes claimed as Mr. Lauste's invention, was found to have been first applied to the projector by Thomas Armat of Washington, D. C., and to the camera by Enoch J. Rector, a relative and associate of the Latham brothers, Otway and Grey, who had brought Mr. Dickson transiently into their service.

While abroad Mr. Lauste became interested in the application of the principles of sound recording by photography first set forth by Charles Edgar Fritts, a method involving the photo-electric properties of the selenium cell. His endeavors failed of a reduction to practice by reason of the lack of amplification, upon which all of the sound picture art waited.

Mr. Lauste was eventually employed by the Bell Laboratories in New York. His priorities in sound picture endeavors will stand on surer ground than his earlier labors on the silent picture.

Mr. Lauste is survived by his widow, Mrs. Melaine Lauste, a son, Emile, and two stepsons, Clement and Harry E. LeRoy of Bloomfield, N. J. —T. R.

Missouri Police Collect on "March of Time" Charges

The Remington-Rand dramatization on the air by "March of Time" of election day disorders in Kansas City, Mo., last year, cost some one $20,000, Chief of Police Robert J. Coffey of that city having collected that amount on alleged libel grounds growing out of the "March of Time" statement during the broadcast that 25 members of the Kansas City police department "have criminal records and the acting chief had served a term in the penitentiary."

The suit had been filed by Mr. Coffey against Remington-Rand, Columbia Broadcasting and Midland Broadcasting, and damages of $500,000 had been asked.

LAST MINUTE Flashes

"THE CRUSADES"

will be withdrawn from release in August and given long runs in such major cities as New York, Chicago and Los Angeles in order to build it up for general release.

TITLE CHANGE

The title "Pleasure Beach" will be changed to "CORONADO".

PICTURE CHANGES

In order to take advantage of the current craze for amateur hours, the picture, "AMATEUR HOURS", with Ida Lupino, Ray Milland, Benny Baker, George Barbier and Willie Howard, will be released in October instead of "Phantom Bus".

In the same month, "ROUGH ON DAMES", with Carl Brisson and Lyda Roberti, will be released instead of "The Imperfect Husband", which will come in the second quarter.

PICTURE ADDED

It will probably be possible to include another picture in October release schedule. This will be SYLVIA SIDNEY in "LET'S GET MARRIED".

CHASE IN 207 PICTURE COMPANIES

The extent of the worldwide motion picture holdings of the Chase National Bank of the City of New York—one of the world's largest financial institutions—was revealed in detail this week for the first time in advertisements inserted by the bank in financial newspapers in compliance with the requirements of the United States Banking Act of 1933 compelling the publication of reports of all affiliates of a national bank.

Previously, Chase had reported to the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission ownership of 72 per cent of the Class A stock of Fox Film Corporation and General Theatres Equipment Corporation, Chase controlled, as owner of 86 per cent of the Fox Film Class B stock.

Now it is revealed that Chase, through the Fox ownership, controls or has substantial interests in some 207 motion picture producing, distributing and exhibiting corporations throughout the world, many of these, of course, being Fox Film subsidiaries or theatre subsidiaries of National Theatres Corporation.

Reports as of March 30th, 1935, of the companies listed below which under the terms of the Banking Act are declared to be affiliated with Chase, embrace only Chase's motion picture and theatre holdings. The bank has millions invested in numerous other industries. Reports of these affiliates are to be made separately by the bank. The Chase motion picture holdings:

China Seas

Irving Thalberg production for Metro release. Directed by Tay Garnett. Supervised by Al Lewin. Screen play by Jules Furthman and James K. McGuinness from the novel by Grosbie Garstin. Photographed by Ray June. Cast: Wallace Beery, Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Lewis Stone, Rosalind Russell, C. Aubrey Smith, Dudley Digges, William Henry, Eddie Brophy, Lillian Bond, Ivan Lebedeff, Akim Tamiroff, Robert Benchley, Live de Maigret, Pat Flaherty, Charles Irwin. Previewed at the Fox, San Bernardino, June 23. Running time, 93 mins.

Here's a holiday in Dixie for theatre operators. Few pictures come along that will stand the limit in exploitation then live up to the bally. 'China Seas' not only lends itself to exploitation, but is crammed with selling angles. It should pay the interest on many a theatre's mortgage.

Ably produced by Irving Thalberg and supervised by Al Lewin, have stinted nothing to make it top notch entertainment. Picture is eyefilling from start to finish. Jules Furthman and James McGuinness have compiled a yarn of piracy on the China coast that is almost perfect picture material. Tay Garnett's robust direction of the story gives the fans all they want in the line of romance, thrills and s.a. To top this, the Beery-Gable-Harlow trio contribute performances that are standouts.

Gable is the skipper of a tramp in the China coast trade. He is mixed up with Jean Harlow, the Orient's number one trollop. Beery heads a gang of Chinese pirates. Gable sails for Singapore with the three on board plus Rosalind Russell, his old sweetheart in England. The two girls fail to hit it off when Miss Harlow decides she is getting the air for the English girl. Boat is carrying several million pounds in bullion which Gable is out to get.

Typhoon comes up, almost sinks the ship. With better weather, Beery enlists the aid of the jealous Harlow to steal the guns from the ship's arsenal. Pirates headed by Ivan Lebedeff board the ship, kill half the crew, torture Gable but find no money. Gable suspects Beery and the girl, questions them and she spills the beans. However, she had tried to warn Gable of the impending holdup only to be thrown out of his cabin. Before much can be done Beery committs suicide and Gable realizes he loves Miss Harlow after all. In the end he decided to make her an honest woman.

With a good story to start with Garnett has given the picture everything. He has not missed a single opportunity in giving the picture suspense, dramatic tension and smoothness. Dialog is near perfect for this type of picture. It's no easy job to make a flock of renegades tough through dialog. In most cases, screen tough guys express themselves like pansies. In this case they're tough and there's no mistake.

Gable, Harlow and Beery turn in performances that should bring raves from their fans. Rosalind Russell makes her portrayal of the cultured English girl, a direct contrast to Miss Harlow, one of the picture's standouts. Robert Benchley, as a drunk, gets a load of laughs with swell dialog. William Henry, the juve, is pleasing as a young officer though his scenes during the typhoon could be cut considerably. C. Aubrey Smith is excellent as the owner of the steamship line. Dudley Digges, as the chief officer, handles his assignment neatly. Lewis Stone, though his assignment is small, makes count. Lillian Bond, Eddie Bror and Akim Tamiroff, in small assignments are very good. Charles Irwin and Pat Flaherty as officers on the ship also keep up the standard of good performances.

Ray June's photography is class throughout. Art direction, particularly the scenes of the Hong Kong docks, is excellent.

MGM'S 'ANNA KARENINA' TRIUMPHS; AN OUTSTANDING FILM ACHIEVEMENT

It Is Garbo's Best Picture and Brown's Supreme Directorial Effort; Production A Stand-out

"ANNA KARENINA"

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Producer	David O. Selznick
Direction	Clarence Brown
Original Story	Leo Tolstoy
Screen Play	Clemence Dane and Salka Viertel
Dialogue Adaptation	S. N. Behrman
Photography	William Daniels

Cast: Greta Garbo, Fredric March, Freddie Bartholomew, Maureen O'Sullivan, May Robson, Basil Rathbone, Reginald Owen, Phoebe Foster, Reginald Denny, Gyles Isham, Joan Marsh, Ethel Griffies, Harry Beresford, Sarah Padden, Cora Sue Collins, Mary Forbes, Guy D'Emery, Buster Phelps, Sidney Bracy, Harry Allen, Ella Ethridge.

A glorious, vital Garbo . . . A Garbo who is not only allure personified but with a new grace and charm, a vivacity that will send her fan following soaring to new heights. It's a classic love story told magnificently pictorially, that is thrilling in its production qualities, that is a triumph for Clarence Brown and that has a glorious music score by Herbert Stothart.

Perhaps this is still further argument for re-makes. At any rate, it is proof that practice makes perfect, and this well known story lives once more on the screen and is faithful to the tragedy of unhallowed love. Anna dies once more in her tragic flight to love from a cold, cruel husband. A love for which she gives up her child and a love which must eventually desert her.

Garbo's pedestal is not only restored, but is made to look unbreakable in this picture. Her moods are varied and sincere. There is a minimum of close-ups devoted solely to her beauty. She is a woman to love and to be loved. Frederic March, as the lover, is necessarily over-shadowed by both the character and portrayal of Garbo, but his work is good and there's plenty of reason to believe that a woman would leave home for him.

Freddie Bartholomew snatches scenes away from people before they know it. He is a remarkable actor and literally stops the picture twice with his genius. Basil Rathbone is magnificently irritating as the convention-bound, petty government official who is the husband of Anna. Reginald Owen, Maureen O'Sullivan, Phoebe Foster, Reginald Denny and Gyles Isham, score in their parts, and the others in the large cast give generously to make that cast good.

Clarence Brown, definitely, should always direct Garbo. He seems to be the one who can bring out all the facets in the brilliantly fashioned Garbo, and he has an especial talent for making the familiar bright and new.

A very special bow must go to Adrian for his costuming. It's an awkward era to which he brings grace, and Garbo has never looked lovelier. And another very special bow to Daniels for his photography. Particularly for the train scenes. And still another bow to Herbert Stothart for the music.

No offense to the writers for putting them last . . . the others so seldom get a break. Their work is good . . . it's sincere . . . and beards do not grow on their words. Not to forget the Chester Hale Mazurka and the Wallman ballets.

From a production standpoint, even MGM has rarely if ever achieved such a triumph. Cedric Gibbons and his competent staff of art directors have simply outdone themselves with the sets and their dressings—never gaudy, but always luxurious. It is one of the finest jobs we have seen for many a day.

"Karenina" is destined to be a terrific money maker. It will renew that big box-office interest in Garbo, will send early patrons out talking and bringing to the theater others who have, for too long, been sitting at home.

Showmen should and must get behind this attraction, build it for one of their greatest openings. The rest will take care of itself.

Publishers Deny Radio News Monopoly

The American Newspaper Publishers' Association last week issued a denial that it operates a monopoly in violation of the anti-trust laws in its arrangements with wire news services and radio broadcasting chains, in the $1,170,000 suit brought against it by Transradio Press Service and Radio News Association.

In the answer, filed in behalf of the ANPA and E. H. Harris, chairman of the Publishers' National Radio Committee, it is charged that the plaintiffs' business "though carried on in the guise of and under the representations that they furnished a bona fide news service, is the promotion of advertising programs based more or less upon and comingled with news." No date for the trial has been set.

RKO Has Only Two Houses With Stage Bills in City

RKO has only two weeks' playing time for vaudeville in New York with the elimination of the stage acts at the Coliseum this week. The Palace on Broadway and the Tilyou in Coney Island are continuing vaudeville during the summer. The Coliseum will play single bills the last half of the week and duals the first three days.

Sol Schwartz, manager of the Fordham, has been transferred to the Albee, Brooklyn, Irwin Gould, assistant, is the new manager of the Fordham. George Baldwin, formerly assistant manager at the Palace, has been transferred to the management of the Midtown.

Annie Berlein, One of Stage's Oldest, Dies

Mrs. Annie Mack Berlein, who had played opposite Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle," and as leading woman for the great Edwin Booth, died recently at the Home for Incurables, New York, at the age of 85. One of the oldest actresses on the American stage, Mrs. Berlein was born in Ireland, came to this country at the age of 13 and a year later made her stage debut. She had been actively engaged in the theatre, sometimes as a producer, until her retirement a few years ago. She was married to Edward J. Mack in 1868. He died in 1918, a few years after their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Censor Deletes Only Nine

The Massachusetts censor made cuts in only nine of 166 films submitted from May 20 to June 15. The cuts were made by Commissioner Paul G. Kirk, of the Department of Public Safety.

"PREHEAR" TESTS TENOR'S VOICE

An unusual test, aptly called a "prehear," was used by Jesse L. Lasky, producer for Fox, last week on the Coast. At the Westwood Village theatre the amplifiers projected the voice of Nino Martini, Metropolitan Opera tenor, while the screen remained blank. Mr. Lasky used the idea as a means of testing audience reaction to the voice of Martini, making his screen debut in "Here's to Romance." The audience is said to have listened quietly, then responded with applause as the singer completed an aria from "La Tosca."

Historical Series from Films To Be Continued

"Unreeling History," prepared by John C. Moffitt, motion picture critic of the Kansas City Star, and published in the 12 Sunday issues of that newspaper ending June 16, has received such favorable comment and response from the public that it is to be continued for another period.

A second "volume" will depict the history of the world from the Fall of Rome to the discovery of America through the medium of photos taken from productions. It will run until September, according to Mr. Moffitt. The first series covered the history of the world from the beginnings of time to the Fall of Rome.

Wisconsin Shows Gain In Employment Figures

The Wisconsin Industrial Commission has reported that the number of employed workers in Milwaukee is at its highest level in several years and that the relief load is becoming lighter, which is expected to react at theatre box offices. The construction of two new theatres and the remodeling of a number of neighborhood houses also reflects better conditions.

In Milwaukee the commission reports April employment in manufacturing industries at 93.1 per cent of normal, taking the 1925-1927 base of 100. This compared with an index position of 97 in the corresponding month of 1929.

RKO, Warner Drop Pool

The pooling arrangement between Warner and RKO in Los Angeles and Hollywood has been dropped following one year of operation. Involved were the Downtown and Hollywood, Warner, and the Hillstreet, RKO.

Signal Corps Seeks Funds to Save War Films

Application for $37,000 to enable the Signal Corps to rehabilitate its World War films was filed with the Division of Applications and Information of the works program in Washington this week by the Quartermaster General of the Army. These films, made more than 17 years ago, are deteriorating rapidly, and extensive loss is feared if they cannot be cared for immediately. Efforts a year ago to secure funds from Congress for the purpose were unsuccessful, and the department since has been attempting to determine whether there was not some fund from which the money could be taken.

It is planned to classify all of the film, eliminate duplications, and prepare a permanent library of that which is to be kept. The application of the department also disclosed that it is planned to construct theatres at a number of Army posts now without such facilities, $60,000 being sought for a theatre at the Presidio, Monterey, Cal., and $30,000 each for theatres at Fort Baker, Cal., and Chilkoot Barracks, Alaska.

Italy Eases Import Totals, Holds Fees

The Italian government has determined to continue dubbing fees of 25,000 lire on imported films, it is reported in Rome. All dubbing must be done in Italy, as before, and a censorship tax has been levied on all imported films. Formerly this tax was included in the dubbing fee. Following animated discussions, it was decided to divide the year into quarters and to permit importation of the same number of films each quarter as were previously permitted during the entire year of 1934.

Author Foresees Stage as Vassal of the Motion Picture

Lillian Hellman, author of the play, "The Children's Hour," extremely successful on Broadway, foresees the stage as in complete vassalage to the motion picture within five years, in an opinion expressed on her return to New York from Hollywood. The condition, she predicts, will come because of the backing of the stage by the motion picture.

"Broadway will become merely a tryout ground for Hollywood," she explained. "Picture people are very able, but they are the most timid people on earth. They have to be. They are trying to please, not a certain segment of the population, but are literally trying to please everybody," she said.

Censor Revenue Up

Virginia state censorship fees for the year have shown a gain over the previous year, according to Edward S. Reid, director, at Richmond. The total of films has increased, he reported, and the quality has improved. Receipts are expected to exceed $15,000, compared to a usual $10,000 to $12,000. One feature and two shorts were the only films completely rejected in the past six months.

THE LAW ON LIBELLING THE DEAD

Dead Man Has Quite as Much Protection at Law as Live One In Many Areas, Says Hess Digest

Discussions in both the American and foreign press, and the plans of various motion picture producers with respect to biographical and historical material for the screen, have resulted in the preparation of a significant digest of the law on "libeling the dead in motion picture photoplays," by Gabriel L. Hess, of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., this week made available to the industry.

Those portions of Mr. Hess' survey which reveal the large array of special state laws for the protection of the repute of the dead will be found to be of surprising import, especially among the many who have long heard the old newspaper office slogan that "it's impossible to libel the dead." It seems now that in many regions it is highly possible—that in fact the dead man has quite as much protection at law as the live one.

Mr. Hess' document follows:

In respect of the production of biographical motion pictures, three problems may confront the producer:

1. Civil liability to the family or descendants.
2. Criminal responsibility.
3. Censorship.

1. Civil liability to the family or descendants.

In the absence of a special statute, there is no civil liability for damages, in jurisdictions where the common law is in effect, in respect of a libel upon a deceased person. Defamation is a personal tort and like other personal torts did not survive, at common law, either the offender or the person defamed. The action was personal only to the injured party. In fact, if the person, defamed while alive, died before he reduced his cause of action to judgment, the cause of action did not survive.

Sorenson v. Balaban, 11 App. Div. 164, 42 N. Y. Supp. 654.

According to an article entitled "Nothing But Good of the Dead?" by Walter P. Armstrong, Esq., in volume 18 of the American Bar Association Journal for April, 1932 (page 229), there is a civil statute in Texas which is unique in allowing a recovery in a civil action for the libel of the dead. It is contained in the definition of libel which is published in S. 5430 of the 1928 Complete Statutes of Texas (Vernon 1928) and reads as follows: "A libel is a defamation expressed in printing or writing, or by scenes and pictures, or drawings tending to blacken the memory of the dead . . ."

Under the above statute a Texas jury awarded a verdict of $25,000 to a Mrs. Temple Houston against Liberty Magazine for a libel imputing Indian ancestry and wildness to her deceased husband. The case was settled pending an appeal, as were four other libel suits based upon the same publication brought by the children of Temple Houston.

The above statute does not declare to whom the cause of action is given and evidently no really adequate test has been made of its validity. It appears to be unique in the United States.

The editor discusses an English case wherein a libel of the deceased Gladstone was indirectly involved. A Captain Peter Wright cast a reflection upon the sex practices of the deceased Prime Minister in a biographical article. A son of Gladstone charged Wright with being a liar and a coward, and Wright, thus challenged, brought a libel action against the son. The jury not only found for Gladstone's son, but declared a complete vindication of the moral character of the deceased Gladstone.

It is apparent that the Gladstone case involves a different question, but according to Mr. Armstrong it served to provoke spirited discussion in England as to whether the law should be amended by statute so as to give a civil action for libel of the dead. Had there been such an action, it is very probable that the jury would have awarded damages to Gladstone's son if a suit had been brought against Wright.

Mr. Armstrong also refers to a French case in which the granddaughter of George Sand was denied damages against Jacques Boulenger and l'Opinion for publishing an alleged libel concerning her grandmother and her lovers. He states that the Paris Court of the First Chamber declined to award damages because Boulenger had not abused his prerogatives as a critic and biographer. (Opinion of Tribunal Civil de la Seine, 1 re ch., Audience due 29 juin, 1928.)

The above case would seem to indicate that the French laws permit an action to descendants for libeling a deceased ancestor, but that in this particular case, the libel was not sufficiently proved.

2. Criminal responsibility.

(a) At Common Law.

At common law, the writing and publication of defamatory words concerning any deceased person was a misdemeanor provided that it was done with intent to bring contempt and scandal upon his family and relations and so provoke them to a breach of the peace. The underlying basis of the crime was the possibility of provocation of the descendants to revenge and thus to breach of the peace.

The following notations will indicate the criminal basis of libel of a deceased person at common law:

The libel must be published "with intent to bring contempt and scandal on his family and relations, and so provoke them to a breach of the peace." Odgers, supra, p. 369.

The libel is a criminal offense "provided it is published with the malevolent purpose to injure his family and posterity and to expose them to contempt and disgrace; for the chief reason for punishing offenses of this nature is their tendency to a breach of the peace. . . . The malicious intention of the defendant to injure the family and posterity of the deceased must be expressly averred and clearly proved." Newell, supra, p. 931.

To the same general effect: Frazer, supra, p. 318; Gatley, supra, p. 11.

(b) By Statutory Enactment.

Most states have statutory penal laws which have superseded common law crimes. Under the definitions in most of these states' statutes, it would be easier to convict a person for libeling the dead than under the common law definition. Most of these statutes do not appear to have any qualification concerning the intent or effect of the publication of this libel such as is required at common law.

Mr. Armstrong states that twenty-three states have statutes making libel of the dead a crime. Most of these statutes do not require as an element of the crime a tendency to cause a breach of the peace. He cites a case in the state of Washington sustaining the conviction of a newspaper publisher because of a libel of George Washington, State v. Haffer, 94 Wash. 136.

A list of the various state statutes, compiled by Mr. Armstrong, is annexed hereto.

3. Censorship.

Regardless of whether a libel of a deceased person is a crime, or gives the descendants a cause of action for civil damages, the matter of whether the motion picture may be censored on account of any treatment of a deceased person would depend on the powers conferred on the respective censors by the statute of a particular state. For example, Section 1082 of the Education Law of the State of New York conferring power on the director of the Motion Picture Division to license motion picture films for exhibition in the state, limits the power of censorship to those parts of a motion picture film which are "obscene, indecent, immoral, inhuman, sacrilegious, or are of such a character that its exhibition would tend to corrupt morals or incite to crime."

A defamation of a deceased person would not per se come within such censorial limitation.

England does not appear to have any specified law providing for motion picture censorship. Censorship in England is voluntary. The Cinematograph Act of 1909 provides for the exhibition of motion picture films in properly licensed premises, the licensing of such premises being placed in the hands of the local County Councils. It would seem possible for these County Councils to exercise some species of censorship in controlling the licensing of theatres. The Cinematographic Films Act of 1927 relates to Blind Buying and Quotas and does not appear to touch the matter of censorship.

Section 14 of The Theatres Act of 1843 empowers the Lord Chamberlain to forbid any play or part thereof or prologue or epilogue anywhere in Great Britain absolutely or for such time as he sees fit when he is of the opinion that it is fitting for the preservation of good manners, decorum, or of the public peace, so to do.

It is practically impossible to lay down any general legal rule concerning the powers of censors in a matter of this type.

New York Starts Collections Of Sales Tax on Rentals

The city of New York on Wednesday moved to collect the municipal sales tax from local exchanges, when Universal received notice of assessment of two per cent on its exchange's gross film rentals during the four months ending March 31. The notice was the first received by any local distributor, and others will be sent as soon as audits of rental receipts are completed.

A court test will be attempted by the legal committee of the MPPDA, if conferences with Frank J. Taylor, city controller, bring no results. The committee contends the films are leased, not sold, and hence not subject to a sales tax.

Leake Joins Law Firm

Eugene W. Leake, former trustee in bankruptcy and reorganization for Paramount and prominently identified with film and financial interests, has been made a member of the law firm of Beekman, Bogue, Leake, Stephens and Black in New York. The firm was counsel for bank creditors in the Paramount reorganization and represents the bondholders' protective committee of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Hollywood, called the great leveller, among other things, grades great and near great, in a common denominator.

Kenyon Nicholson, playwright of note, onetime professor of the drama at Columbia University, impressed with the levelling process, tells one on himself when he joined the writing staff at Fox Films' studio in California.

He had done his first script and awaited the verdict from the front office in his cubbyhole.

Soon, a young man, sent over by his chief, entered with instructions to "Tell Nicholson what's wrong with his script."

The young man so commissioned entered Nicholson's two-by-four fully prepared to lay down the law of writing. Both were dumbfounded when they met. The young man was Leonard Spigelgass, former humble pupil of Professor Nicholson at Columbia University.

Another case concerns Sam Harris, New York stage producer, who, meeting Harold Franklin at a Hollywood eating place, exchanged greetings with him like a lost brother.

After Harris had departed, Franklin said he started in the show business as Harris' office boy.

A freak experiment to determine whether a movie racetrack scene would have any effect on a horse wrecked part of a London theatre the other afternoon.

The horse, according to the press cable, was taken to a private showing of the film and watched calmly enough while earlier parts of the picture were screened.

Once the pictured race got under way, however, the hunter mare pricked up her ears, whinnied shrilly, and started a wild rampage, dragging her groom, Willie Rennie, with her. Twenty seats and boxes were smashed before they quieted her.

From Saybrook, Ill., comes the report that a great Linn tree under which RCA's General James G. Harbord played as a boy rivals the thermometer in telling how cold it is. At zero a certain limb on the tree sags enough to brush off a man's hat; at 10 below it hits him in the face; when the temperature is above freezing the limb is 12 to 15 feet from the ground. General Harbord chuckles and wonders whether the tree's accuracy isn't "just a little shady."

HONKY-TONK burlesque of a sort that is everything but uplifting is paying for the upbringing of the young wards in the Gillis Orphan Home in Kansas City as model Christian citizens. In fact, the most singular circumstances are responsible for the very existence of a Gillis theatre at Fifth and Walnut. The Gillis is the oldest theatre name in the city, one of the oldest in the country.

It all goes back to the will of the late Mrs. Mary A. Troost. A bequest provided $140,000 for the construction of a building to contain a theatre and store at that corner, the income from which would go to an orphanage, the present Gillis Orphan Home. All this was conceived as a memorial to Mrs. Troost's uncle, the picturesque pioneer, William Gillis, who had a fort and trading post commanding the Kaw River, and whose lands extended so far from the point they included part of what today is Kansas City's beautiful Penn Valley Park, some two miles away.

The Gillis theatre was a huge success when it opened as a temple of the drama a half century ago, and for many years thereafter. Then, with a change in the character of the section from the center of business activity to a district of produce markets and "flop" houses, came drab days for the playhouse. Ten years ago explosion and fire swept the old landmark away. When a new structure was erected there, no one regarded a theatre as a desirable feature considering the location, but a theatre of 300 seats was included in the new buildings, nevertheless, in strict compliance with the terms of Mrs. Troost's will.

Once given over to silent pictures, the Gillis for the last several years has been presenting low burlesque of a type that is a long way from the original intent the benefactor of the Gillis Orphan Home, Mrs. Troost, had in mind when she stipulated the condition in her will. The theatre's atmosphere is far removed from the aura surrounding the Orphan Home, which for many years has been partly maintained by the Women's Christian Association and partly by the box office receipts of the burlesque house.

While the liberal tide already has veered Pennsylvania toward Sunday film shows and New York has legalized stage presentations on the Sabbath, in other commonwealths there still are ancient blue laws. An exhaustive research into musty statute books reveals that:

Peeling an orange in a California hotel room is illegal.

In Bellingham, Washington, a woman must not take more than three steps backward while dancing.

Bowling is illegal in Ohio.

A tricycle may not be driven more than ten miles an hour in Vancouver.

In Kansas a law requires that every building be provided with a sufficient number of cuspidors.

One must have a permit from the sheriff to buy a chicken after dark in Idaho.

It is unlawful in Massachusetts for a man to kiss his wife on Sunday. Also in the codfish state it is illegal for a woman to appear in public with her face powdered and rouged.

From Cannes in France we hear that the discontinuance of his allowance by his father has caused Count Covadonga, eldest son of King Alfonso, formerly of Spain, to give consideration to participating in the painful process of working for a living, and, probably having read the fairy stories about gold-paved streets and gold-laden trees in Hollywood, the Prince is thinking of a career in motion pictures.

The King cut off the Count's allowance because he refused to attend the wedding last March 4th of his brother, Jaime, to Emanuela de Dampierre, on the ground that the king gave permission for Jaime's wedding to a commoner while he withheld permission when Covadonga married Edelmira Sampedro in 1933.

3. More money.
4. Believes more talent is expended in the writing and producing of the average film than on the average play.
5. There is more money in films.
6. Films permit a fixed residence and more leisure.

FIGHT LOOMS IN TOKYO FOR THEATRE CONTROL

Kobayashi Challenges Shochiku Theatres; Plans 4,000 - Seat First-Run with Low Admissions

by H. TOMINAGA
Tokyo Correspondent

Improved standard of foreign product shown in Tokyo since last fall, a standard far higher than that of several years previous, is not due to the brisk trade developed in this country, but is attributed rather to the marked advance of the public's taste in motion pictures. And that elevation of taste has brought into the trade one of the leading progressive business men of Japan, Ichizo Kobayashi.

At the Nippon Gekijo, established last spring with a capital of Y4,500,000 and called the biggest theatre in Japan, foreign pictures had played almost every week in rapid succession. The Marcus Show and Charles Chaplin's "City Lights," both exhibited last autumn, brought full houses every day, the Marcus Show having a seven week's run and gross of Y326,599, "City Lights," five weeks. Nevertheless, this huge house was destined to close, ending with the Pantages Show, which was really a pitiable failure. Just then I. Kobayashi came into the enterprise, and in a twinkling became a prominent figure in the trade. He placed the Nippon Gekijo under his influence, adding much to his initial power, which already extended over the Hibiya Eiga Gekijo. Now he has Takarazuka Opera Houses, both in Tokyo and Osaka, Ginyei-Za, Yuraku-Za, and Yokohama Toho-Gekijo, in addition to the two large first-runs mentioned.

He has been carrying out resolutely a 50 sen flat rate admission charge to the two premier-run houses. Another plan he ventured was a ten-day run per picture. To get a number of top American pictures he sent to America T. Hada, manager of the Nippon Gekijo.

With "Botchan" ("An Unsophisticated Teacher"), P.C.L. production, and "Caravan," a Fox picture, on the first program, the Nippon Gekijo set a good pace, which it has maintained.

Recent hits were "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" and "Man of Aran."

Out of all this is expected a furious competition between the Kobayashi and the Shochiku theatres.

Plans 4,000-Seat Theatre

The latest Kobayashi move was to obtain a permit to build a 4,000-seat first-run cinema on Theatre Street in Asakusa, amusement quarter of Tokyo, a step taken to mean an active campaign to control the film industry of Tokyo. All seats will be only 30 sen and the program will consist of at least two photoplays.

H. Kawakita, head of Towa Shoji Co., handling distribution of various European pictures, while crediting Mr. Kobayashi with an apparent aim "to give the masses an opportunity to see the best films at the least cost," warned that the policy "will ruin the second and third-run houses" and "the first-run theatres and the distributors will suffer. The whole film industry will be adversely affected by this mass production method." Mr. Kawakita added: "In other countries when a monopoly is thus threatened, the distributors combine. But there is no cooperation in Japan, as all agents are keen to advance only their own interests."

Musicals in Vogue

Musicals seem to be in the ascendancy in public interest in Tokyo and Osaka moviedom. Continuing at the Nippon Gekijo until May 20th, was the Paramount picture, "Rumba." At the Imperial theatre, Musashino-Kan, and Taisho-Kan, the premier-run trio of Shochiku theatres in Tokyo, was released a month ago "The Gay Divorcee." At three other Shochiku theatres in Osaka, Kyoto and Kobe, the same picture was released simultaneously, running two or three weeks in combination with "The Little Minister."

Besides these two pictures, since the last autumn there have been about a dozen music dramas released in this country, and most of them have been conspicuously successful.

Product offered in Tokyo theatres in the past month has been of a caliber to suit the taste of the most critical. At the Nippon Gekijo was "Bright Eyes," with Shirley Temple. At the Imperial theatre and Shochiku houses was "The Merry Widow," and also at the Imperial "Kiss and Make Up." In the same week "Gentlemen are Born" came to the Hibiya Gekijo, and with it "Horoki," ("The Wanderer"), with Miss Shizuye Natsukawa and Miss Masako Tsutsumi, a P.C.L. production. And these productions were followed with two films dealing with the life of Schubert, "Love Time" and "Blossom Time," and a French picture, "Song of Farewell," on Chopin.

St. Louis Amusement Seeks Stock Listing

The St. Louis Amusement Company, subsidiary of Skouras Brothers Enterprises and Warner, has filed application with the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington for registration on the St. Louis Stock Exchange of 21,245 shares of class A and 29,499 shares of class B stock, all issued. Skouras owns 53 per cent of the stock and Warner 42 per cent.

The company, according to the application, owns seven operating and eight non-operating theatres and airdromes and operates 10 leased houses. It has as subsidiaries the Uptown Theatre Co., of which it owns 51.2 per cent; Shaw Theatre Co., 50.4 per cent, and Westport Theatre Co., 51.11 per cent.

The only holders of 10 per cent or more of any class of securities are Warner with 8,839 shares, or 41.6 per cent, of class A, and 15,060 shares, or 51.8 per cent, of class B, and Nelson Cunliff, trustee for Skouras, with 12,421 shares, or 68.48 per cent, of class A and 13,928 shares, or 47.21 per cent, of class B. The only officers to receive salaries are: Cunliff, president, $5,200 per year; Leo J. Hill, vice-president, $7,436, and G. L. Wiegand, secretary-treasurer, $4,246.32. Officers and directors of the company own in their own names one share of class B stock each. The balance sheet of the company for the fiscal year ended August 25 last, showed income of $1,036,413.25, net expenses of $949,048.63, depreciation and interest of $108,093.87 and a deficit of $20,729.25.

RCA Photophone To Market Sonotone Hearing Devices

Arrangements have been completed between Sonotone and RCA whereby RCA will act as distributors for the bone conduction oscillator device for the hard of hearing, to be known as the RCA-Sonotone, in all commercial fields. Sonotone will continue to market their device in the non-commercial field.

RCA Photophone will sell and install the oscillator in all theatres, regardless of the make of the sound reproducing apparatus in use. In theatres equipped with RCA Photophone addition of the new hearing aids entails the use of a special amplifier, connected with the main reproducing amplifier, and double plug-in boxes placed beneath the arm of the seat-chair. In competitively equipped theatres a microphone, to be placed directly in front of the loudspeaker, is also necessary.

According to estimates, the new hearing aids will make it possible to bring sound motion picture entertainment to a "forgotten audience" of some 5,000,000 persons lost to the exhibitors since the inception of talkers, and increase the enjoyment of this form of entertainment for some 15,000,000 additional persons whose hearing is impaired.

SUBSIDIZED THEATRE FOR LEGITIMATE VOTED BY U. S.

National Theatre Would Be Chartered by Federal Government but Created and Operated by Private Capital

The long looked for hypodermic to revitalize the stage is at this moment in the hands of President Roosevelt. If he uses it America will have a national subsidized theatre of the drama, chartered by the federal government, but bought and sustained with private capital furnished by 44 patrons of the arts, principally leaders of wealth and society in Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, New York and Chicago.

Legislation providing for incorporation of the American National Theatre and Academy was approved by Congress Saturday morning, and on Wednesday it reposes on the President's desk at the White House awaiting a signature.

The corporation, to be a non-profit organization without capital stock, would have for its purposes the following:

Presentation of theatrical productions of the highest type.

Stimulation of public interest in the drama as an art belonging both to the theatre and to literature, and thereby to be enjoyed both on the stage and in the study.

Advancement of interest in the drama throughout the country by furthering production of the best plays, interpreted by the best actors, at a minimum cost.

Further development of the study of drama of the present and past in our universities, colleges, schools and elsewhere, and the sponsoring, encouraging and developing of the art and technique of the theatre through a school within the National Academy.

The near culmination of the move to establish a National Theatre of the Drama, as an art, comes within one week after endowment by the Rockefellers of the Museum of Modern Art with a grant to develop the cultural aspects of the motion picture in America, making possible for the first time a permanent and comprehensive study of the cinema as a living art.

Sought Since March, 1933

Drama patrons and those of the stage more interested in the commercial possibilities of government sponsorship of a national theatre have been striving for a federal subsidy ever since President Roosevelt took office in March of 1933. The Administration's reply has been to permit the allocation of Public Works funds by state administrators in commonwealths where there has been a sufficient demand. Out of this have come itinerant road shows of no consequential prestige or value to the theatre, in a few states, principally in New York.

Reports trekking through to Broadway from Washington in recent weeks to the effect that a national government theatre was impending, with full financial support, brought denials and an explanation that there were no funds earmarked for the purpose. The new plan will not require any but moral support of the Administration, which it apparently has received. The incorporators evidently are the financial sponsors.

Purpose Would Be to Advance Drama by Furthering Production of Best Plays at Minimum Cost; List of Those Interested

The Wagner-McLaughlin bill, incorporating the American National Theatre and Academy, and naming an imposing list of art patrons as the original incorporators, was passed unanimously late last week by the House, having already been voted by the Senate.

Whether it eventually will have any competitive effect on the motion picture box office is a matter for speculation. Regardless, there does exist the possibility of its developing more stage talent for Hollywood.

Incorporators Listed

Representative McLaughlin, Nebraska, co-author of the measure, said in his report to the House that the movement has been under way for some time and that many important stage people and drama patrons had expressed the desire to contribute to such an enterprise provided it could be chartered by the federal government. The following list of incorporators explains the sources of funds:

Leopold Stokowski, Philadelphia; orchestral conductor.
Evelyn Price (Mrs. Eli Kirk Price), Philadelphia.
George W. Norris, Philadelphia; medical doctor.
Samuel S. Fleischer, Philadelphia; retired manufacturer and philanthropist.
Amory Hare Hutchinson, Philadelphia.
Ellen D. Cleveland (Mrs. Richard F. Cleveland), Baltimore.
Otto T. Mallery, Philadelphia; public worker and business specialist.
Roland S. Morris, Philadelphia; lawyer, Pennsylvania Democratic leader.
Mrs. George H. Lorimer, Philadelphia; wife of the editor of Saturday Evening Post.
Hugh Hampton Young, Baltimore; surgeon.
Richard F. Cleveland, Baltimore.
J. Howard Reben, Philadelphia.
Mary Stewart French, Philadelphia.
Clara R. Mason, Philadelphia.
Katharine Dexter McCormick (Mrs. Stanley McCormick), Chicago.
Evangeline Stokowski (Mrs. Leopold Stokowski), Philadelphia; wife of the orchestral conductor.
Elsie Jenkins Symington (Mrs. Donald Symington), Baltimore; corporation official.
B. Howell Griswold, Baltimore; lawyer and banker.
Ann Morgan, New York, sister of J. Pierpont Morgan.
John Hay (Jock) Whitney, New York; president, Pioneer Pictures.
Harriet Barnes Pratt (Mrs. Harold I. Pratt), New York; wife of the capitalist.
Mrs. W. Murray Crane, New York; wife of the New England paper manufacturer.
A. Conger Goodyear, New York; head of the Museum of Modern Art; capitalist, manufacturer.
Alice Garrett (Mrs. John W. Garrett), Baltimore; wife of the diplomat.
John W. Garrett, Baltimore. diplomat.
Joy Montgomery Higgins, New York.
Arthur Woods, Broadway stage producer.
Mrs. Arthur Woods, New York.
C. Lawton Campbell, New York.

'TIMES' SEES TWO SIDES TO NATIONAL THEATRE

The New York Times editorializes on the creation by Congress of a National Theatre and Academy of the drama, thus:

Passage through Congress of the bill to incorporate a National Theatre and Academy represents a worthy purpose and hope. To help bring about a better conception of the theatre as a means of popular recreation and instruction would be a fine thing. To stimulate the writing of better drama and the training and recognition of talented actors is something which all would approve. The list of distinguished men and women who allowed their names to be used as incorporators shows how seriously the project ought to be taken.

It must be said at once, however, that among the difficulties which it will have to face, the financial is the greatest. The bill carries no appropriation. That does not shut out the possibility of getting a Federal loan. But the incorporated National Theatre will start out with no money and is forbidden to issue capital stock. Apparently, all its funds are to come from donations or legacies.

The expectation seems to be also that the public will flock in great numbers to the theatrical performances that are to be given. But that is always a huge uncertainty in the theatre. The certain thing is that productions such as those which seem to be contemplated will cost a great deal of money. High-class actors will want high salaries. So that it is on the side of the practical operation of the plan that doubts arise. Perhaps, in the end, the government will step forward as the "angel" of the National Theatre.

Official Recognition

The foregoing incorporators, listed in the order in which they are named in the Wagner-McLaughlin bill, "and their associates and successors duly chosen, are hereby incorporated, constituted, and declared to be a body corporate," by the Senate and the House of Representatives, said the bill.

Passage of the bill, said Representative McLaughlin, would constitute an official governmental recognition of the benefits and values flowing from the development "in the finest art and literature," and would be in line with what other enlightened countries of the world had done to encourage a better appreciation of these values. The text of the bill follows:

To Incorporate the American National Theatre and Academy

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled that . . . the name of this corporation shall be "The American National Theatre and Academy."

Sec. 2. The corporation shall be non-profit and without capital stock. Its purposes shall embrace:

(a) The presentation of theatrical productions of the highest type.

(b) The stimulation of public interest in the drama as an art belonging both to the theatre and to literature and thereby to be enjoyed both on the stage and in the study.

(c) The advancement of interest in the drama throughout the United States of America by furthering the production of the best plays, interpreted by the best actors at a minimum cost.

(d) The further development of the study of drama of the present and past in our universities, colleges, schools and elsewhere.

(e) The sponsoring, encouraging and developing of the art and technique of the theatre through a school within the National Academy.

Corporation Powers

Sec. 3. That the corporation created by this act shall have the following powers:

To have perpetual succession with power to sue and to be sued in the courts of law and equity; to receive, hold, own, use, mortgage and dispose of such real estate and personal property as shall be necessary for its corporate purposes; to adopt a corporate seal and alter the same at pleasure; to adopt a constitution, by-laws and regulations to carry out its purposes not inconsistent with the laws, of the United States or any States; to establish and maintain offices and buildings for the conduct of its business; to establish State and territorial organizations and local branches; and generally to do all such acts and things as may be necessary and proper in carrying into effect the purposes of the corporation.

Sec. 4. That the organization shall be non-political, non-sectarian, as an organization, shall not promote the candidacy of any persons seeking public office. There shall be no honorary members.

Sec. 5. That said corporation and its State and local branches and subdivisions shall have the sole and exclusive right to have and to use in carrying out its purposes the name "The American National Theatre and Academy."

Washington Headquarters Indicated

Sec. 6. That said corporation be, and is, hereby authorized to have its headquarters and hold its meetings at such places within or without the District of Columbia as it from time to time may deem best.

Sec. 7. The corporation is hereby authorized and empowered to receive by demise, bequest, donation or otherwise, either real or personal property, and to hold the same absolutely or in trust and to invest, reinvest and manage the same in accordance with the provisions of its constitution and to apply said property and the income arising therefrom to the objects of its creation and according to the instructions of its donors.

Sec. 8. That said corporation shall on or before the first day of January in each year make and transmit to Congress a report of its proceedings for the preceding calendar year, including a full and complete report of its receipts and expenditures; provided, however, that said report shall not be printed as a public document.

Sec. 9. That as a condition precedent to the exercise of any power or privilege herein granted or conferred, "The American National Theatre and Academy" shall file in the office of the Secretary or the properly designated officer of each State or Territory or the District of Columbia in which is located either its headquarters or branches or subdivisions thereof, the name and postoffice address of an authorized agent upon whom legal process or demand against "The American National Theatre and Academy" may be served.

Sec. 10. That the right to repeal, alter or amend this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Marion Davies Reelected To Head Film Relief Fund

Marion Davies was reelected president of the Motion Picture Relief Fund on the Coast last week at the annual meeting of officers. Jack Warner has succeeded M. C. Levee as treasurer and Alex Freundlich has taken the post of secretary, left vacant by the death of Francis X. Bauer.

Ronald Colman, Mary Pickford, Will Hays and Samuel Goldwyn were elected vice-presidents. New trustees for three-year terms are Ralph Block, Jean Hersholt, William Koenig, Mitchell Lewis, Sol Lesser, Louis B. Mayer, Leo McCarey, Robert Montgomery, Ewell Moore, Norma Shearer and Frank Woods.

Blue Laws, Taxes Rousing Exhibitors

Taxation and the "blue laws" stood out this week as outstanding subjects of legislative interest to the industry, the taxation problem continuing in the fore in Congress, and in some states, the while the "blue laws" were being debated elsewhere.

Pennsylvania's local option Sunday motion picture bill, passed two weeks ago, was signed by Governor George H. Earle, but the fight will continue in the municipalities, where nine large state religious and temperance organizations will take up the cudgels against local film theatres.

Alabama Winning on Sundays

On the other hand, the industry gained ground in the "blue" fight in Alabama, where the state senate passed the Lusk bill permitting citizens in towns of more than 1,000 population to vote on the Sunday opening question.

Ontario exhibitors were complaining about a slump in business which they attribute to the new heavy taxes.

Following a conference with Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, and exhibitor delegations from the eastern and western sections of Missouri, State Auditor Forrest Smith announced a decision on the use of tokens for collection of the state's new sales tax which becomes effective August 27. He plans to purchase 25,000,000 aluminum tokens of one-mill denomination. These will be distributed through the banks to exhibitors and merchants, who are obligated to collect the one per cent tax from customers. Five-cent purchases will call for the payment of a 2 per cent tax. The purchaser of a 10-cent admission to a motion picture theatre would pay the cashier eleven cents and receive in change nine of the tokens. For a 50-cent ticket 51 cents would be paid and five tokens received as change.

"U" Bars Ohio News Shots

In retaliation for a bill passed by the late assembly, at Columbus, Ohio, raising censorship fees from $1 to $3 per 1,000-foot reel, there will be no more newsreel shots taken of events taking place in Ohio, according to a telegram received from Universal's office in New York, by Ralph Lembeck, Universal newsreel cameraman in Cincinnati.

Continuation of the present 40-cent exemption from the federal admission tax until June 30, 1937, is provided for in the tax-extension resolution passed by Congress last week.

Rejecting an amendment by the Senate to limit the extension to one year, the House of Representatives insisted upon a two-year continuation of the emergency taxes and won its point in conference.

Passage of the measure was made possible by a decision not to append thereto the President's new social taxation program, including a sliding scale of taxation for corporations, ranging from 10 per cent on companies with net income not exceeding $2,000 to 17½ per cent on concerns with net income in excess of $20,000,000.

Considerable opposition is being voiced to the new corporation tax schedule, which is charged with being an attempt to penalize size, it being pointed out that the net income has no relation to the earning power of stock, and a $20,000,000 net income for a corporation capitalized at $1,000,000,000 would be but a two per cent return, yet would be subjected to the heaviest taxes, while a $2,000 net for a $1,000 corporation would be a 200 per cent return but subject only to the lightest rate.

50 MORE STORIES BOUGHT FOR 1936; UNITED ARTISTS MEETING MONDAY

24 Originals Purchased in June, Compared with 19 Books and 7 Plays; 200 Properties Bought Since April 1

Fox First to Complete Current Schedule, Bringing Total to 48 Promised; Lesser and Republic Add Features

Motion picture rights to 50 books, plays and original manuscripts were acquired by 16 producers in June to round out further the feature programs for 1935-36. Some of the season's biggest successes of the stage and book-publisher were among the acquisitions:—"As Thousands Cheer," "Dodsworth," "Green Pastures," "Petrified Forest."

Original stories continued in June to be the main source of supply, 24 manuscripts having been purchased, as against 19 books and seven plays. They increased to 200 the total number of properties purchased since producers began on April 1st to participate actively in the story-buying market for 1935-36 consumption.

Otherwise there were few remaining adjustments made in the week to the new season's schedules as already announced by all the large companies except United Artists, which will make known its plans at the annual sales convention starting in Los Angeles Monday. Columbia, meeting in Chicago, announced 52 features and 125 short subjects.

Fox Film was the first to complete its 1934-35 production schedule, bringing in a new Shirley Temple production this week as the final feature of the 48 promised. Sol Lesser raised his schedule from four to ten features, to cost $2,225,000. Republic, too, expanded its program, from 46 to 57 features. Other companies added to production and talent staffs. Four new independent producers were contemplating programs for 1935-36—Morais-DeLisser, Rodman Pell and the pioneers William N. Selig and Abe and Julius Stern.

June's story purchases were only slightly less in number than the monthly average of 57 maintained since last September, and compared as follows:

Strength of Daisy Martin, original, by Norman Springer, purchased by Radio, for direction by Thomas Atkins.

Tiger Valley, original, by Reginald Campbell, purchased by Mascot (Republic).

To Beat the Band, original, by Rian James Marion, Jr., purchased by Radio, which assigned Zion Myers to produce.

Too Many Parents, original, by George (Dink) Templeton, purchased by Paramount, for David Holt, Virginia Weidler, Baby LeRoy, with Julien Josephson adapting.

Ticket to Paradise, book, by Francis M. Cockrell, purchased by Mascot (Republic).

Twenty Fathoms Below, original, by Armand Schaefer and John Rathmell, purchased by Mascot (Republic).

Untitled, original, by Ben Lucien Burman, purchased by Universal.

Whispering Smith Speaks, book, by Frank H. Spearman, purchased by Sol Lesser Productions (Fox), for George O'Brien.

You Have to Learn Sometime, original, by Richard Wormser, purchased by Warners as a possible vehicle for James Cagney and Ross Alexander.

Your Uncle Dudley, play, by Howard Lindsay, and Bertrand Robinson, purchased by Fox.

You're in the Navy Now, original, by Wallace McDonald, purchased by Mascot (Republic).

Company activities pertaining to general product and policy plans this week follow:

Columbia

Fifty-two features, including 12 westerns, and 125 short subjects, to consist of 10 series of one-reelers and 26 two-reel subjects were outlined at the Chicago convention on Monday.

PRODUCT PLANS ADVANCED

Empire

Oscar Hanson, general sales manager, presided at the six-day convention of Empire Films, Ltd., Canadian distributors, this week. The company distributes Educational, British International and Republic Pictures, among others, and in 1935-36 will handle some 76 features.

Fox Films at Movietone City completed the last of the 1934-35 schedule when it brought in Shirley Temple's "Curly Top," the 48th feature for the season.

With completion of "Rose of France," last of eight, the company wound up its Spanish production department in California. John Stone, who has been producing, was transferred to domestic production, working with Fox-20th Century. However, Fox is releasing 50 foreign version talkers in this market, 35 of which are Spanish, six Italian, five French and four German. Sales are in charge of Harry Reinhart.

With S. R. Kent, president of Fox Film, and Joseph M. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck, of Fox-20th Century, set to leave this week for Hollywood after conferences in New York in connection with corporate details of the merger of the Fox and 20th Century company, preparations were going forward on the coast to set 20th for actual filming under the Fox banner.

Lesser

Including the four George O'Brien westerns contracted for by Fox for 1935-36, Sol Lesser's Principal Pictures will spend $2,225,000 on 10 pictures for the season, said to be his most ambitious program in his 19 years in the business. Distribution is being arranged the while a new building is being constructed at the Pathe coast studio. Two of the new group will feature Bobby Green, seven-year-old. Two others will be Harold Bell Wright stories, "Calling of Dan Matthews" and "The Mine with the Iron Door." Another will be Rupert Hughes' "Celluloid."

Morais-DeLisser

H. William Fitelson, New York attorney, was organizing a production company, sponsored by Audley Morais and H. G. DeLisser, native Jamaicans, for the making of features on the island, where Mr. Morais owns all of the theatres and Mr. DeLisser is a publisher.

Capitalized at $1,000,000 their company, unnamed as yet, will have its own studios, to which American and British actors will be brought from Hollywood and London. The first is "White Witch."

Paramount

Led by six "specials" scheduled for release during the first 1935-36 quarter, which starts in August, Paramount this week had 18 features in production.

Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur may make three instead of two for Paramount next season under the terms of a new contract, now being negotiated. Julie Haydon's contract was turned over to the company by the producers.

Walter Wanger will have the last three features on his current schedule for Paramount finished within two weeks. He is still dickering with the company over terms of his 1935-36 contract, calling for six pictures, and if he signs he will work at General Service Studios in Hollywood, with Jack Daily, of the Paramount advertising department, working with him in charge of press relations.

There has been some talk on Broadway about Mr. Wanger moving to United Artists to produce for Mary Pickford.

Contracts were renewed with Mary Boland, Sir Guy Standing, William Frawley, players; and Hans Dreier, head of the art department.

George M. Arthur, former head of the editing and projection departments, was appointed an associate producer on Ernst Lubitsch's staff. Last season he produced some shorts.

Pell Productions

From San Francisco came word that Rodman Pell, of the Pell Paper Company, was leaving for the South Seas to produce a ten-reel colored travelogue.

Radio

Promotions at Radio this week included those of Harry J. Michalson, formerly eastern district sales manager, to the post of short subjects sales manager, succeeding Al Mertz, who was transferred to Detroit, and of Lee Marcus from head of the comedy production unit to the post of associate feature producer. Also, Arthur Willi, chief vaudeville scout for the RKO Circuit, was made talent scout for Radio Pictures, succeeding Richard A. Rowland, who resigned several months ago to rejoin Metro at Culver City.

Bill Howard, who has been handling talent for RKO theatres in the west, becomes general manager of RKO Vaudeville Booking Corporation, and Danny Freundlich will assist him.

Republic

Further expansion and new affiliations at Republic Pictures has resulted in an enlarged program for 1935-36. Instead of 46 features, as first announced, there will be 57, divided into six groups. These will consist of 10 Republic "Gold Medal Specials"; 22 Republic "Blue Ribbon Winners"; 5 "Fast Action Group"; 8 "John Wayne Action Dramas"; 8 "Gene Autry Musical Westerns," and 4 Nat Levine serials.

The company decided to hold two more regional conventions, following a series of meetings in the west. W. Ray Johnston, president, presided at a meeting last week at Toronto, at which the following officials attended: Oscar R. Hanson, in charge of Canadian distribution; Norton V. Ritchey, in charge of foreign sales, and Edward A. Golden, sales manager. Accompanying the group to Toronto were Sam Smith, British distributor, and Ralph Poucher, of Consolidated Film Industries.

The final session will be held at the Park Central in New York over the weekend. Mr. Johnston will conduct the meeting.

Starting this week, Jack Bellman and Sidney Picker, of Hollywood Pictures, New York, will be associated with Herman Gluckman, of Majestic and Capitol Films, in the organization of the new Republic Pictures Corporation of New York and New Jersey. Mr. Bellman will be sales manager and Mr. Picker will assist him.

The New York exchange will open July 9th in the Film Center Building, 630 Ninth Avenue, and the Philadelphia branch will open July 10th, at 1236 Vine Street.

Selig

William N. Selig, pioneer producer, plans to reenter the independent field, making six features for 1935-36, releasing the first in September. On the schedule are: "I Am the Law," from David Belasco's play; "The Dragnet," play, by Willard Mack; "Irish Eyes," play, by Edward Rose; "Yosemite," play, by Charles A. Taylor; "Bachelors Must Marry," play, by Dorothy Doyle, and "Going Straight," play, by Edward Rose.

Stern Brothers

Abe and Julius Stern, pioneer comedy producers and for years with Universal, arrived in New York en route to France and London. They were said to be contemplating entering feature production.

United Artists

Al Lichtman, president of United Artists, arrived in Hollywood to preside at the six-day sales convention opening on Monday, when 175 members of the home office and field sales forces will gather to hear about the new facilities of the producers whose films are to be released through the company next season. Hal Horne, advertising director, and Monroe Greenthal, exploiteer, were also in the vanguard.

Business sessions are to occupy the first three days, closing on Wednesday with addresses by Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin, Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Gunther Lessing, A. H. Giannini and Eddie Cantor. Social activities will prevail from that time.

The home office personnel leaving this week included Harry Gold, Paul Lazarus, Paul Burger, Arthur W. Kelly, Harry Buckley, James Mulvey, Charles Stern, Harry Goetz, Jack Goldhar, Maurice Silverstone, Emanuel Silverstone, Morris Helprin, N. A. Thompson, Albert Margolies, Len Daly, Walter Gould and Lester Sussman.

David O. Selznick in Hollywood completed negotiations with MGM that will enable him to resign immediately and start work for United Artists, producing under the new firm name of David O. Selznick Productions, Inc.

Carl Laemmle, Sr. ordered dialogue for 1935-36 productions cut to a minimum, to avoid difficulties in "dubbing" sound or in superimposing titles for the foreign markets.

A building program which will practically double the production capacity of the combined Warner Bros.-First National and Cosmopolitan studios in Burbank, has been approved by Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, and will be rushed to completion during the summer and early fall.

Final bids on all projects were reviewed last week by Harry M. Warner, president, now in Hollywood, and by Jack L. Warner, Hal Wallis, chief production executive, and by William Koenig, studio manager, and contracts will be awarded at once. Actual construction will start within ten days, under supervision of William Koenig.

Nine new sound proof stages are to be built, bringing the total number at the Burbank plant to 18 and giving Warner-First National studios the largest stage floor area in the industry.

The largest single construction job will be the erection of a new "crafts" building, which will house the various shops and mills destroyed during the fire on the back lot months ago.

A new property building on the west edge of the lot and a battery of 12 standard film vaults, the latter already under construction, are next in this expansion.

Max Reinhardt will direct another picture for Warner Bros., following Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which is now being edited and cut and will be released in the fall. This next Reinhardt film will probably be either "The Miracle," along the same general lines as his famous stage production, or Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night."

FIGHT TO CONTROL 16 MM. MARKET REACHES CLIMAX IN PARIS SUNDAY

Americans' Delegate, George Friedl, Prepared to Challenge Nazi Effort to Rule Field at Conference on Standards

With the world market of 16 mm. sound-film equipment and films the stake, a fight between the American and German industries is expected to reach its climax on Sunday in Paris as a result of bold attempts, accentuated by the German nationalistic spirit under the Nazis, to capture this market for its potential millions in profits, and, perhaps, even more important, for its possible propaganda usages.

Representatives of all the leading nations will assemble at Paris for a specially-called joint conference of the International Standards Association and the International Congress of Scientific and Applied Photography.

The issue is whether American standards of 16-mm. manufacture are to remain international or whether a dual standard will be made necessary by German and Italian adherence to specifications more recently developed by German engineers directly reversing the standards approved in America. The United States delegate, George Friedl of New York, will argue for adoption of the American standard as the single model for the world.

Called at the instance of the American motion picture industry, the Paris conference will receive, through Mr. Friedl, a presentation of the Sectional Committee on Motion Pictures under the American Standards Association. Mr. Friedl, apparatus design supervisor for Electrical Research Products, Inc., and a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, is the delegate of the Sectional Committee, which is composed of 25 leading film organizations and industrial concerns in the United States. Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, past president of the SMPE and noted consulting engineer on sound projection, television and radio, heads the Committee.

The vote of the conference will have far-reaching consequences to the American film industry, not only that part concerned with 16-mm. manufacture and production in the theatrical, non-theatrical and amateur fields, but to all companies producing 35-mm. film, since much of the narrow gauge product is made by reduction from standard prints.

The American committee is convinced that international sanction of the American standard, which was developed by the SMPE and is used also in a number of European countries, will be in the best interests of speedy and economical development of the corresponding industries and will avoid the confusion and waste of time and money that would attend the existence of two widely-used but different 16-mm. sound-film standards. The technical advantage as between the two is called a toss-up.

Dr. Goldsmith is authority for the statement that any change in the standards in America would involve a major disruption in that industry, with consequent economic losses running into millions of dollars. America, moreover, does not intend to accept any recommendations for a change in satisfactory standards originated through its pioneer efforts and put into commercial use through its enterprise and investment.

Says the American Committee: "The Americans do not plead for adoption of the American standard on purely selfish grounds, for if a separate European standard were to be adopted, this would mean that 16-mm. sound cameras and projectors shipped by European and American manufacturers into all countries of the world would be arranged to take film of either standard. This would be a confusing inconvenience to the users of such equipment. However, it would be a relatively easy matter for American manufacturers to make such dual equipment and to push its sale energetically throughout the world on a competitive basis with the Europeans. Manifestly there is no prolonged advantage for any manufacturing group to be gained by this method.

"The same applies to 16-mm. sound-films. If it were necessary for all producers to make prints according to both standards, such a duplicated procedure would be a wasteful inconvenience to all concerned, and would give no one any special advantage over the others."

Leading up to the present stage of developments, the controversy has been marked by strong international feeling accentuated by the German nationalistic spirit. While American industry leaders are reluctant to be quoted for publication because of the delicate situation, there is a well defined impression, based on what has taken place in the past, that the Germans are striking out in a bold attempt to capture the European domestic and export market for its 16-mm. industry.

Since the dispute has been thrust by the Germans into the realm of national prestige and since international politics is a sensitive subject in Europe today, the American industry is exerting every effort to keep the question from becoming bogged in external issues and to maintain it on a basis of what is best for the progress of sound-film development.

Claim U. S. Specifications Copied

It is a curious twist that German engineers, in publishing 16-mm. specifications as official for their industry, claim they copied identical specifications adopted in America. The American film industry takes the charitable view that this was an honest error rather than a deliberate misrepresentation.

Technically, the German-Italian proposal differs from the SMPE-American proposal in three respects:

1. The position of the sound-track.
2. The distance between the sound record and the picture.
3. The position of the emulsion.

W. B. Cook of Kodascope Libraries, New York, in the Journal of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers for February, 1935, Vol. 24, No. 2, Page 176, sums up the discrepancy between the American and German standards as follows:

" . . . It may be in order to point out the efforts being made by European countries, particularly Germany, to adopt a standard of 16-mm. sound-film that shall have the same dimensions and relations of the picture image and the sound-track as those adopted by this Society, but exactly reversed as to the projection positions of the emulsion surface and the perforations. In the standard adopted by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, when the film is threaded in a projector the perforations are at the right edge of the film (looking toward the screen), and the emulsion surface is toward the screen. In the standard advocated by European societies, the perforations are at the left edge of the film (facing the screen), and the emulsion surface is adjacent to the light and the condenser lens. The complication is clearly recognized by at least one European manufacturer, who advertised that he will supply either right-hand or left-hand sprockets as required."

Issue Evolves from Misreading by Germans of Drawing in 1932 SMPE Journal; British Seen as American Allies

Standard Sought Early

The development of sound motion pictures in the United States using 16-mm. film had been in progress for a number of years when, by 1932, there were a number of manufacturers and engineers working on such 16-mm. sound-film systems. It was apparent that since each laboratory was using slightly different arrangements of the sound-track and picture, it would be desirable to achieve some agreement in regard to a standard for the sound-film dimensions. The first specifications for 16-mm. sound-film were proposed by the RCA Victor Company, which had pioneered the field, and were worked out with the cooperation of Eastman Kodak Company. The Standards Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers assumed direction of the work of arriving at some standard, and after considerable research and communication with all interested firms and individuals in America the Board of Governors of the SMPE approved revised and elaborated specifications. The report of the Standards Committee at the SMPE Spring convention in 1933 said such action had been taken.

The recommended standards were published in the November, 1932, issue of the Journal of the SMPE. The drawing contained the word TITLE so positioned as to indicate that the sound-track was opposite that normally employed in 35-mm. sound-film, although the text of the report did not discuss the point. Viewed from the light-source in the projector, the sound-track was to the left, and the base (not the emulsion) faced the light-source.

German Drawing Different

In the April 5, 1933, issue of Die Kinotechnik, specifications of the DIN (Deutsche Normenausschus, German national standards organization) for 16-mm. sound-film were published, in which all the dimensions were identical to those shown in the American proposal. In the drawing there was no title or other figure shown on the film to indicate whether the sound-track was placed in accordance with the American proposal, but there appeared in the text immediately below this drawing a notation to the effect that in the projected film the sound-track lay to the right as viewed from the light-source, which was exactly the reverse of the American proposal, and the emulsion side faced the light-source.

American engineers, seeing that the drawing appeared to be in all respects a copy of the American specifications, and being for the most part unfamiliar with the German language, did not discover this discrepancy. It would seem, according to the SMPE, that the German engineers also were unaware of their misreading the American drawing, because in an article published in Die Kinotechnik, Mr. Flinker said that the direction of travel of the film through the machine was taken from the American proposals as published in the November, 1932, report of the SMPE Standards Committee, mentioned earlier. Incidentally, it appears from Mr. Flinker's article that in every respect the American specifications had been accurately copied so far as the German committee was aware.

Variance Finally Pointed Out

Until November of the same year, the SMPE Standards Committee, having failed to observe the discrepancy between the German DIN and American proposals, had no comments to offer. In November a communication was received from Germany expressing some astonishment that American 16-mm. sound-films exhibited at the International Motion Picture Exposition at Paris should have their sound records apparently located at variance with the American specifications, being on the opposite side of the film from that adopted in Germany.

"It is somewhat surprising," says the brief of the American Sectional Committee to be presented to the international conference, "that the German committee, having intended to copy the American specifications, should have concluded that the American machine and film shown at Paris were in error with respect to the American specification, yet did not review the American drawing which, if not ostentatiously, at least definitely, shows agreement between the American proposal and the American apparatus.

"On the other hand, the original mistake made by the German committee is to be condoned upon the ground that it was quite natural for them to expect that the sound-track in a 16-mm. standard would be positioned in accordance with the 35-mm. standard, and their failure to observe the exact nature of the American proposal is, therefore, much akin to the American failure to observe the German mistake."

German Proposals Endorsed

As a number of proposals existed at the time in Europe considerably at variance with the German DIN standards, conferences were called at Rome and at Baden Baden at which the German proposals were endorsed as distinguished from the 17.5-mm. and similar specifications. In June, 1934, a conference was held at Stresa, Italy, under sponsorship of the International Cinematographic Institute (ICE) to consider further the results of the Baden Baden conference and to attempt to arrive at general agreement for an international standard for educational purposes. The Institute is affiliated with the League of Nations, and out of the Stresa conference, which was called by Dr. Lucian DeFeo of Rome, certain European projector manufacturers hoped to arrive at a standard which would be recommended to the League.

On 60 hours' notice, the SMPE in New York was cabled by Dr. DeFeo to have its delegate at Stresa. Dr. Goldsmith, president of the SMPE at the time, hastily appointed W. F. Garling of RCA Photophone, Ltd., of London to attend as the American representative. With four European delegates present, the deliberations of the conference resulted in endorsement of the German proposals. The American representative dissented.

The SMPE was requested by the Conference to consider changing the American Standards to conform with the German recommendation, and it was said that unless action were taken by the American Society within six weeks, the committee that had met at Stresa would declare the German proposal standard for all countries holding membership in the League of Nations for 16-mm. educational films.

While leaders of the American industry had no conclusive proof that the Germans deliberately executed a maneuver to exclude an American representative from the Stresa session, the short notice given the SMPE, resulting in the necessity of hastily appointing a delegate residing in Europe, without proper and adequate preparation for the problem at hand, together with the action of the conference, led important American observers to characterize the entire procedure as "summary and abrupt."

"There was nothing brought out in the discussion," commented Dr. Goldsmith, "that would seem to justify the Stresa resolution in favor of placing the sound-track in accordance with the German proposals."

When the Germans learned that a strong feeling of dissatisfaction existed on the part of the Americans, Germany called another conference, this time in Berlin, under the auspices of the Reichsfilmkammer (Film Chamber of Commerce), April 25, this year. The invitation to the SMPE to send a delegate requested cooperation on Committee 12. The specific aim of this committee was defined in the official program as "Committee on the International Standardization of Narrow Gauge Film—Aims: Preliminary discussion for International Congress for Scientific Photography in Paris." In spite of this, open discussion was not permitted. At the opening session, it was announced that the subject of 16-mm. sound-film standardization could be considered closed, as already having been settled in favor of the German DIN standards at Stresa, and as evidenced by a resolution adopted by Committee 12.

Protest Squashed

Such was the state of affairs at the time of arrival of the American delegate at the Congress, Mr. Friedl, who arrived an hour late. When Mr. Friedl learned of the action in his absence, he protested strenuously, but the Nazi-controlled conference ruled him out of order and squashed his protest. Thereupon, the British and delegates of other European countries withdrew officially, remaining only as observers.

American observers point out that prior to April of this year there was no German Film Chamber of Commerce, and that the Berlin meeting was called in an obvious attempt to forestall the Paris meeting of the international organizations at which 16-mm. standards for the world are to be discussed.

European Manufacturers Differ

There is reason to doubt the unanimity of commercial approval of the German proposals as intimated in the German report of the Berlin conference, in view of the differences of opinion known to exist among European manufacturers. Furthermore, as regards the "international" nature of the Congress, there is also reason to question the authorization of the delegates to represent the national opinions of their respective countries.

The attitude of American 16-mm. interests was given by Dr. Goldsmith as follows: "America has pioneered the 16-mm. field, has adopted standards acceptable to everybody, and to change over would be to the detriment of the industry and would cause us inconvenience and confusion. We fail to see why educational groups, as represented at the Stresa conference, should constitute themselves the final arbiters in the matter of standards inasmuch as 16-mm. equipment is used for many other purposes. The American committee objects to a single standard for educational films. The American committee wants a standard uniform for all purposes. Adoption of standards for educational use would be equivalent to adopting standards for all purposes without giving other interests a chance to be heard."

British Seen as Allies

While Germany and Italy have adopted the DIN specifications as opposed to the American, and will stand resolutely against any action of the Paris conference favoring the Americans, United States is expected to have an ally in the powerful British delegation. Holland also is sympathetic to the United States, and it is believed Belgium is also. French interests are divided in their adherence.

Countries sending delegates to the joint Paris conference of the International Standards Association and the International Congress of Scientific and Applied Photography are Belgium, Denmark, Germany, England, France, Holland, Italy, Austria, Poland, Sweden, Spain, Rumania, Russia, Switzerland, Norway, Finland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Japan and the United States. Nineteen nations are represented in the Standards Association and 12 in the photography group.

The conference results from steps taken by the American Standards Association at the request of the Sectional Committee on Motion Pictures to bring about a further consideration of the 16-mm. sound-film standards through the established international standardizing channel the International Standards Association, which in consequence has requested that the national standardizing groups of the interested nations discuss this subject openly and freely at the meeting.

All Important Groups Represented

The Sectional Committee on Motion Pictures includes representatives of every important group having any substantial interest in motion picture production, distribution, exhibition and allied activities in the United States. The Sectional Committee has carefully considered the 16-mm. sound-film standards previously adopted by the SMPE, and has adopted these standards unanimously for the United States. The leading manufacturers of 16-mm. cameras, projectors, recorders and film previously expressed their full assent to, and support of, the standards of the SMPE in this field.

The following constitute the organizations having representation at present on the Sectional Committee on Motion Pictures:

1. Technical or engineering organizations:—American National Committee for International Congresses of Photography; American Society of Cinematographers; Acoustical Society of America; Fire Protection Group of the American Standards Association; Illuminating Engineering Society; Optical Society of America; Amateur Cinema League, Inc.; Society of Motion Picture Engineers; Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.
2. MANAGEMENT TAKES PARAMOUNT CONTROL; ANDERSON, WILCOX JOIN

Otterson Contract Ratified; Anderson Vice-President in Financial Advisory Post; Wilcox Also Executive Aid to the President

President Meets Leading Theatre Partners; Ballantine Cites Company's Strength; 20 Law Firms to Ask $3,000,000 Fees

The new management of the new Paramount Pictures, Inc., officially started to do business Monday morning, free of the bankruptcy entanglements of the old company, and with expressions of the utmost optimism coming from the trustees who had represented the courts in guiding the enterprise for 29 months through the stages of reorganization.

The weekend was a busy one for the directors and the management as they prepared to take control on Monday from the court. There was the ratification of John E. Otterson's contract as president for five years at a reported salary of $100,000 per annum; election of R. Earle Anderson as a vice-president in a financial advisory capacity; the borrowing of H. M. Wilcox from Electrical Research as a second executive aid to Mr. Otterson; and the taking over of corporate assets from the trustees.

At once various executives started out from the home office in New York to set the new machinery in motion in the field. Mr. Wilcox, who had been an Erpi vice-president and was given an indefinite leave of absence by that Western Electric subsidiary, went to Hollywood to study general studio operations.

Rothacker to California

Watterson R. Rothacker, another new aid to Mr. Otterson, likewise left for California to become established as home office contact at the studio, with temporary headquarters at the General Service Studio, an Erpi rental studio, where he will remain until September 1st.

Mr. Otterson, George J. Schaefer, executive vice-president, Y. Frank Freeman, M. A. Gowthorpe and Leon Netter went to Chicago and met on policies and operations with the company's leading theatre partners.

After the meeting Mr. Otterson continued on to the Hollywood studios for a firsthand study of conditions, out of which, it is expected, will come arrangements for the permanent executive production structure, presided over by Henry Herzbrun and Ernst Lubitsch.

The Chicago meeting, on Monday, described as having no other purpose than to bring the theatre partners together with the new company president, was attended by R. B. Wilby and H. F. Kincey, Alabama; John and Barney Balaban, of Balaban and Katz; E. J. Sparks and Hunter Perry, Florida; Martin Mullins and Sam Pinanski, of M. and P. Theatres, New England; E. V. Richards, New Orleans; Samuel and Nate Goldstein, New England; A. H. Blank, Des Moines; George Trendle and Willard Paterson, Detroit; Karl Hoblitzelle, Dallas.

When Mr. Otterson departed for Hollywood the four other New York executives returned to the home office.

Mr. Otterson, before leaving for Chicago and Hollywood, offered a permanent executive position to S. A. Lynch, former nationally known theatre operator, who for the past two years has served as chairman of the advisory committee on reorganization of all Paramount subsidiaries. His title and duties will not be divulged, if Mr. Lynch accepts, until Mr. Otterson's return from California next month.

Paramount, some eight years ago, acquired the Lynch circuit, Southern Enterprises, one of the largest in the country and one of the foundations for the building of the giant Publix structure.

With the formal transfer of assets from the trustees and the old bankrupt to the new management, headed by Mr. Otterson, as president, and Adolph Zukor, founder and board chairman, Arthur A. Ballantine, of trustees' counsel—Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine—issued the following statement, expressing the belief that the enterprise has been brought back to "unquestioned strength":

"For the trustees of Paramount, Mr. Hilles, Mr. Leake and Mr. Richardson, and our firm, their counsel, the delivery of the properties to the reorganized company marks the end of a chapter always arduous and often exciting.

"When the properties of the largest motion picture company of the world were taken over early in 1933, suffering both from the complications of the boom era and the ravages of the depression, disintegration and loss to investors and to the public seemed more likely than reconstruction and recovery. The outlook for Paramount was dark.

"That challenge has been met. Rebuilding of the properties for the good of all has been accomplished by the wise and unremitting efforts, with the constant cooperation of Adolph Zukor, dean of the picture industry, and other able executives of the regulars in Hollywood and New York. From weakness the Paramount enterprise has been brought back to unquestioned strength.

"Those who planned the corporate structure for the reconstructed enterprise—the committees, their counsel, and especially, Alfred A. Cook—have performed their difficult task with great ability. It has received the full approval of Judge Alfred C. Coxe, who so constructively presided over the lengthy court proceedings. That new structure is sound and seaworthy.

"This day, so made possible, opens the way for new achievements by the regenerated Paramount, carrying legitimate benefits to security holders and satisfying large needs of the public. Alike for the new figures in the ceaseless Paramount campaign—Mr. Otterson, Mr. Fortington, Mr. Weisl, and their associates—and for Mr. Zukor and his band of veterans, who did not know how to be beaten, I predict the fullest measure of success."

Fee Claims: $3,000,000

Some 20 law firms, with claims for fees anticipated to total $3,000,000, have begun to file applications for payment with Special Master John E. Joyce, among them lawyers who were engaged in the reorganization and representing various groups of creditors and protective committees, and Mr. Ballantine's firm. All the allowed fees will be paid out of Paramount funds provided for the purpose in the reorganization. They will be subject to a hearing scheduled before Judge Coxe on July 18th.

Special Master Joyce on Tuesday received applications for some $2,500,000 of lawyers' claims. Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, counsel to the Paramount trustees during the receivership, asked for an allowance of $700,000. This was the largest single application. The three trustees, Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson, asked for an aggregate $333,000. The application asked $128,000 for Hilles, who received $52,433 earlier; $118,000 for Leake, who received $32,433 earlier, and $87,000 for Richardson, who also received $32,433 earlier.

Cook, Nathan & Lehman asked for $250,000. Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed asked for $150,000. In addition, the bondholders' committee asked for the following remunerations for its members: Dr. Julius Klein, $52,390; Frank A. Vanderlip, $50,000; and $7,500 for each of the following members of the committee: Frederick H. Cassatt, Morris L. Ernst, Duncan G. Harris and Lawrence W. Stern.

Malcolm Sumner, attorney, asked $150,000; Stroock & Stroock, $100,000; Szold & Brandwen, $75,000; Samuel Zirn and associates, $75,-

ANDERSON LEAVES ERPI; SUCCEEDED BY FOSTER

R. Earle Anderson, elected a Paramount vice-president late last week, was succeeded as treasurer of Electrical Research Products, Inc., by Fred B. Foster. Mr. Foster had been serving Erpi as assistant treasurer. The Anderson resignation from the post he had held for eight years was announced simultaneously with his election at Paramount.

Mr. Anderson, a graduate of Princeton and student of Glasgow University, started in business in the Navy's Construction and Repair Bureau, Washington, where he invented the "cage mast," for many years a distinctive feature of American battleships.

He was assistant general manager of the Lake Torpedo Boat Company, at Bridgeport, and managed the Augusta-Savannah Navigation Company, joining Winchester Repeating Arms at the outbreak of the war, where he served as assistant general superintendent, industrial engineer, comptroller, treasurer and financial vice-president.

From Winchester Arms Mr. Anderson went to the financial vice-presidency of Simmons Hardware and was president of Barney & Berry, skate manufacturers, when Winchester acquired that company.

Before joining the telephone interests he was treasurer of R. Hoe & Company, and throughout the Paramount bankruptcy served as chairman of the general creditors' committee.

He was president of Erpi's financing subsidiary, Exhibitors' Reliance Corporation, from which office he has also resigned to take up his new duties at Paramount. These will embrace financial procedure.

Consent Decree in U.S.-RCA Action

The antitrust suit brought by the United States government against the Radio Corporation of America and RCA Communications, Inc., was amicably settled in the United States district court at Wilmington, Del., this week when Judge John P. Nields signed a supplemental consent decree relating to foreign contracts. The decree was submitted by the government and counsel for RCA and RCA Communications.

The decree, which closes the suit filed at Wilmington five years ago by the government against RCA and other large radio and wire communication companies, settles the question of agreements. RCA and RCA Communications, Inc., had with foreign countries, including the Republic of China, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Earlier Decrees Entered

The decree enjoins the RCA companies from claiming that their foreign communication agreements prevent those foreign parties or nations from setting up competing circuits with other communications companies in the United States or from transmitting thereover messages specially routed by the sender via such circuits. In 1932, a consent decree had been entered in this antitrust suit, disposing of the cross-licensing agreements between RCA companies and other defendants in this country. The consent decree of 1932 left for future settlement the foreign matters. Two years later, another decree entered here disposed of certain issues relating to foreign license and sales agreements.

"With the entry of today's decree, all of the government's objections have been satisfied," the Department of Justice representatives said.

A press statement released by RCA pointed out:

"The entry of the supplemental consent decree today followed decision by the RCA companies that they would no longer interpret the provisions of any of their traffic contracts with foreign correspondents as preventing those correspondents from establishing, if they so desire, direct radio circuits with others in the United States to handle traffic specially routed by the sender via such circuits.

"The RCA companies are so notifying all their foreign correspondents following the decision of the board in their recent arbitration between RCA and the Republic of China.

"The recommendations of the arbitrators confirmed the preferential position of the RCA circuit as the main direct circuit between China and the United States over which should be sent all messages not specifically routed otherwise by the sender."

At the time this suit was filed in 1930, it was hailed as the "greatest" antitrust suit in the history of the nation. Parties interested in communications—wire and radio—were primed for what they thought to be a lengthy and monumental trial. But no trials ever were held and by these series of consent decrees, it is pointed out, considerable money and time were saved.

Filed Amended Petition

On February 26, this year, the attorney general's office in Washington filed an amended petition to the RCA antitrust suit asking that the court either cancel RCA foreign radio transmission contracts or declare that the foreign contracting parties can ignore the terms of the contracts. Among the foreign countries brought into the picture were China, France, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland and the Netherlands.

RCA had not been diligent, the government charged at the time in seeking to secure modifications of those radio traffic contracts. According to the government's allegations then, RCA made contracts with foreign governments and foreign communication companies for the establishment and maintenance of radio circuits for the transmission of messages for the public between the United States and the contracting countries.

The government alleged that soon after such a contract was made between RCA and the government of China, the Mackay Radio and Telegraph Company, a competitor of RCA, negotiated with China for the establishment of a Mackay radio circuit in China. RCA, learning of these negotiations, the government said, warned China that such a contract with Mackay would be a violation of the RCA-Chinese radio agreement. On April 8, 1933, China notified RCA that the Mackay contract had been made, the government's bill states, and the Mackay circuit opened for commercial use May 17, 1933. Arbitration was in progress between RCA and the Chinese government, the amended bill averred, contending that China can now allow messages to be sent over the Mackay circuit "even though specially routed by the sender."

A similar situation arose in France. Mackay was negotiating with Radio France for a radio circuit, but, the government set forth, RCA brought the matter to the attention of the French government which refused to approve the Mackay-Radio France contract.

The government charged that RCA claimed the foreign parties to its contracts were obligated not to establish or permit any radio circuit in competition with the circuit established pursuant to the RCA contract, and not to receive from the United States messages by any radio circuit other than radio circuits of RCA. Mackay was thus prevented, the government alleged, from establishing direct radio circuits between the United States and China, Czechoslovakia, France, Poland and Switzerland.

Such contracts as RCA had, the government charged, restrained commerce and gave RCA a monopoly on radio transmission. Judge Nields was asked to decide that either the contracting foreign parties are free to establish radio circuits other than as provided in the contract with RCA, or that the RCA contracts are null.

On April 1, 1935, RCA filed an answer to the government's charges. RCA countercharged that it was faced with keen competition with companies that carry 80 per cent of the telegraphic communications through the world and 99.9 per cent of the domestic traffic.

RCA also denied its purpose was to prevent any competitor from engaging in the business of transmitting messages for the public by radio and denied that any of its international contracts were made to restrain commerce between the United States and foreign countries.

Spanish Company Plans To Make "Moral" Films

A new company has been formed in Spain which plans to combat "immoral" films by producing "moral" films, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Miles Hammond, assistant trade commissioner in Madrid. Production plans call for an output of five or six features this year, which may be increased next year.

A production center is yet to be definitely established, although talent and executive personnel is said to have been organized already. It is expected that an agreement will be reached to rent the studio formerly occupied by the Spanish Cinema studios, near Madrid.

Numerous smaller applications also were made. Predictions were made that the fees as finally allowed by the court would not exceed $1,000,000.

The Paramount trustees—Charles E. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson—while not discharged by the court, have but a single piece of important business to consummate at Paramount, and this to retain the causes of actions in the suits pending against former officers and directors of the company and officials of its banking affiliates. These suits were filed some months ago to recover large amounts allegedly representing excessive bonuses paid by the old Paramount and damages believed to have been sustained through operations in connection with the issuance of old Paramount stock.

New Company to Protest Claims

The contesting of claims remaining against Paramount, which aggregate some $8,500,000, or the settlement of them, will be assumed by the new company. These claims include those of Sam Katz, Sidney R. Kent and Jesse L. Lasky, for service contracts aggregating $600,000, but are exclusive of $10,000,000 of claims filed by E. M. Loew, circuit owner, of Boston, and by A. M. Momand, likewise a circuit operator growing out of demands for triple damages on anti-trust charges. These last claims are reported to be in process of settlement.

Judge Coxe on Monday reversed special master Joyce on a decision under which Paramount was denied leave to settle a claim of $503,127 filed in bankruptcy proceedings by Commercial Investment Trust Company. Judge Coxe's order paves the way for a settlement in the amount of $371,389, plus interest.

Mr. Joyce authorized the settlement of a claim of $26,766 filed by the Madison-Toledo theatre landlord, Toledo, Ohio, by the payment of $2,421.

Paramount Broadway Reorganized

The official termination on Monday of the Paramount bankruptcy brought at the same time a complete reorganization of Paramount Broadway Corporation. Also, federal Judge Francis G. Caffey approved the final report of Irving Trust Company as Publix Enterprises trustee, thereby allowing payment of a final dividend to the creditors of this former theatre holding subsidiary. An order concluding the company's affairs will be forthcoming from referee-in-bankruptcy Oscar W. Ehrhorn within a week.

Receivers in Boston for Olympia Theatres will acquire Paramount leaseholds in Lynn, Haverhill and Newton, Mass., and John Deery will acquire five leaseholds in Salem under a proposal worked out with Paramount which was submitted to the federal court in Boston for approval.

The proposal releases Paramount from lease obligations in Salem. If the deal is approved by the court, Charles Goldreyer, former New York independent operator, who now operates the subsequent run Rialto in Salem, may operate the houses for Mr. Deery in that city, it was reported.

OBSERVE PERCENTAGE PROMISES BRITONS TELL U. S. DISTRIBUTORS

Booking Embargo Threatened for Violating Pledge, at Exhibitor Conference; $250 Weekly Gross of 1,250 Theatres

by BRUCE ALLAN
London Correspondent

A twofold attack upon the rental problem is the highlight carried away from the summer conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, which closed Friday night with a dance at the Angel hotel in Cardiff, Wales.

The drive for lower film rentals was launched in action and speech. The conference voted a resolution in brisk phraseology which called upon American distributors to observe the spirit of their pledge of 1931 to hold percentage pictures to 25 per cent, with 50 per cent top in instances where the gross exceeds a figure previously determined. It was pointed out that while some distributors have adhered to their promises, others have as consistently disregarded them, United Artists being mentioned as one company which had not observed the agreement. One suggestion made as a means of controlling the situation was that exhibitors clamp a three-months booking embargo upon companies refusing to uphold the arrangement.

Thomas Ormiston, M.P., brought up the matter from another viewpoint in a paper on "Cinema Costs and Hire." He declared that pre-war theatres had earned 15 per cent on their capital investments because rentals then ran only from 20 to 25 per cent of the receipts. He said the only chance for survival of the small man was to persuade distributors to hold their prices to 20 per cent for the average programmer with an absolute top of 33 1-3 per cent on specials. Smaller theatres should be permitted to band together in booking combinations without incurring the displeasure of the Kinematograph Renters' Society of which all distributors are members, Mr. Ormiston held.

$250 Weekly Gross in 1,250 Houses

In a paper, "Little Man What Now?" H. V. Davis showed that 69 per cent of the 4,287 theatres are small houses with an average seating capacity of 660 while jointly their seats run to 51 per cent of the nation's total. In 1,250 theatres, the average weekly gross is $250 or less. He too, charged the 1931 agreement with the KRS on the percentage limitation governing deals with smaller theatres had not been respected by many distributors.

Mr. Ormiston urged that CEA pressure be brought to bear on distributors individually. He said that specials should not be used to force bad pictures.

"The British Board of Film Censors today is looked upon as the mother of censorship, and censors from all parts of the world without exception affirm the system in this country as the best that could be devised," declared the Right Hon. E. E. Shortt, K.C., president of the board.

He said the one time flow of undesirable films from America merely represented a passing phase of life which Hollywood had recorded. He added, however, that licensing authorities were disturbed about the frequency of horror films.

He also criticized the new type of American films showing punitive governmental methods. "In a new variation, the whole gangster gamut is as prominently displayed as of yore. I trust we shall not have a recrudescence of these subjects. Their influence is unwholesome."

A First National Circuit

Development of the possibility of a British First National along the lines of the one-time First National Exhibitors' Circuit in the States, mentioned in last week's HERALD as a first important development of the conference, came out of a paper by Simon Rowson on "The Future of the Films Act." He called the law the "exhibitors' defense act," and calling for a careful handling of the "defense." He said that but for the Act and the British production industry which it established it would have been easy for three or four American executives to meet in a back parlor in Wall Street and determine a "squeeze" policy for England, where the Sherman antitrust law is not operative.

It was Mr. Rowson's viewpoint that the blind booking clauses are being scrupulously observed, but that the advance booking clauses are being continuously breached and demonstrated unenforceable. The quota, he said, had "triumphantly" realized its aim, which was to establish British production and fill the gap created by the "striking" decline in foreign, including American, production and had prevented the growth of "fantastic" rentals based on monopoly.

Would Set Minimum Negative Costs

He expressed it as his idea that 25 per cent of British films were low in quality because insufficient money was spent on them and suggested as a remedy a compulsory clause in the statute placing minimum negative costs of quota pictures at £10,000 or £12,000. It is impossible to contemplate the demise of the law which expires in 1938, he continued, since the industry relies on a protective government policy. He suggested amendments maintaining a ban on blind booking, a legalization of advance booking, maintenance of the peak quota levy at 20 per cent, a clause setting the minimum negative cost for the first two years of the extended law at a lower level than would prevail for the remainder of the life of the bill and abolition of the stipulation which now sets forth the scenario writer must be British.

His paper led into the discussion of the possibility and advisability of a British First National. He supported the proposal of the floor but pointed out any such plan would have to be modified to meet the requirements of English law. He said, however, he regarded such a step as a logical development in the near future. Again touching upon the status of the quota, he urged the conference to take a determined stand on reduced percentages as well as to demand a quality clause written into the Films Act in order to eliminate the "pound-a-foot-quickie."

Television Demonstrated

British exhibitors saw a first public demonstration of full-scale television on a theatre screen. The Baird process was the one used. The demonstration suggested a great improvement was essential before television became a commercial proposition for theatres. Magnification destroyed detail and impaired definition.

Censor Executive Decries Horror Pictures; Television Demonstrated; Maxwell Praises U. S. Distributors' Attitude

Captain A. G. D. West, lecturer, told the delegates there was nothing to worry about for four or five years. In his paper, "Television and the Cinema," Mr. West gave it as his opinion that the best results currently were obtained by telecine-scanning which uses film as an intermediary in all transmissions. The operating cost of £12 per hour is saved on repeat performances, he added.

Maxwell Praises U. S. Attitude

John Maxwell, chairman of Associated British Pictures, Ltd., paid a striking tribute to the leaders of the American industry on his arrival after his visit to New York.

"I am very well satisfied with my visit, during which I had the pleasure of meeting the heads of the leading distributing companies," he declared. "Mr. Dent is remaining to carry on negotiations which I originated and I am satisfied that he will be able to arrange for the distribution of a substantial number of our pictures in the United States. I do not expect he will be able to return for two or three weeks yet.

"All the executives I met were receptive and sympathetic to the idea of distributing a number of British pictures in the States. I could not have desired to meet people more friendly and helpful.

"I found no prejudice whatever against British pictures getting into America, provided they had entertainment value for that country."

Newsreel Theatre Circuit

Percy N. Furber, chairman of the board of Trans-Lux Movies Corporation, has closed a deal in London with Will Evans and Lord Beaverbrook. It is understood they plan a circuit of newsreel theatres in England and on the Continent, using Trans-Lux equipment. Two will be constructed immediately, it is understood.

The number of films passed during May, 1935, by the British Board of Censors was 20 per cent over the number in May, 1934, according to a report to the U. S. Department of Commerce from Assistant Trade Commissioner Henry E. Stebbins in London.

In films longer than 3,000 feet, this was an increase of 37.5 per cent over May, 1934, while under 3,000 feet the increase was 11.3 per cent.

FRED MEYER'S COMMITTEE GETS RESULTS
PICTURE FOLK LEAD IN AIR-MINDEDNESS
STUDIOS DROP 30 PRESS CORRESPONDENTS
FOURTEEN FILMS FINISHED, TEN STARTED

SHOWMEN have an indirect reassurance from the Universal studio that a steady flow of quality films may be expected, due to a new system of production coordination just instituted by Fred S. Meyer, executive studio manager.

One evening each week, a meeting of the newly formed "Executive Studio Committee" is being held. This Committee consists of Mr. Meyer, Malcolm S. Boylan, scenario editor; Jerry Sackheim, story editor; Dan Kelly, casting director; Al Hickson, exhibitor and former chain booker; Martin Murphy, production manager; John LeRoy Johnston, publicity chief; Maurice Pivar, editorial supervisor; and associate producers Paul Kohner, E. M. Asher, Julius Bernheim, Ben Vershcleiser, Edmund Grainger, Nat Ross, Henry MacRae, Irving Starr and David Diamond. Carl Laemmle, Sr., is the ex-officio member, but usually does not exercise his privilege of sitting in on the meetings, preferring to act on the full minutes which reach his desk on the mornings after the meetings.

The story editor selects the cream of material submitted to his department during each week, and provides each committee member with synopses. Following discussions, each man votes for or against purchase and signs his ballot. A majority vote is necessary to recommend a property for the consideration of Carl Laemmele, Sr.

Trained production brains subject each story to an almost clinical analysis during the discussions. Inherent weakness of any tale quickly is brought to light. On the other hand, a story which has the germ of a great idea, but which needs development, has a real chance for consideration in the debate which precedes balloting.

Options on players' contracts are discussed. So are casts for forthcoming productions. The outstanding picture of the week among other studios is previewed. Players' tests are shown. The executive committee recommends only, all final decisions resting with Carl Laemmle, Sr.

Most Air-Minded

Picture folk, as a class, are more air-minded than any other business or profession, according to a survey just completed for C. C. Mosley, president of Grand Central Airport, Glendale.

In the last month, 12,315 passengers were queried as they boarded or alighted from planes at Glendale. They were asked their business, how much they traveled, and whether they used planes exclusively or only occasionally. From the answers it was learned that 65 per cent of the passengers were connected in some way with the film industry, and the others were divided almost equally in other lines. It was further found that 79 per cent of these picture folk travel by plane exclusively, whereas this was true of only 62 per cent of those in other businesses and 56 per cent of those in professions.

Fourteen Features Completed

Production wheels whirled at a merry pace last week as 14 features were finished and 10 started. All the new pictures and practically all the completed ones are on the new season's program. Major studios are credited with all the new work and 12 of the 14 finished.

Paramount and MGM, with three each, are in front with newly starting pictures. At the former studio, cameras started turning on the initial sequences of "So Red the Rose." With King Vidor directing, the cast features Margaret Sullavan, Pauline Lord, Randolph Scott, Henry Ellerbe, Samuel Hinds, Elizabeth Patterson, Dickie Moore, Daniel Haynes and Alfred Delecambre. As a companion piece, "Rose of the Rancho" also went into work. The cast includes John Boles, Gladys Swarthout, Charles Bickford, H. B. Warner, Louise Carter, Charlotte Granville, Herbert Williams and Willie Howard. Marion Gering is directing. On location, work started on "Hop a Long Cassidy," in which William Boyd, Paula Stone, Jimmy Ellison, Charles Middleton, Robert Warwick, Kenneth Thompson, Frank McGlynn, Jr., and Willie Fung will be seen. Howard Bretherton is directing.

Keeping the pace, MGM started "Black Chamber," with William Powell, Rosalind Russell, Binnie Barnes, Sterling Holloway, Lionel Atwill, Sidney Bracey, Charles Grapewin and Walter King. William K. Howard directs. Also under way is "Tarzan Returns," with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan again in the lead roles and John Buckler and William Henry included in the cast. James McKay is directing. Last of the trio is "Pursuit," in which Sally Eilers, Chester Morris and Charles Butterworth are featured. Erwin L. Marin is directing.

At Radio "Old Man Murphy" (temporary title) started. The cast lists James Barton, Margaret Callahan, Addison Randall, William Harrigan, Maureen Delaney, Marjorie Gateson, Ray Mayer and Clifford Jones. Charles Vidor is directing.

Warner's "Romance in a Glass House" is the tenth starting picture. Principal players are Delores Del Rio, Everett Marshall, Verree Teasdale, Frank McHugh, Phillip Reed, Jane Froman, William Gargan, Guy Kibbee and Berton Churchill. Busby Berkeley is directing.

Eight Studios Complete Films

The completed work was distributed among eight studios with Warner credited with three. First to move to the cutting rooms, "The Irish in Us," again teams James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, with Olivia de Haviland, Frank McHugh, Mary Gordon and Allen Jenkins heading the support. Shooting also wound up on "Little Big Shot," in which will be seen Robert Armstrong, Glenda Farrell, Edward Everett Horton, Sybil Jason, Jack LaRue, Arthur Vinton, Edgar Kennedy, Joseph Sauers, Marc Lawrence, Murray Alper, Ward Bond and Addison Richards. Michael Curtiz directed. The last of the trio, "The Real McCoy," will present James Dunn, Claire Dodd, Patricia Ellis, Alan Dinehart, Joseph Crehan and Frankie Darro. Robert Florey directed.

Paramount completed two pictures. "Smart Girl" has Ida Lupino, Kent Taylor, Gail Patrick, Sidney Blackmer, Joseph Cawthorn, Greta Meyer, Pinky Tomlin, Theodore Von Eltz and Harold Minjir, directed by Aubrey Scotto. Also under the wire is "Every Night at Eight," in which are George Raft, Alice Faye, Frances Langford, Patsy Kelly, the Radio Rogues, Harry Barris, Walter Catlett and Eddie Conrad. Raoul Walsh directed both Wanger productions.

Fox finished "Steamboat Bill" and "Curly Top." The first presents Will Rogers, Anne Shirley, Irvin S. Cobb, Eugene Pallette, John McGuire, Berton Churchill, Francis Ford, Roger Imhof, Raymond Hatton, Hobart Bosworth and Stepin Fetchit. John Ford directed. The second is a Shirley Temple feature in which she is supported by John Boles, Rochelle Hudson, Jane Darwell, Rafaela Ottiano.

MGM turned in "O'Shaughnessey's Boy" and "Woman Wanted." The first teams Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper again, along with Spanky McFarland, Sarah Haden, Clarence Muse, Leona Miracle, Willard Robertson and Ben Hendricks. Richard Boleslawski directed. In "Woman Wanted" are Maureen O'Sullivan, Joel McCrea, Lewis Stone, Louis Calhern, Edgar Kenny, Adrienne Ames, Robert Greig.

Radio completed "Leander Clicks," temporary title. The cast includes James Gleason, Zasu Pitts, Ray Mayer, Willie Best, Arthur Stone, Rollo Lloyd, Russell Gleason and Del Henderson. Ray McCary and James Gleason co-directed.

Republic finished "Forbidden Heaven." The cast comprises Charles Farrell, Charlotte Henry, Beryl Mercer, Fred Walton, Phyllis Barry, Eric Wilton, Barry Winton, Eric Snowden. Reginald Barker directed.

"Harmony Lane," a Mascot, is the last of the completed group. In this appear Douglass Montgomery, Evelyn Venable, William Frawley, Adrienne Ames, Florence Roberts, Cora Sue Collins, Joseph Cawthorn, Lloyd Hughes, Ferdinand Munier and David Torrence, directed by Joseph Santley.

Broadway Gondolier

(Warner)

Comedy with Music

A peppy combination of romantic mirth and melody, this production has all that a popular attraction takes in the way of personnel and production values. Speedily paced, its various ingredients of romantic love interest, comedy, light drama, suspense, surprise in situations, music and intriguing production values are so expertly blended that the lengthy running time hardly is noticed. Essentially the show is a radio broadcast story, but there's little that is formula about it. Novel in conception, in the manner in which the whole thing is bound together, the picture has the appearance of being entirely different from the beaten track of musical comedy. This quality, in addition to the worth of cast personnel, colorful production settings, and surprising twists that are taken, looms as a potential factor in publicizing the show.

In the hurly burly of New York taxi life, Purcell has a grand voice and a penchant for singing while at work. Studying under Professor deVinci, his impromptu rendition of an operatic aria attracts the attention of a couple of slightly tipsy music critics who give him a recommendation to Richards, manager of a radio station. Love at first sight on the part of Alice, Richard's secretary, prompts her to get Dick an audition before Mrs. Flangenheim, sponsor of a national cheese advertising program. A mixup in which Dick, absent, is substituted for by the Professor, is a tragic thing and his career seems finished at the start.

But the great music lover, de Vinci, decides that training in Italy is all that Dick needs. As a gondolier on the canals of Venice, the taxi-driving songbird again attracts the attention of Mrs. Flagenheim, accompanied by Alice, who has come to Europe in search of a voice that will make her cheese program the sensation of air waves. She doesn't know that Dick and de Vinci are the pair that once caused her so much grief. The melange returns to New York. As the Venetian songster, Dick is a sensation, until one night, placed on the spot and about to be unmasked, tiring of the deception foisted upon him, he blurts out that he is the taxi-driving-gondolier-punting boy of little old New York. Disappearing, he makes life a bedlam for Mrs. Flagenheim, de Vinci and Alice as armies of listeners demand "How come." Alice, heartbroken, is conducting a frantic telephone search of New York when she hears a voice coming over the loudspeaker. Rushing to the broadcasting room, she finds Dick singing as he never sang before. Mrs. Flagenheim's triumph is transformed into a radio wedding for the lovers.

Just taking advantage of what the picture offers appears to be all that is necessary to make this attraction a real money getter. It's a natural for smart and tricky exploitation in which the limit is only one's ingenuity and desire to work. Besides Powell and his singing of four or five appealing numbers, there is also the broadcasting of the Mills Brothers, Ted Fio-Rito and his band, the hillbilly Canova family and the Singing Cop. Exciting and appealing heart interest motivates the romantic phases and there is a load of comedy which, in featuring Menjou and Louise Fazenda, almost turns the picture into a laugh riot.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Anna Karenina

(MGM - David O. Selznick)

Drama

Out of Tolstoy's great tragic love story a new Garbo is born. For showmen, whether theirs is a clientele in which the intelligentsia predominates or is composed mainly of the masses, this fact seems to be the most valuable exploitation asset. Not that there is any lack of worth in supporting cast personnel, lavish and colorful production quality, fine acting, intelligent direction and full preservation of the powerful emotional appeal of the original story; but as Anna Karenina, Garbo is not only the generally acknowledged peer of the dramatic artistes, but is also a more beautiful, brilliant and spiritedly natural character than she has been for years.

Though impressive, the story is simple and easily understood. It is that of a woman who gave up everything most precious to every woman for a few moments of blissful infatuation. It tells, in powerful sequences, the story of Anna, loving beyond the pale, deserting her coldly detached husband, surrendering the greatest treasure of her life, the companionship of her adored child, and all things for which every woman lives, only to have the man for whom she sacrificed, soon tiring of his infatuated dream, leave her to accept the fate of all those for whom life holds no promise of happiness.

Garbo's contributions in handling a difficult role and making it sympathetically believable are as described. But in the inspired performance of Fredric March, the sensational work of Freddie Bartholomew and the understanding support of Basil Rathbone, Maureen O'Sullivan, Reginald Owen and the others, there is a wealth of entertainment and exploitation worth.

There is equal worth in the production's lavish values—the toasting, drinking dinner of the Russian officers with its "under the table" gag; the court ball and its colorful dance and the authentic period Russian settings backgrounding the feature's motivating dramatic and romantic theme.

"Anna Karenina" has charm and thrill for the highbrows, those ordinarily supposed to understand and appreciate fine and artistically worthy quantities. The problem confronting operators of theatres out of the deluxe class, however, is something else again. There is little, if any, hoorah in the picture. Patrons who look for "whoop it up" won't find any here. Instead they will see the sincere presentation of a moving and heart-touching story.

But in selling a new Garbo, in a manner that convinces that she is entirely different then ever before; in taking advantage of the value of other cast names, capitalizing on the Count Leo Tolstoy literary prestige and exploiting the picture as an attraction that must be seen, there seems to be a digest of the necessary essentials that should fit all circumstances.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Comedy

What this picture may lack in the way of outstanding names is adequately compensated in the amusement and exploitation worth of its story and production values. Spun out of the popular stuff that makes for rib-tickling comedy, laughs come thick and fast in its action, dialogue and situations. Additionally, the locales are colorful and interesting, running all the way from a rough and tough railroad construction camp to the swanky domains of the pseudo-elite.

As Mom, camp cook and central character, Alice Brady dominates the show. She mothers the boys in a tender though rough way, taking particular delight in harrying the railroad executives in demanding and obtaining better working conditions for her boys. When the pride of her life, niece Wynne, whom she has educated, falls in love, she receives a wire asking her to come and pass inspection on Phil, scion of eastern aristocracy. Aboard the train, traveling in state as the result of the boys' contributions, she meets Wembsleigh, English barrister, who has come to inform her that an English gentleman whom she once befriended has left her his title and a fortune. Acquiring the fortune, as Wembsleigh strives strenuously to transform her into a lady, she eventually arrives at the snobbish Ash-Orcutts. Her title and money giving her a grand prestige, she has a fine time dabbling in all the pastimes of the idle rich from fox hunting to polo. Meanwhile, quick to see the difference between whole cloth and shoddy, she makes things mighty uncomfortable for the Ash-Orcutts while fostering the Wynne-Phil romance. Everything happening as the common people like to have it, Phil is revealed as the only worthy one of the impoverished but snooty social climbers. As the youngsters are married, Mom herself wins a husband in Wembsleigh and as it it is revealed that he is really of royal stock, Mom's title becomes legitimate, more than entitling the pair to go honeymooning in the railroad president's private car.

Hard Rock Harrigan

(Fox-Atherton-Lesser)

Melodrama

This picture combines elements in all its phases that are entertaining and salable. Essentially it is a thrill action melodrama, but there is no lack of the necessary sustaining assets such as romance, drama, comedy and human interest suspense. The locale, one of the great tunnel driving projects connected with the Boulder Dam job, is as intriguing as the story content. Fast moving, but with careful attention given to all necessary details, it wastes little time in plunging right into its story, and in a manner that everyone can readily understand, it wrings all that is worthy out of all its qualities.

The setup is one that quickly captures interest. Harrigan and Riley are two rival tunnel drilling bosses, and the action is a liberal education in how that dangerous and difficult work is accomplished. They are also rivals for the affections of the camp commissary queen, Anderson. Hardrock gets a little the better of the shuffle. Naturally everything leads up to a point where only a fistic combat is to decide which is the better man, both as a drill boss and lover. Trapped in a cave-in with his protege, McGinnis, Hardrock is rescued by Riley at great personal risk. His idea in saving his rival, however, is only that he may have the pleasure of beating him up. However, on the eve of the fight, the injured Hardrock learns from the camp doctor that strenuous action would be fatal to Riley's weak heart. He is branded a coward by the workmen and made to suffer Riley's sneering abuse, but the facts eventually become known. When Riley learns the truth about himself, he boldly tells the men that Hardrock is a real hero in permitting himself to appear a quitter. Harrigan wins the girl as well as Riley's lifelong friendship.

In both story content and production values there is much to sell. The whole thing has a natural human tone and is made to look as though it is an actual incident, with further interest to be found in its locale. Entirely heman in character, there is, however, a neat romantic contrast as well as a line of comedy that should make it appealing to women patrons.

In George O'Brien it has a name with a definite clientele. The story is quite different from that in which he recently has appeared and somewhat of the character of several in which he was seen in the early years of his career, and should have a stimulating effect in creating interest among his followers. Exploitation that capitalizes upon all the publicity that has been given Boulder Dam and its associated projects the last few years should prove helpful in selling the show.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

In Caliente

(First National)

Musical Comedy

A musical with comedy a dominant note, this is entertaining material, with the title song and one other of the quality which should make them popular, a cast of strong names for the marquee, in addition to several elaborate but not sensational dance routines. With more of comedy story, and less of spectacular ensemble effects, with less that is eye-filling and more that is laugh-provoking than has been true of previous Warner musical shows, this should present no problem in selling for the exhibitor, no matter where he may be.

Set almost entirely in Caliente in Mexico, the atmosphere is one of gay holiday making in a land of sunshine and song. The cast is headed by Dolores Del Rio, attractive and capable; Pat O'Brien, in a role somewhat different from his recent appearances; Edward Everett Horton, comedian with an appreciative following; Glenda Farrell, Leo Carrillo, Phil Regan and Winifred Shaw, vocalists, and the De Marcos dance team, who perform effectively in one scene.

The cast names, the fact that this is another in the Warner musical series, the emphasis on the comedy and a romance that is fraught with comic difficulty for the man, and eventually for the woman who led him on as a means of a vengeance and then found the tables turned, are selling factors. Through it all runs the frantic effort of the man's companion to keep him on the straight and narrow, and out of feminine clutches, only to find in the end that he has cast himself into those very clutches. Horton, as that companion, is the pivot about whom swings the greater part of the comedy, and he gives his usual effective performance.

O'Brien is the editor and publisher of a smart New York magazine, Horton his silent partner. O'Brien has managed to get himself engaged to the often-married, gold-digging Miss Farrell, a situation which is abhorrent to Horton. In a moment when O'Brien has taken too much, Horton carries him off to Caliente for a vacation, and away from scheming Miss Farrell. There he restrains O'Brien's effort to leave for New York only when the errant publisher glimpses the startlingly attractive Miss Del Rio, famous concert dancer, in Caliente on a vacation. Carrillo is her dollar-pursuing manager.

Horton, as a last resort, engages Miss Del Rio, whose identity he does not know, to distract O'Brien's attention from Miss Farrell and thought of returning to New York. She accepts readily, when she learns that O'Brien is the editor whose published criticism of her appearance in New York the year before had caused her to lose considerable prestige and her manager a number of dollars. She plans revenge.

Miss Farrell realizes something is in the wind, makes numerous telephone calls, and then heads for Caliente, while O'Brien pursues the angling Miss Del Rio. All this is against an effective background of song and dance and comedy especially. Miss Del Rio decides to appear at a party at the hotel, O'Brien realizes what has happened, and finally persuades Miss Del Rio to accept his explanation of the criticism, and to believe that he loves her. Miss Farrell walks in, Miss Del Rio walks out, and O'Brien pursues her, while Miss Farrell and Horton pursue him. Miss Farrell hears the size of Horton's bank account and before he knows it is being married to her, while O'Brien and Miss Del Rio do likewise.

Lively, engaging musical comedy material, the film may be sold anywhere, any time.—Aaronson, New York.

Mad Love

(MGM)

Shocker

Keyed to blood-chilling horror, this is the kind of production legitimately permitting promulgation of the old showmanship idea that it is only for those who have strong constitutions, vivid imaginations and well controlled nerves. It is entirely a mental and physical shocker in which all other theatrical qualities, save a few dashes of character comedy, are ignored.

With Peter Lorre creating a remarkable but detestable character, to whom no sympathy possibly can accrue, "Mad Love," localed in Paris, is the story of a lustful maniac but genius surgeon. Gogol desires Yvonne, star of a small shudder show and wife of Orlac, great concert pianist. With nothing omitted of its dreadful gruesomeness, Rolla, a murderer, is guillotined. Simultaneously Orlac's hands are crushed in a railroad wreck. Knowing his ability, yet full of fear and hatred, Yvonne pleads with Gogol to save her husband's hands.

Amputating the talented members, Gogol replaces them with the knife throwing hands of the decapitated Rollo. Meanwhile, through his own dialogue, the power of suggestion and the frenzied comedy antics of reporter Reagan to get a sensational story, Gogol creates the illusion that he has restored life to the dead convict. Gogol exerts every trick and plea to bend Yvonne to his desire and Orlac finds that instead of regaining their piano mastery his hands want to throw knives and kill.

Learning this, Gogol practicing further fiendish cruelty on his victim, uses a weird hypnotic psychology to convince Orlac that he is a killer. Arrested on suspicion of killing his father, although the finger prints on the

He, returning in the guise of Rollo and thinking that he is addressing a wax figure of Yvonne, revels in the glories of his beastiality. The statue comes to life. As terror stricken Yvonne pleads with the amazed Gogol, officers, Orlac and Reagan batter at the doors. Trapped, knowing he is doomed, the monster would take Yvonne to eternity with him by strangling her with her own hair. A narrow opening is made in the door; Orlac's "Hands" throw a knife that sinks into Gogol's heart.

For out and out horror fans, this is a rare dish. Horror being its sole attribute, there is no mystery and very little of anything else except the comedy contributions of Ted Healy and the frowsy maid, May Beatty. Yet for those who appreciate the worth of dramatic art, the performance of Peter Lorre is almost sure to cause much talk. The patrons may not like the things he has to do, but they cannot help but admire the way in which he does them.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Spring Tonic

(Fox)

Comedy

A rather hare-brained comedy, this picture, adopted from a play by Ben Hecht and Rose Caylor, is somewhat haphazard and borders closely, and often, on the slapstick. A girl, disgusted with the dignity and formality of her fiance and annoyed by everlasting rehearsals for her wedding, drives away in search of anything, but chiefly romance. She thinks she has found it, but learns better, while her fiance learns that his method has been wrong and rights it, finally, for a happy reconciliation.

En route there appear an escaped tiger from a circus, its feminine trainer, and that trainer's cheap, romantically inclined husband, singing to the stars, making love to every girl he sees, a pair of acrobatic moonshine makers, country hicks and noisy guns, a more or less deserted house in the woods, a maid who is afraid of her own shadow, and sundry comings and goings, some of which are amusing.

Lew Ayres, as the dignified fiance; Claire Trevor, as the romance-hungry girl; Zasu Pitts, as the frightened maid; Jack Haley as a newspaper reporter; Walter King as the romantic troubadour, and Jack Durant and Frank Mitchell as the acrobatic moonshiners, make up the cast.

The selling is likely to be most effective along the comedy route, with an indication of the story theme of the young man who realizes suddenly that his bride-to-be wants romance rather than dignity and supplies that, plus some he-man tactics in place of his bespectacled calmness and reasoning.

Miss Trevor, fed up with wedding rehearsals, steals out of the house with her maid, Miss Pitts, and heads northward in her car. The two, in the dead of night, land at an abandoned hotel, where the moonshiners have their headquarters, and find a room for the night. At about this time, King, annoyed by the close watch his trainer-wife keeps on him, walks off into the night with his guitar, after releasing the tiger.

The countryside is aroused, the reporter goes on the trail, and King finds his way to Miss Trevor's window, where he serenades her. She, in a particularly receptive mood, lets him in to make love to her, while Miss Pitts, sent to the kitchen for food, goes from one fright to another. Eventually she finds a telephone, calls Ayres, and he starts after them in his car. When he arrives, he finds Miss Trevor determined not to marry him, King still among those present, and the farmers hunting the tiger with barking guns all over the woods.

Finally King's wife catches up with him, has him tied to a chair, after Miss Trevor had gone to the hay mow in the barn at his bidding. The tiger arrives there at the same time as Ayres, who just received a piece of needed advice from the errant King about women and romance, and strong arm tactics. With a whip Ayres quiets the tiger until its trainer arrives, and then proceeds to show Miss Trevor that he has learned his lesson well.—Aaronson, New York.

Symphony of Living

(Invincible)

Interesting although somewhat dramatic material, this independently-produced picture offers something in the way of a lesson in the proper respect due parents by their children. The chief strength of the film lies in the performance of the role of the ill-treated widower-father by Al Shean. His portrayal of the beaten man whose love and affection are scorned makes of the character a living and sympathy-inspiring figure.

In support of Shean are Evelyn Brent, his daughter; John Darrow, his son; Charles Judels, fellow-musician; Albert Conti, symphony orchestra manager; Lester Lee, grandson. The film in its entirety revolves about the old man, his pride in his own accomplishments, his accident and poverty, desertion by his two children, rehabilitation and finally the musical success of the grandson he did not know he had, which is a personification of the success he had missed.

The story, tied in with the strong title, may well carry the burden of the selling, with Shean's performance well warranting stress on his name, and Miss Brent's for whatever it may be worth.

Shean is a first violin in the symphony orchestra, happy and proud of his music, treated shamefully by Darrow and Miss Brent. Then comes promotion to the post of concert master, a long cherished ambition, and almost simultaneously an accident to his hand which makes it impossible for him ever to play well again. His daughter wires from a resort that she has just married a wealthy man, his son deserts him, and the old man is unable to find work of any sort. Eventually he is reduced to playing his violin along the streets. One night he is found by Judels, a former friend in the orchestra, and Conti, the manager. They take him to Judels' home, and establish him in a violin-teaching studio.

Miss Brent's son, meanwhile, has grown into a talented violinist, despite his mother's efforts to prevent him from playing. His parents separate, the boy is left with a nurse and she takes him to Shean, as his music teacher. The boy develops into a violin prodigy, plays at a concert successfully, and suddenly Shean meets his daughter and finds out that the boy is his own grandson. Miss Brent refuses to permit the son to continue to play until he has had additional training, and will not let him accept an engagement as soloist with the symphony, Shean's own greatest ambition.

The parents carry the case of the boy's custody to the courts, a referee is appointed, and the boy, given his choice, decides to stay with his grandfather. The picture concludes as the boy makes a tremendously successful appearance as symphony soloist.

Having little of romance, little comedy, this, as straight dramatic material, well handled, carries a strong moral tone.—Aaronson, New York.

Drama

Focused upon the manner in which a restaurant counter girl, happy with her "boy friend" and cheap dance hall contests, is suddenly thrown into the position of being a long lost daughter of wealthy parents in order to save a woman's life, and finds mental problems and a pursuing past hard to bear, this picture is interesting dramatic entertainment, with perhaps a bit greater appeal to the feminine patronage.

Romance and occasional comedy have their places in the story, the romance running into serious complications when the girl fails to indicate to the man she loves that her past has not been the early career of a girl of wealth and culture. The idea of the girl losing her identity, assuming another name and another personality to bring health to a long bereaved mother, and finding herself too attached to the couple she helped, should be one with which the exhibitor, phrasing his selling carefully, may attract the attention at least of the feminine contingent, relying upon them to bring the men to the theatre. Although the problem of the father is presented, there is little of an active nature in the material.

Sally Eilers has the lead, the support including Raymond Milland, Henry O'Neill, Katharine Alexander, Chick Chandler and the infantile and attractive Baby Jane, an appealing child. The story, therefore, and the implication in the title, will be more important to the selling of the picture than the names, with the possible exception of that of Miss Eilers.

O'Neill and Miss Alexander, happily married, have a daughter, Baby Jane. The child is kidnaped. Eighteen years pass, the two, especially the mother, never giving up hope. Miss Alexander falls ill, her life is despaired of and she calls for the long missing Mary. The doctor suggests that her life depends on the appearance of Mary. Wandering aimlessly, O'Neill finds himself in a cheap restaurant, where Miss Eilers is waitress. She sympathizes, he follows a hunch and offers her a price to pose as the missing Mary.

She does, successfully, and Miss Alexander passes the crisis in her illness. O'Neill, realizing the necessity of preserving the fiction, prevails upon the girl to live at their home, continue for the sake of the convalescent woman. Against her will, she agrees, and finds herself, on a sudden visit to the dance hall, where she wins a cup with old boy friend Chandler, intensely disliking the tawdriness of the place. She is neither the restaurant girl nor the wealthy daughter, in her own mind.

Accidentally Chandler discovers her identity, and when she meets and falls in love with wealthy young Milland, he tries blackmail, with the help of a man who poses as a waiter in the O'Neill household. Milland agrees to pay off, Miss Eilers leaves for the dance hall, and she learns that the waiter kidnaped and killed the little girl years before. Chandler is frightened off, and Milland arrives in time to capture the waiter as he tries to escape.

Milland knows Miss Eilers' background but cares nothing about it, and Miss Eilers returns to the O'Neill home, where Miss Alexander refuses to hear explanations, satisfied to accept Miss Eilers as her daughter.—AARONSON, New York.

The Thirty Nine Steps

(Gaumont-British)

Melodrama

Alfred Hitchcock, who showed in "The Man Who Knew Too Much" an appreciation of American box office values not too plentiful even today in British studios, has again made real entertainment out of a "thrill" plot. The original in this case is one of the most popular novels written by John Buchan, now Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General designate of Canada. The director has taken very extended liberties with the book, but he has the justification that his variations have lifted it out of the class of war-thrillers and added a love interest and an excellent atmosphere of humor.

The picture offers a series of high-speed pursuit episodes, with the hero making a spectacular train descent from the famous Forth Bridge, a good, humorous interlude, when he is handcuffed to the girl who gave him up, and an effective last scene when the spy gang is rounded up in a London variety hall. Settings include a series of effective shots of the Scottish moors. The cast is a strong one, Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll heading it, with support from such as Godfrey Tearle, Helen Haye, Peggy Ashcroft, Frank Cellier and John Laurie.

Hannay, young Canadian on holiday in London, comes to the assistance of a girl in danger in a riot which breaks out in the East End music hall during an act, "Mr. Memory." In Hannay's flat the girl reveals that she is a freelance spy, engaged at the moment in watching a gang which is after the plans of a new aeroplane engine perfected by the British government. She is killed before she can tell him the whole story, but says her next step was to have been a call on a certain Professor Jordan in a remote village in the Scottish Highlands.

Hannay evades the watchers and boards the express for the North. The police search for him while the train is approaching the famous Forth Bridge. Hannay tries to evade them by entering a carriage in which a girl, Pamela, is traveling alone, but she defeats his plan of posing as her lover by denouncing him. He jumps from the train and escapes. He reaches Professor Jordan's house, to find the latter is the head of the enemy gang. Pamela, at a London political meeting, recognizes and again denounces him. "Detectives" seize him, compel the girl also to enter their car and, out of town, are revealed as disguised members of the gang. They handcuff Hannay and the girl together for greater security, but Hannay, dragging the girl with him, manages to escape from the car on the moor. Free, she overhears a conversation which convinces her that he is speaking the truth and also provides a clue.

"Mr. Memory" is again on the bill. Hannay asks the performer, "What are the Thirty-nine Steps?" "Memory" automatically begins to recite the formula of the secret engine. Professor Jordan, in a box, shoots him. He is captured and it is revealed that Hannay had correctly dissected the plot, to get the secret out of the country by using the freak memory of the performer instead of a written record.

Star values are an obvious selling angle. The plot has originality and speed in presentation. The plight of the girl, handcuffed to a man whom she thinks a murderer, but whom she has to pretend is a lover, is an angle for novelty exploitation.—ALLAN LONDON.

WANT MORE COAST NEWS

"Our papers, instead of wanting less, want more from Hollywood, even though some of it is acknowledged bokum," commented Paul Miller, news editor of the Associated Press to 40 members of the Variety Club in Kansas City recently.

"For that reason we have to maintain a large bureau at Los Angeles. Three men and one woman on styles devote their entire time to covering Hollywood. Their activities are coordinated with persons in New York who cover the movies from that end. We now have to have a regular daily feature from Hollywood with a weekly preview."

Asked to tell the difference between publicity and news, Mr. Miller commented that "even if what comes out of Hollywood is boknm it still is good because people want to read it."

Kings of the Turf

(Vitaphone)

Interesting

An interesting and active subject, this details the training of the aces of the sport of kings, horse racing. The camera follows the training from the time the colt is first made to feel a saddle and the weight of a boy until he leaves the post and comes into the stretch in the big race. All the important elements of the training of race horses are pictured in interesting fashion, and there is real action in the closing race sequence, which is a reproduction of the recent big Santa Anita opening on the Coast and the major race event there.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Buddy in Africa

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

An amusing Looney Tune number, in which Buddy is an African trader. He trades with the natives, with results which are amusing, judged by cartoon standards. When a small monkey tries to steal something, Buddy hits him and the little one brings his gorilla father. But when they both get the worst of it, the gorilla joins Buddy in chastising the young one. The youngsters should enjoy it especially.—Running time, 7 minutes.

Amusing

A fairly amusing cartoon in which Oswald, the Rabbit, usher in a vaudeville house of the gay Nineties, watches the man on the flying trapeze and listens to the star sing of the villain. When the villain materializes and does pursue her, Oswald goes to the rescue, routing the villain and saving the girl—for himself.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Academy Takes Up Studio Materials Study

The Academy research council's survey of the acoustic and sound proofing characteristics of all types of set and construction materials used in studios got under way last week with the first meeting of the newly appointed subcommittee.

The survey will cover the sound resisting and sound absorption qualities of all types of plasters, bricks, wood wall panels, etc., as well as a study of the characteristics of fire resistance, ease of handling in construction, etc. Upon the completion of the survey, which will include comprehensive tests of the various materials under consideration, the council will issue a report to the producing companies covering the findings, for the guidance of sound, art and construction departments.

ANTITRUST FIGHT LOST BY FULLER IN TEXAS

But Independents Sue Loew's, MGM in Chicago, and Fox West Coast in Los Angeles

Distributors were one up on independent exhibitors this week in anti-trust suit court contests, winning over R. M. Fuller, in Texas, although an impending settlement of the Chicago Astor theatre complaint is expected to favor that independent, making the score even for the week.

However, distributors were faced with more court trouble when S. Pouras and A. Simos, independents operating the Rex theatre at Bakersfield, Cal., acting through counsel, Seymour Chotiner, filed in Los Angeles federal court a conspiracy and antitrust action to restrain Fox West Coast Theatres and several of the large companies from allegedly preventing their obtaining first run product. The plaintiffs ask damages of $425,000.

In Chicago the Greater Chicago Theatres Corporation filed a complaint in federal court charging Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Reliance Realty Corporation, Loew's, Inc., and Nicholas M. Schenck and E. A. Schiller, Loew-Metro officers, with conspiracy to coerce and intimidate exhibitors into contracting for MGM product on a preferred playing time and percentage basis by actions and threats of actions violating the interstate commerce and antitrust laws. Specifically the complainant seeks an injunction to restrain Loew's from proceeding with construction of a theatre at Oak Park and with any others contemplated in competitive zones.

The situation in St. Louis remained in statu quo, with both defendant distributors and the forces of the Government, prosecuting under a criminal indictment, marking time pending a decision from United States district judge George Moore on the demurrer filed on behalf of RKO Distributing Corporation and its president, Ned E. Depinet, and also on the distributors' request for a bill of particulars in the same case.

U. S. Investigators in Dallas

Department of Justice investigators were reported to be active on Film Row at Dallas in connection with an anticipated federal investigation of alleged distributor aggression against independent owners.

In a suit of interest to all independents, the plea of R. M. Fuller, Palestine (Texas) theatre operator, for an order restraining large distributors from refusing to sell him their product was denied by Judge W. H. Atwell in federal district court at Dallas.

The defendants were Robb & Rowley Theatres, Inc., operating theatres in several places in competition to Mr. Fuller, including houses at Palestine, Waxahachie, Sweetwater, Hillsboro, Oak Cliff and elsewhere. Co-defendants were the nine large distributors.

Counsel for Mr. Fuller contended that there existed a conspiracy between the Robb and Rowley circuit and the distributors to keep him from obtaining product and hence forcing him out of business.

Defense counsel offered to prove that the distributors had contracts to supply the theatre circuit with product exclusively in Palestine and that these contracts were made prior to the time Mr. Fuller opened his theatre at Palestine.

The plaintiff, in suing for a temporary injunction, alleged that as a result of a conspiracy the market is closed to him and that the only product he can obtain, with few exceptions, consists of westerns one year old. The court ruled that no proof of conspiracy had been shown, although it expressed sympathy for the independent.

25 Cent Admissions Argued

Analogous to the Fuller case is the Hoblitzelle "twenty-five-cent admission case," which has been occupying considerable of the distribution-exhibition limelight in Texas. In the Hoblitzelle arguments, John Maroney, Interstate Circuit attorney, placed almost his whole defense upon the right of the copyright holder (distributor) to dispose of his service as unrestrainedly as he pleases, with the corollary right of the lessee to negotiate for service exclusively in his own interest.

Paralleling this, Mike Rice, Robb and Rowley attorney in the Fuller contest, pleaded the copyright privileges of the distributor and exhibiting firm.

Again, in the Hoblitzelle case, Interstate set out that subsequent runs are damaging to the first runs and that the first runs must be allowed to make trade moves that will protect the "big" investments in metropolitan houses, both in the interest of the exhibitor owner and the distributor in connection with the larger rentals received, such rentals being necessary, it was said, to provide a steady flow of "high-class" product.

In the Fuller case, H. B. Robb, E. H. Rowley, of the R. and R. circuit, several of the Dallas branch managers, and R. J. O'Donnell, of Interstate, all testified that first-run rentals are a necessity in the business and that subsequent runs damage and jeopardize the box office returns of the first runs, and, therefore, the first run rental returns to the distributor. This condition, they asserted, justifies measures of control for the protection of the best interests of the trade as a whole.

In the Fuller case, the court did not touch the point of copyright, but it is inherent in the pleadings and will have to be adjudicated in an appeal, if one is taken.

Chicago Case May Be Settled

Judge Woodward in federal court in Chicago ordered continued until July 8th the Astor theatre case against affiliated circuits and large distributors in which the independent charges conspiracy to withhold film service.

The court, however, urged the litigants to make a settlement out of court and it was understood they were proceeding with that end in view. Judge Woodward added that if no settlement is reached he would issue a temporary injunction July 8th restraining the distributors from continuing any restrictions against the ten-cent admission price policy of the Astor, of which the distributors complained.

The case is being accepted in Chicago as a test of the distributors' right to prohibit ten-cent admissions.

Speculation in Dallas over the reported appearance of Department of Justice agents along Film Row reverted immediately to any possible connection with the demands of the Department made on the Code Authority for its records of cases and complaints filed under the code in that territory.

Although Judge Moore in St. Louis has not intimated that he will set the Government's case against distributors for trial, it is generally believed there that he probably will not depart from the custom of not holding sessions of the United States district court in either July or August.

Government counsel are seeking an early trial, while defense attorneys have asked that the case be docketed for the fall. Should Judge Moore grant the request of distributors for a bill of particulars the litigation undoubtedly would go over to September or later. Defense counsel have expressed the belief that their demurrer on behalf of RKO and Mr. Depinet will be sustained by the court.

Principally involved, as defendants, are Warner Bros., RKO, Paramount and certain of their officers and subsidiaries. The case grew out of complaints filed with the Government by the Ambassador, Grand Central and Missouri theatres, charging discrimination on product and service.

Decisions Divided On Money Nights

Merchandise devices—"Bank Nights," "Screeno" and such—employed by exhibitors as box office stimulants, received legal setbacks this week in Chicago and New Orleans, were threatened with a court test in Detroit, won a decision in Boston courts and continued the subject of a battle in Cleveland.

As Bank Night patent owners warned exhibitors that infringements will be prosecuted, the Louisiana state's attorney declared "Screeno" a violation of the gambling law and threatened prosecution of theatres using the plan.

Chicago's police department was campaigning against Money Nights, while in Detroit a court test on both Bank Nights and Screeno loomed as Jacob Schreiber, owner of the Colonial theatre, obtained an injunction in circuit court restraining police and investigators of the prosecutor's office from interfering with the games as played in his theatre.

Federal court at Boston denied a second demand for an injunction against "Gold Mine," premium plan handled in that territory by James Kennedy, who originally handled Bank Nights in New England.

Hearing of testimony by Saul Danaceau, appointed referee by the court of appeals in the Cleveland Bank Nights case, which was set for Monday, was postponed until July 8.

Judge Frederick Walther in common pleas court refused to grant to the Fountain theatre, operated by Myer Fischer, an injunction to stop Bank Night at the Haltnorth theatre. The court ruled that the game is not unfair competition inasmuch as it does not deceive the public. The case is a test.

ALLIED STATES CALLS REGIONAL MEETINGS

Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association Votes to Join MPTOA; Reorganizing in Cincinnati

Allied States Association of Exhibitors will pursue solutions to independent exhibitors' problems at regional meetings, following last week's New England conference, with a meeting of vice-presidents and members at Indianapolis, on July 10 and 11, and an eastern regional at Atlantic City, August 21 to 23.

Martin G. Smith, Toledo, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, and one of the regional vice-presidents of Allied, with which the Ohio unit is affiliated, issued invitations this week to all independents in Indiana and Kentucky to attend the open meeting at the Claypool Hotel in Indianapolis, where attempts will be made to muster nationwide independent exhibitor strength for a fight to further the Pettengill anti-block booking bill and also the Duffy copyright measure, both pending in Congress. The conference also will analyze new product and sales policies and will carry out the mandates of the recent national Allied convention at Atlanta.

Abram F. Myers, national board chairman; Sidney E. Samuelson, president, New Jersey; H. M. Richey, Detroit; Aaron Saperstein, Chicago, and Al Steffes, Minneapolis, are scheduled to speak. Others of the executive staff who are expected to be present include Ray Branch, Walter Littlefield, Newman Waters, Martin Smith and H. A. Cole.

Mr. Littlefield, Nathan Yamins and Mr. Myers attended last week's regional at Boston, held in conjunction with a meeting of Allied's local affiliate, Independent Exhibitors, at which some 65 owners were present at the Hotel Touraine.

Predicts Product Shortage

President Samuelson predicted a product shortage for 1935-36 and said that the national organization is fighting to effect lower power rates.

The Atlantic City meeting in August, to be attended by state affiliates in the east, will be presided over by Walter Littlefield, and will be held at the same time as the annual convention of Allied States of New Jersey, Mr. Samuelson's home unit, at which he will preside.

Allied of New Jersey's weekly meetings at the Hotel Lincoln in New York will be abandoned after July 16 for a single meeting monthly, to be held at various places in New Jersey, starting at Asbury Park on that date.

State exhibitor organizations were active elsewhere during the week, members of the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association, meeting at Kansas City, Mo., voting to affiliate with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. A group liability insurance plan, intended to reduce liability rates for members, was presented to the convention by John Stapel, president. Officials attending, all directors, included Tom Edwards, Eldon, Mo.; C. L. McVey, Herrington, Kan.; E. B. Danielson, Russell, Kan.; R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Kan., and Mr. Stapel.

The KMTA set up a grievance board, consisting of Frank Cassil, St. Joseph; Tom Edwards, Eldon, Mo., and A. J. Simmons, Lamar, Mo. While carrying full authority of the organization, the committee will be "advisory."

Unit Has Grievance Board

Socalled "evil" effects of commercial motion pictures in theatres were termed vastly overrated. However, members did complain of too much advertising in distributors' feature trailers.

Votes of thanks went to Dubinsky Brothers, Missouri circuit owners, and to Fox Midwest, Kansas, for their efforts during the legislative sessions in their respective states.

A new independent exhibitor organization is being formed at Cincinnati to replace the erstwhile Greater Cincinnati Independent Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, which recently was dissolved. An organization meeting will be held within the month. It is intended to work closely with Cincinnati exchanges and the Film Board with a view to obtaining adjustments of the present clearance schedules. These are claimed to be inequitable. Membership will take in independent owners in the Cincinnati territory, which embraces northern Kentucky towns across the Ohio river, as well as border towns in other nearby states.

The West Virginia Theatre Managers' Association, meeting in annual convention at White Sulphur Springs, reelected S. J. Hyman, Huntington, president, and elected James C. Shanklin, Charleston, to succeed William B. Hines as vice-president. W. H. Holt, Richwood, continues as secretary-treasurer.

The West Virginia owners took a neutral stand on the Pettingill bill, although they named a committee to watch the activities of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. A vote authorized a fight for a preferred playing time bill similar to the measure in Ohio, and for tax reductions. It was the first annual convention, and was attended by most of the theatre owners in the state.

Government A. T. & T. Inquiry Will Not Start Before Fall

The investigation of the Federal Communications Commission into the activities of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company will not get under way officially before next autumn, reports from Washington indicated last week.

The Commission's engineers and accountants will, for the ensuing six months, be engaged in a survey of the field, during which time they are expected to gather information from all parts of the nation covering all phases of the A. T. & T.'s business, including its activities in the equipment field.

Sees Improvement In Midwest Area

There have been no seasonal closings in the western Kansas and Missouri area of the Middlewest, according to Walter Denney, manager of National Theatre Supply in Kansas City. He noted that such a situation had not occurred in any recent previous season.

The sales of his own company, considered something of an index to conditions, were greater on June 15 than for the entire month of June last year. "Prospects for the rest of the year are 100 per cent better than they were a year ago," he said. The branch also has increased its sales staff.

Mr. Denney reported further a material improvement in collections this year, which he attributes to larger grosses. He is convinced there is no overseating condition in the territory, despite the large number of new houses planned or under construction.

More theatre building in the area than any time in the past five years is reported by Larry Larsen, theatre architect and builder, who operates the Civic theatre at Webb City, Missouri.

New sound equipment is being installed by a number of houses. This is one important phase of the improvement activity which seems to be sweeping the area. Don Davis, local sales manager for RCA, reported a number of recent installations. Many theatres are being remodeled, entirely or in part.

Pennsylvania Bans "Youth of Maxim"

The Pennsylvania censor board has banned the film "The Youth of Maxim," scheduled for the Europa theatre in Philadelphia. The film is a Russian picture released in this country by Amkino. The censor board chairman, L. Howell Davis, merely referred to the morals clause of the censor code in announcing the decision.

DuWorld Pictures, American distributors of "Spring Shower," Hungarian film banned by the New York censor, plans to appeal the decision to the courts. Arthur Garfield Hays has been retained as attorney. Paul Fejos produced the film.

Aaron Fox Joins Barkley Circuit

Aaron Fox, former treasurer of Fox Film, brother of William Fox and himself a circuit operator at one time, has been appointed general manager of theatres for the newly formed Barkley Theatres Company, eastern circuit. Stanley Woolf, as unit production manager, will stage revues for the theatres. The Capitol, Albany, will be the second of the circuit, opening next week, the Warburton in Yonkers having been the first. Company offices are at 286 Fifth Avenue, New York.

State Pays Suspects

Governor Curley of Massachusetts has signed a bill authorizing payment of $2,500 each to Louis Berrett and Clement Milway as recompense for their having been wrongfully accused of the murder of an employee of the Paramount at Lynn.

AUSTRALIAN QUOTA ACTION FAILS TO BRING RUSH OF NEW PRODUCERS

Two New Flotations, However, Add Importantly to Production Roster; Expeditionary Films Increases Its Capital

by CLIFF HOLT

Sydney Correspondent

Despite the guaranteed market that the Quota Bill has given them, neither promoters nor outside investors are showing any immediate anxiety to break into the production business. Several weeks have elapsed since the bill appeared on the statute as law, but so far there has been little activity among producers and only two companies actually have registered. Perhaps the reason for this apparent apathy on the part of those who worked hardest for the quota is to be found in the fact that the immediate dissolution of Parliament has delayed the framing of the regulations by which the bill is to be operated, and the trade predicts that the first effects of the law will not be felt until the middle of next year. Furthermore, both the distributor and exhibitor will have almost another 12 months after that time in which to fulfil their quota obligations, so that the intending producer will have plenty of time to wait before rentals start coming in.

Nevertheless, two new flotations add importantly to the present list of Australian producing companies, and between now and the autumn of 1936, local studios are likely to be buzzing cheerily.

With a nominal capital of £50,000 Mastercraft Film Corporation, Ltd., has been before the public for some time, but a more recent flotation is Film Players Corporation, Ltd., which, also capitalized at £50,000, intends to produce "The Burgomaster" under the direction of Harry Southwell. Directors named in the prospectus of this company inspire confidence. They include Sir John Butters, director of Associated Newspapers, Ltd., publishers of the Sydney Sun, Telegraph and sundry publications; W. J. Bradley, K.C., well known barrister of Sydney, and George H. Rayner, society figure.

Claim Foreign Allies

In its prospectus, the company claims to have arranged release in Australia and Great Britain and declares that "an association has been formed with an overseas organization which will afford this company every facility in respect of releases in other countries. Portion of the reserved shares will be held for application by an overseas film company. In this respect, the company will have widespread and powerful interests allied to it, which will ensure successful productions and assured market."

National Studios, Ltd., will not go to the public for money. This venture has been organized for fully 12 months and is now about to start shooting. Gaumont-British engineers are in Sydney to install the British Acoustic recording equipment, together with camera truck, studio run-truck, Miviola booms and other gear.

F. W. Thring, who might justifiably claim to be the pioneer of sound film production in Australia, and who is at the head of the Efftee enterprises in Melbourne, expects the Victorian Government to follow N.S.W.'s lead and bring down quota legislation. If so, he will maintain studios in Melbourne. If not, it is his intention to move to Sydney. At the moment, however, Thring is busy with important theatrical productions and is allowing his production unit to mark time.

Cinesound, which scored sensationally with "On Our Selection," won second prize in the Commonwealth production competition with "The Silence of Dean Maitland," and also earned good revenue with "Grandad Rudd," had been awaiting the return of its production chief, Ken G. Hall, from Hollywood. Mr. Hall is back after a close study of Hollywood methods and some interesting announcements from that quarter can be expected in the immediate future. It is reported that, while in New York, Mr. Hall completed contracts that will have a direct bearing on Cinesound's productions policies and activities.

Indicating greatly increased activity, Expeditionary Films, winner of the production competition with "Heritage," has announced a capital increase from £15,000 to £50,000, and has entered into a new producing agreement with Charles Chauvel, whose work on "Heritage" won for him favorable comparisons by the newspaper critics with the leading directors of Hollywood and Elstree. There is no denying that Mr. Chauvel, who had some years' experience in Hollywood during the silent era, knows his business.

Theatre Alliance Names Elmer Rice as President

Officers and board of directors of Theatre Alliance, elected at the first annual meeting in New York recently, include: Elmer Rice, president; Sam Jaffe, vice-president; Rachel Hartzell, secretary, and George Heller, treasurer. The directors, in addition to the four officers are: Helen Arthur, Beulah Bondi, Barrett H. Clark, Philip Loeb and Vincent Sherman, who will serve from one to three years each.

The organization will start shortly on production for its first repertory season to open in September. A seminar on theatre problems will be part of the curriculum of the apprentice group of Theatre Alliance. Leading theatrical figures will lead the discussions.

Universal Wins Suit Brought by John Hix

Universal, defendant, recently won the suit brought in Los Angeles court by John Hix, who charged infringement of the title of his cartoon feature "Strange As It Seems." He has asked $250,000. Judge Leon R. Yankwich ruled that there is no originality or monopoly in novelty films to a degree sufficient to make them exclusive property.

Mexican Boycott Affects Theatres

by JAMES LOCKHART

Mexico City Correspondent

A boycott, the result of difficulties between theatre operators and employees, threatens to leave Monterey, rapidly becoming an industrial center near the Texas border, without motion picture shows of any kind. The boycott, against all exhibitors, was started as a protest against the dismissal of 22 employees because of alleged demands for a new collective labor contract, and was ordered by the National Federation of Cinematographic Industry Workers. Federation workers in Mexico City are preventing the movement of film from there to Monterey.

The action practically closed the theatres, since direct importation of films from the United States is impossible, in view of the regulation requiring that all films first be previewed by the federal government in Mexico City.

The strike in Mexico City of union employees is expected to extend to eight more neighborhood theatres this week, four large neighborhood houses already having been closed. The strike is considered likely to extend to September as a result of injunctions obtained by the union in the local district court restraining the application of a federal conciliation and arbitration board decree holding the strike to be unjustified, and ordering the houses to open.

The strikers' union posted a bond of $8,000 with the court to guarantee that it will carry out its obligations under the injunction. One house reopened but intimidation by pickets caused patrons to leave. Owners of the theatres involved contend that their business does not warrant the salary increases asked by the strikers.

Queen Asks for Cartoon

The Queen of Italy has addressed a letter to Paramount asking to purchase a print of the Max Fleischer Color Classic, "The Song of the Birds" for her private use. The print is to be presented to the Queen with the compliments of Paramount and the Fleischer organization.

Boston Distributor Moves

Franklyn Productions, independent distributor managed by Gene Gross, has moved its Boston office from Piedmont street to Melrose street, where it has taken quarters with the Wholesome Film Exchange, which becomes physical distributor for Franklyn.

Joins Macfadden

Edward Lethen, formerly with Modern Magazines, has joined the western office of Macfadden Women's Group, publications.

THE CUTTING ROOM

THE REAL McCOY

Warner

This is a newspaper story glorifying the sport page star columnist, made famous by such notables as Runyon, Grantland Rice, Mark Kelly, Dan Parker. The production is spun of swift moving ingredients in which comedy, romance, drama and pathos are combined, highlighted by colorful picturizations of widely diversified sports events.

The yarn is an original by George Bricker, who collaborated with Joel Sayre on the screen play. Direction is by Robert Florey, maker of the recent "Not on Your Life" and "Crashing Society." Bryan Foy is supervising production.

James Dunn, star of many Fox pictures, will be seen in the leading role as McCoy, whose honest writings, particularly in unmasking racketeer influence in amateur and professional sport, have won for his works the sobriquet of "the real McCoy." He is supported by Claire Dodd, a faithless wife, whose associations with the underworld fraternity get Dunn into a jam. Dramatic romance centering about them, the more appealing love interest is carried by Patricia Ellis, with Alan Dinehart in the heavy role. Principal supporting players are Joseph Crehan and Frankie Darro.

Sport production features running through the story cover such events as the annual Rose Bowl football game, prize fight and wrestling matches, baseball, hockey, crew and kindred athletic happenings. While they are worthy as topical exploitation assets, there is also much in story content which should be productive of interest-creating showmanship as it relates to the character dramas of the principal players.

WOMAN WANTED

MGM

In step with the new season's trend, this is a dramatic action picture. It moves to the tune of surprising romance and the menace of racketeering gangdom. The story has a unique premise which sets the stage for its excitement. A lawyer carries on an across-the-light-well flirtation with a girl. Gangsters wreck a police car. The girl of the flirtation dashes into the lawyer's car. She is a convicted murderess, framed by a mob which, before she gets beyond its clutches, thinks she holds a secret dangerous to their safety. Believing the girl's story of innocence as romance is born, the lawyer and girl set out to find the real killer. Harried by the mob, both lives in continual danger, with a triangle situation lent to the romantic angle, the pair outsmart the mobsters, one of whom in dying confesses that he is the perpetrator.

The production teams Maureen O'Sullivan, as the woman wanted both by the law and its enemies, and Joel McCrea. It supports them with a cast of better than usual name value. Lewis Stone is the district attorney; Louis Calhern, the big shot racketeer; Adrienne Ames, the sophisticated socialite who loses McCrea to Miss O'Sullivan, Edgar Kennedy, carrying the principal comedy relief, with Robert Grieg and Noel Madison, William B. Davidson, Granville Bates, Richard Powell and Erville Alderson.

Combining the elements that made gangster pictures such popular attraction, a quality which the federal man cycle has revived, the production majors in action which features several thrilling chases and smashups, but also incorporates an intriguing love story. Publicity that accentuates the entertainment value of these two qualities, together with the value of cast names, should not be a difficult thing to concoct.

SMART GIRL

Paramount

This is a modern story of tangled romantic affairs, embellished by an all-is-not-gold-that-glitters angle. The yarn is an original screen play by Frances Hyland, with added dialogue by Wilson Collison and directed by Aubrey Scotto. Combining an atmosphere of fairy tale fantasy and imaginative realism it concentrates its action on six principals. Two girls, victims of the depression and family charity, meet and fall in love with an equally out of luck youth. Suddenly elevated from poverty to pseudo-riches, one girl, the wrong one, of course, marries him. Then, chiseling with a city slicker stock broker, a smart hick from the sticks outslicks the smart guy from the city in a phoney gold mine deal. Thus the way is opened for the real girl and the real boy to get together after the wrong girl, proving she has a heart of gold, sails to Europe for divorce purposes.

Ida Lupino and Gail Patrick are the rival sisters, with Kent Taylor the one who brings them to the parting of the ways. Sidney Blackmer is the villain whose suave manner is too strong a temptation for Gail to withstand. Pinky Tomlin, creator of "The Last Round Up" and seen in MGM's "Times Square Lady," is the boy who, just as a favor to his pal Taylor, plays upon Blackmer's avaricious tendencies and sells him the goldless gold mine. Most important of the supporting players are Joseph Cawthorn and Greta Meyer, who, together with Tomlin, are entrusted with the story's comedy angles.

The title, which means that the smart girl was dumb and the apparently dumb one smart, in the ways of her sex where a man is concerned, seems to have quite a value when adapted in such a connection as an exploitation feature.

SILK HAT KID

Fox

Although the title may create the impression that this is something sophisticated, it is actually a stirring drama, revolving about six persons and localed in that dangerous section of New York where one minds his own business. It's the story of an ex-trigger man who, brought back to New York to protect a gambling syndicate, is reclaimed by a kindly old character operating a settlement house, to fight a new kind of battle. As an athletic trainer to the budding America of the teeming tenement districts, he becomes one side of a menacing triangle when, brought into open conflict with a gambling czar who is a rival for a girl's affections, he is inspired by the settlement worker to discard guns for the elemental power of fists in deciding the age old better man questions.

The production is adapted from a story by Gerald Beaumont with screen play by Edward Eliscu, Lou Breslow and Dore Schary. Direction is by H. Bruce (Lucky) Humberstone, maker of the recent "Ladies Love Danger."

Lew Ayers, last seen in "Spring Tonic," has the title role. The girl in the case is Mae Clarke, who returned to the screen after a prolonged absence in "The Daring Young Man." Paul Kelly, seen in "Public Hero," is the heavy appearing as the gambler rival for Miss Clarke's affections. William Harrigan, seen in "G Men," has the role of Brother Joe, the settlement house worker, and Billy Lee, the 4-year-old child actor seen in many Our Gangs and in "Wagon Wheels," is the sixth principal. Supporting players include John Qualen, Warren Hymer, Vince Barnett and William Benedict.

Tense drama, accented by unusual romantic interest, both of which qualities are contrasted by an atmosphere of kindly humanness, are the essentials about which a showmanship campaign readily can be adapted.

ALICE ADAMS

Radio

This production is adapted from one of Booth Tarkington's best known stories. It is a dramatic and romantic love story. Unlike most of the author's recent fiction, it deals with adult characters. As the title indicates it is the story of a girl. Maturing, the child of a family in moderate circumstances aspires to elevate her social position and to attain the objective of every maiden, a happy and secure marriage. Rebuffed by new found friends, but terribly in love with a boy, her family suffering financial reverses, her brother succumbing to temptations, her life is a strange mixture of heavenly happiness and worldly despair until the triumphal climax.

Katharine Hepburn is starred in the title role. The supporting cast is of more than ordinary value, as it lists such known performers as Fred MacMurray, currently in Paramount's "Men without Names" and remembered for his performance with Claudette Colbert in "The Gilded Lily"; Frank Albertson, Charles Grapewin, Ann Shoemaker, Evelyn Venable, Hedda Hopper, Janet McLeod and Fred Stone of the noted Montgomery and Stone stage team.

The screen play is by Jane Murfin, whose previous Hepburn picture credits are "Spitfire" and "The Little Minister," and also a collaborator on "Roberta" and "The Fountain," and by Dorothy Yost, who worked on "Roberta" and "The Gay Divorcee." Direction is by George Stevens, whose most recent credit is "Nitwits."

The picture has a small town locale and deals in a deft way with personalities and conditions which Tarkington is an expert in depicting. The prestige of his name, and that of Katharine Hepburn, appear to be the outstanding publicizing features.

FORBIDDEN HEAVEN

Republic

There is something of unusual showmanship value in this production that has the star of "Seventh Heaven," Charles Farrell, in "Forbidden Heaven." In theme, the Christine Jope-Slade story is essentially dramatic and marked by deeply human characterizations on the part of all the players. The locale is London and the subject matter deals with the experiences

Announce Winners Of MGM Contest

Six high school students were announced this week as the winners among 300,000 participants in the contest started six months ago under the auspices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the best essays on the recent MGM picture, "Sequoia." An elaborately planned summer vacation is the prize for the winners.

They are: Sonja Harding, East Orange, N. J., High School; Sydney A. Cahusac, Erasmus Hall High School, New York; Pearl A. Goerdeler, Bushwick High School, New York; Isobel Tuomey, Aquinas High School, La Crosse, Wis.; Oline A. Dandurand, St. Patrick's High School, Kankakee, Ill.; Charles E. Woodhouse, Kent State High School, Kent, Ohio.

To Visit Scene of Film

The six winners will leave New York on July 9 after a sightseeing trip of the city, travel to New Orleans by boat, go from there to Los Angeles where they will be the guests of MGM at the studio, and finally visit Sequoia National Park, scene of the picture, where they will stay at the Giant Forest Lodge.

Alternates selected by the judges were: Ruth Hartquist, St. Patrick's High School, Kankakee, Ill.; Madison Farnum, Mount Pleasant High School, Schenectady, N. Y.; Doris Rae Curtis, Grover Cleveland Junior High School, Tulsa, Okla.; Miles Mitchell, Oakdale High School, Oakdale, Cal.; Ellerie Edwards, Lakewood High School, Lakewood, Ohio; John Vernay, Pacific Military Academy, Los Angeles, Cal.

With a range of subjects to select from, the winners wrote on a variety of topics relative to the film. Miss Harding and Miss Goerdeler described scenes from the picture. Mr. Cahusac and Mr. Woodhouse wrote pleas for the preservation of the giant sequoias, Miss Dandurand contrasted the performing ability of animals and humans, and Miss Tuomey discussed the film as "A Magnificent Social Study of Animals."

Mrs. Roosevelt Among Judges

The judges, in addition to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, were: Horace M. Albright, former director of the National Park Service; Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service; John D. Coffman, chief forester of the National Park Service; F. Trubee Davison, president of the American Museum of Natural History; Lee F. Hanmer, director of the Recreation Department of the Russell Sage Foundation; Vance Hoyt, author of "Malibu," novel from which "Sequoia" was taken; Mrs. James F. Looram, chairman of the Motion Picture Bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae; Mrs. Charles Cyrus Marshall, president of the National Life Conservation Society; John S. McGroarty, Congressman from the 11th California District; Thomas Gilbert Pearson, founder and president of the International Committee for Bird Protection; Miss Josephine Schain, National Director of the Girl Scouts, Inc.; Mrs. William Dick Sporberg, former president of the National Council of Jewish Women; Miss Isabelle F. Story, editor in chief of the Division of Public Relations of the National Park Service; Trentwell Mason White, president of Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., publishers of "Malibu"; John R. White, superintendent of Sequoia National Park; Mrs. William L. Wilson, chairman of Conservation for the General Federation of Women's Clubs; George J. Zehrung, director of the Motion Picture Bureau of the Y. M. C. A.

In announcing the winners Mr. Albright expressed enthusiasm for the value of the contest. "It is impossible to overestimate the value of this to the conservation movement," he said.

of four depression-wrecked persons. Realistic in the way human experiences happen, with little effort made to inject anything that smacks of theatrical pollyannaism, it has something of a quality reminiscent of that of "One More Spring." Four individuals, one of whom, the girl, is rescued from suicide, eke out a meager living while living in a park summer house into which they have broken. The hero, politically ambitious, has an opportunity to rise in his chosen career, but when his success threatens the precarious security of his confreres, he sacrifices his hopes to go along to jail, with the surviving two of the group after one has died.

Supporting Farrell are Charlotte Henry, with whom he shares the romantic drama; Beryl Mercer, who sells to the rich that she may give to the poor; Fred Walton, a noted veteran of the American and British stage. Other players are Eric Wilton, a member of Parliament, who befriends Farrell; Phyllis Barry, seen in several Fox pictures, his daughter who is romantically drawn to the silver tongued Farrell, Barry Winton and Eric Snowden.

The screen play is by Sada Cowan and continuity and dialogue by Jefferson Parker. Direction is by Reginald Barker, who made the current "The Healer."

CURLY TOP

Fox

The combination, Shirley Temple and "Curly Top," clues this production's showmanship caliber. It's the kind of show in which Shirley does everything her legions of admirers like to see her do. She sings a couple of songs —"Animal Crackers In My Soup" and "When I Grow Up." She has three Jack Donohue created dance routines, a tap atop a piano, a jump rope feature and a hula-hula. She's a little orphan girl who, along with her older sister, Rochelle Hudson, is adopted from an asylum by John Boles and introduced to a happy colorful life that is everybody's ideal. A picture that features a smiling fascinating Shirley, it is one also rich with charming romantic love interest and chockful of comedy.

It features John Boles in several song numbers, including the theme song, "Curly Top," and "It's All So New to Me." It permits Rochelle Hudson to sing one number, "The Simple Things in Life."

The supporting cast is composed of well-known screen names. Included are Jane Darwell, Rafaela Ottiano, Esther Dale, Etienne Girardot, Arthur Treacher, who made such an audience impression in "No More Ladies," and Maurice Murphy, who was seen in "Private Worlds." Additionally Shirley has two private actors of her own, a trained pony and a trained duck.

The production is an original screen play by Patterson McNutt and Arthur Beckhard. Music is by Ray Henderson of the DeSylva, Brown, Henderson trio, with lyrics by Ted Koehler, Edward Heyman and Arthur Caesar. Direction is by Irving Cummings, maker of "The White Parade" and "It's A Small World."

Locales are an orphanage and a swanky beach front home, in which not only Shirley finds a dreamland of happiness, but Boles finds romance and love with Rochelle Hudson.

EVERY NIGHT AT EIGHT

Paramount

This, a comedy, capitalizes on the current radio amateur talent craze, lifts the curtain on a lot of behind-the-scenes radio broadcasting and injects just enough of a combative love interest to make the romantic angle novelly intriguing. Promising to be lively, as well as tuneful, in values that are topically familiar, it also boasts a cast and list of production credits of more than ordinary value.

It features George Raft, currently in "The Glass Key," with Alice Faye, star of several Fox pictures, particularly the "George White Scandals," Patsy Kelly and the newcoming screen personality, Frances Langford, who has quite a radio reputation. Additionally it will present the Three Radio Rogues, popular imitators of ether wave celebrities, the singer Harry Barris, Walter Catlett, seen in many recent short subjects, and Eddie Conrad.

The story is an original by Stanley Garvey, with screen play by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, who have a lengthy list of successful stories to their credit, and is being directed by Raoul Walsh. It is a Walter Wanger production.

Centering on the activities of a national amateur hour, Raft, a band leader, discovers hidden talents in the three girls. Taking them under his wing, he becomes a sort of business man chaperon romantically inclined towards Miss Langford. Building them up, in disguise, as a trio from the South, after wining a cash prize the girls rebel at Raft's ironhanded tactics and run out for a round of night club and kindred pleasure long denied them. When they hear the m.c. announcing to the music of their theme song they dash back to fame and fortune willing to admit that Raft's love for Miss Langford is genuine.

Localizing exploitation on the stuff of which the production is being made looks to be easily adaptable.

LEANDER CLICKS

(Tentative Title)

RKO-Radio

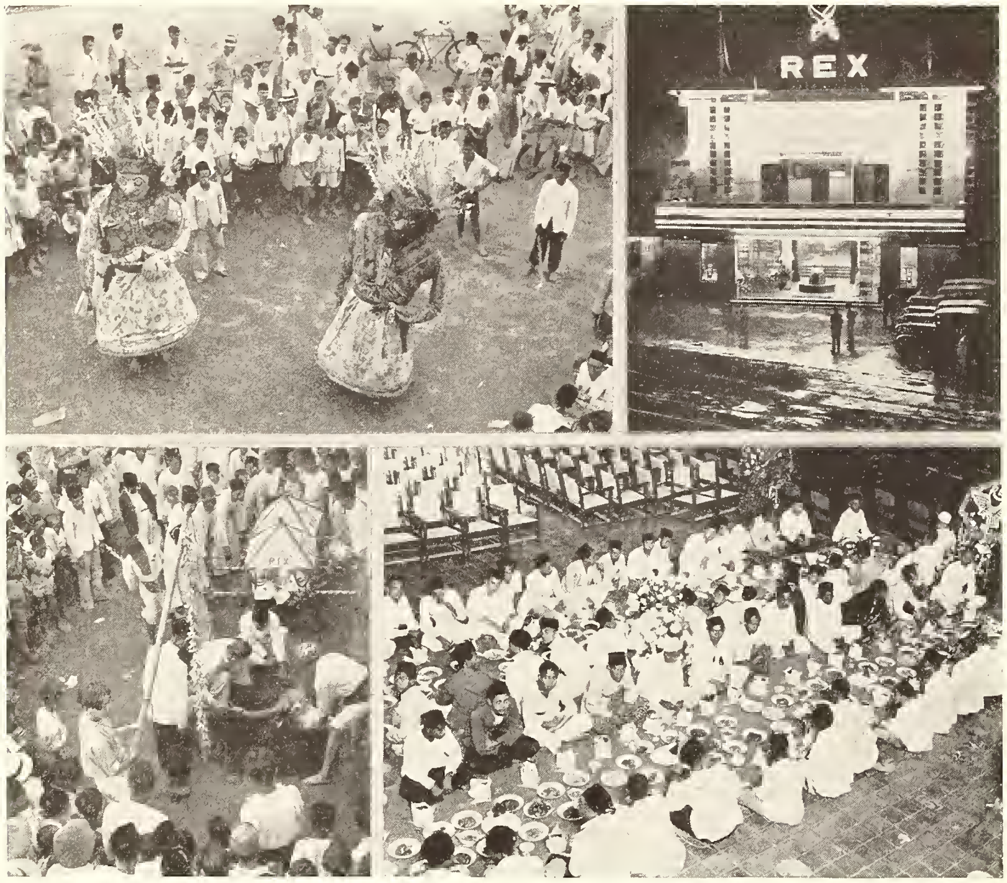
Comedy is the amusement and commercial essence of this production. It's the yarn of a henpecked father, proprietor of a short order restaurant, who, to make easier the romantic pathway of his favorite daughter, resorts to the precarious practice of playing the ponies as a get-rich-quick medium. Knowing all about the runners, and quite like all those so well informed, he always came out a loser until the final coup, which accidentally returns a fortune and turns the worm into a hero. Additionally to the hilarious situations of the story content, the story moves to the speedy action of several thrilling horse races.

The original story is by William Slavens McNutt, who during his screen career has contributed many amusing yarns in addition to having worked on "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and "Lives Of A Bengal Lancer," and is well known as a popular fiction writer. The screen play is by Hugh Cummings and Olive Cooper. Direction is by Ray McCary, a specialist in comedy production, short and feature length, and James Gleason, who also plays the leading role.

The cast to be seen with Gleason includes Zasu Pitts; Margaret Callahan, a promising young newcomer, who carries the romantic angle with Russell Gleason; Ray Mayer, in the heavy role; J. M. Kerrigan, Rollo Lloyd, Willie Best, Arthur Stone and Del Henderson.

While there is a great deal of racetrack atmosphere to the production, the story is more a romantic domestic comedy than a racing yarn. As it majors in the disappointments that accrue to its hero while trying to pull the wool over his wife's eyes, it develops a lot that is intimately familiar to many. A combination of exploitation that joins the value of story content with the comedy prestige of its leading pair of names, looks to be the angle to follow in creating patron interest.

Java Dances Evil from Box Office



Java goes in for ritualistic ceremonies on all important occasions, including those attendant on the opening of the redecorated Rex theatre, in Batavia.

The ceremonial dances in the upper left picture, and the burial of a kerbau head (lower left), are intended to expel the evil spirits which might threaten the good luck of the theatre. The kerbau head—a sacrifice—is buried in the ground directly in front of the theatre. Two heads are also buried at the back of the house. Following the dance, participated in by natives in costume, patrons are permitted to enter the theatre.

The lower right picture depicts "Slametan," a religious dinner with prayers, another form of evil-spirit-chasing. The banquet is offered to the natives, especially to the personnel, by a priest or medicine man, who offers thanksgiving to their gods. On this occasion only the men are allowed to participate and no women are allowed to enter the theatre until the dinner is over. The upper right picture is a night shot of the front of the rehabilitated Rex theatre, indicating a modernistic treatment.

Humorously ironic in its relation to the impressive native ceremonies is the fact that the theatre opened with Warners' "Here Comes the Navy."

Urges Parents Select Child's Film Program

Mrs. Harriet B. Adams, city amusement supervisor of Birmingham, Ala., in a letter published in the Birmingham News recently, pointed out that it is of vital importance that mothers select the motion picture entertainment of their children, and offered to assist in that selection if parents will communicate with her. "You have a wonderful opportunity now to create a taste for the best. The producers are making better pictures now than ever before," she wrote.

She declared that producers cannot be expected to make films entirely for children, and that the exhibitor cannot be expected to keep children out of the theatre.

Sees Building on Increase in Australia

Theatre building is gaining in Australia, most of the construction having been undertaken by independent operators, according to Alfred Daff, Universal branch manager at Melbourne, in New York on a visit to the home office. Independently operated houses in the Melbourne area have increased from five to 27 within the past two years, he said.

Admission levels were maintained throughout the depression, from which Australia has already emerged, said Mr. Daff. He declared the minimum admission of 25 cents in all houses had been made effective through agreements with exhibitor organizations and in film contracts. Enforcement is handled by the organizations, he said.

Pooling Deal Set For Ratification

The plans for the pooling of independent theatres in the Metropolitan New York area into one large circuit are ready for ratification by the board of directors of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association, local unit, according to Milton C. Weisman, attorney for the organization. Following approval, the proposal was to be put before the membership at a meeting at the Hotel Astor late Wednesday.

Some 200 houses would be involved, with reputed purchasing power of $5,000,000, aimed at "excessive major circuit protection," especially Loew and RKO.

Papers closing a pooling deal between M. E. Comerford, Ed Fay and RKO in Providence will be signed next week, the deal to become effective September 1. Involved are the Albee, Victory, Fay's, Majestic and Carlton.

On September 1 contracts will be signed for the pooling of Century and Skouras on Long Island. Skouras asked for the delay in signing, although the two circuits are already operating on a cooperative basis. Each will have seven houses in the pool. The contract will be a 10-year deal and will be retroactive to January 1. Involved are Century's Bliss, Sunnyside; Merrick, Jamaica; Franklin, Franklin Square; Fantasy, Rockville Center; Freeport and Grove, Freeport; Huntington, Huntington. The Skouras houses are the Sunnyside, Sunnyside; Valley Stream, Valley Stream; Lynbrook, Lynbrook; Rivoli and Hempstead, Hempstead; Jamaica, Jamaica; Cove, Glen Cove.

Rodney Pantages is in New York from Hollywood and is reported discussing a pool involving the RKO Hillstreet, Los Angeles, and the Pantages, Hollywood.

RKO in Accessory Deal With American Display

RKO has affected a cooperative arrangement whereby, under exclusive lisenses, RKO exchanges will exhibit American Display Corporation special accessories, available directly to the exhibitor from distribution points throughout the country. Charles L. Casanave, general manager of American Display, explained the aims of the service to the RKO convention in Chicago last week. It is believed the RKO arrangement is the first of a series to include all major companies.

American Display offers the exhibitor 40 special advertising and exploitation items on each picture. The cost is said to be half what it would be if the items were made individually, rather than in quantity.

Eleven-Theatre Deal Reported

It is understood a deal is underway in Boston whereby Charles A. Goldreyer will take over 11 theatres north of Boston now operated by M. & P. for Paramount.

Farnsworth Continues

William P. Farnsworth, formerly deputy administrator of the film code, is continuing with the government at Washington temporarily on the skeletonized NRA.

TECHNOLOGICAL

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 272—(A) How far ahead of the picture is the corresponding sound recording placed on the film? (B) Why is it important to thread the projector mechanism and sound head using only loop sizes specified by the manufacturer of the equipment being used? (C) Just what effects will dirty or scratched film sound track have on the reproduced sound and what precautions should be taken to keep the films clean and unscratched while in the projection room?

Answer to Question No. 266

Bluebook School Question No. 266 was: (A) What are the main requirements of proper storage battery maintenance which should receive constant attention of projectionists? (B) What are the two most important things to be remembered about lubrication?

The engineers say: (A) (1) Keep the electrolyte at proper level. (2) Adjust charging rate so that specific gravity (as measured by a hydro-meter) just comes up to the proper value at the end of the normal charging period. This holds good except at those periodic intervals when it is desirable to give the battery an overcharge. The service inspector should be consulted on this. (3) Keep battery tops scrupulously clean of all dirt, moisture and other accumulations that might form paths for current leakage. (4) Keep all screw terminal contacts clean and tight. (5) Keep the terminals and connecting straps covered with heavy grease to prevent corrosion. (6) Examine battery cases occasionally to make sure cracks do not develop therein, thus permitting leakage of electrolyte. (7) See that proper and ample ventilation is maintained in the battery room. (8) Keep a battery log (record) indicating the charging rate and values of specific gravity at beginning and end of each charge period, as well as any other important data that may aid in checking the operation of the battery and predicting its future life. Such a record, carefully kept, is invaluable.

(B) The three most important things to be remembered about lubrication are: First, use only the proper lubricant, as specified by the equipment manufacturer; Second, use only the proper amount of lubricant, as specified by the equipment manufacturer. This is of high importance. An oversupply of lubricant is the cause of many common troubles in sound reproduction equipments. Such troubles result in noise, loss of volume and poor quality of sound. Third, lubricate the equipments at regular intervals, as specified by the manufacturer."

(Note: With that last I cannot altogether agree, as sound equipments must and do operate under rather widely varying conditions; also it could hold good only in cases where the lubricant specified by the equipment manufacturer is used—as it should be, but in very many cases I am sorry to say is not.—F.H.R.)

We have a goodly list of correct answers, as follows: S. Evans and C. Rau; A. F. Sprafke; D. H. Danielson; G. E. Doe; J. Wentworth; B. DeVietti; T. Van Vaulkenburg; H. Edwards; L. Hutch and D. Goldberg; E. Mantol and H. Hughes; M. and J. DeVoy; E. Hodson and J. Johnson; F. H. S. and P. Dalbey; L. H. Joy; D. Lally and F. Ferguson; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; J. Jurts and D. Howard; D. L. Sinklow; R. Geddings and L. Grant; J. Willis, T. L. Stein and J. Kirkpatrick; H. Pitchkey and C. Mellinger; P. Itt; O. L. Daris and F. Simms; R. and K. Wells; N. C. Bandman; A. L. Andrews; S. Spooner and B. H. Thaller; T. N. Onby; O. Allbright; B. S. Howard; J. O. McClellan; J. Gensen, K. Y. Spencer, D. L. Lode and B. H. Sanders; L. Klar and F. H. Klar; R. D. Oberleigh and J. Lansing; A. L. Dodson and F. L. Benton; L. R. Doty; P. L. Stone and R. Carmody; F. L. Savlor and G. N. Guidotti; P. and L. Felt; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; T. Turk; M. and S. T. Gibson; M. Mitchell; R. S. Danielson, R. D. Jackson and B. L. Korda.

A most excellent list for the hot summer dull months, what? The total of answers is several times this, of course.

I have selected the reply of Messrs. H. Pitchkey and C. Mellinger for publication, with compliments to Evans and Rau, Danielson, G. Doe, DeVietti, Sprafke, and L. and F. H. Klar. Pitchkey and Mellinger say: "It is very difficult to select any 'main' requirements as all requirements in care of equipments are important. We would regard the things most important of all as the following: (a) Keep the liquid at its proper level, using only distilled or approved water. (b) Keep the liquid at proper strength as per bi-weekly hydrometer test. (c) Keep all parts of the battery clean. This has to do with the tops especially. They must not be permitted to become dusty, dirty or to be and remain wet. Nothing must be laid on them. (d) Keep all contacts clean and tight and well covered with vaseline; this last including the connecting wires or straps. (e) Never permit the battery to become discharged below the point stipulated by its manufacturer. (f) If acid (electrolyte) gets on top of battery or elsewhere, neutralize it by washing with a saturated solution (all the water will take up) of ordinary baking soda and water or with a 50-50 solution of water and household ammonia. (g) Never charge at any other rate than that stipulated by the battery manufacturer. (i) Do not overcharge except at stated intervals recommended by manufacturer. (j) Don't imagine you know more about batteries than the makers of them. You probably don't. (k) By hydrometer test make certain that all cells are at the same level of strength. (l) If the battery be an old one, charge fully, draw off into a clean glass or porcelain container all electrolyte. Clean out sediment in bottom of all cells. Flush out with approved water. Fill with same and place on charge until all sulphate deposit in plates has disappeared. Empty water and again flush. Refill with new electrolyte and let remain idle a few hours. The battery life will thus be renewed and extended. (m) Do not continue a defective battery cell in use. Such procedure will injure the whole battery. (n) Have battery installed on table or shelf at convenient height and the battery room well ventilated. (o) Take hydrometer readings only after adding water and charging until the liquid starts to give off gas, as this assures proper mixing of the water and live liquid and that the reading is therefore reliable."

As to section B, Messrs. O. L. Daris and F. Simms say: "The two most important items in lubrication are to select the best type and quality of lubricant for the item to be lubricated, and to use only enough to accomplish the purpose of lubrication."

B. DeVietti says: "Projector and sound equipment bearings should receive exactly the right amount of the oil or grease recommended by the equipment manufacturer."

Evans and Rau say: "Never use more than one drop of oil in a bearing at a time, unless it be a wick lubrication bearing. This is plenty of oil and there will be no surplus to be thrown off and get smeared around, very possibly on the film. Use only the best grade of oil available for such bearings."

May I add this thought. Modern equipment manufacturers, realizing how very often poor performance of their equipments is traced to the use of poor or unsuitable oils and greases, and that such failures seldom are charged to their true cause but react against the equipment itself, have mostly all made careful experiments to determine just what oil or grease is most suitable for their machines. They recommend and in many cases offer themselves to supply the right lubricant.

Gentlemen, it is pure nonsense to imagine these manufcturers do this to "make money." True they must be paid for the oil or grease, and may make some small profit on its sale. The prime motive, however, is not profit, but to assure maximum performance of their equipments. There is nothing I know of that is more foolish and costly than refusing to buy the lubricant recommended by equipment manufacturers, substituting instead some lubricant concerning whose relative value you are totally unable to judge, in an endeavor to save money. For every dime you save by that sort of procedure it is almost a cinch you will lose at least one dollar in the end.—F.H.R.

J. C. JENKINS--HIS COLYUM

Omaha, Nebraska

Dear Herald:

When going through Genoa the other day we stopped and called on Ma and Henry Peterson. Ma runs the theatre and Henry runs a grasshopper train from Columbus to Loupe City, and doggone him, he always manages to be at home when we call.

They say that business has been fairly good there because of the employment of a number of men who are digging a canal from Genoa to Columbus, for two purposes, to give some men work and to develop power. Henry don't like it very well because he says it is going to interfere with catfish fishing, and Ma is a great catfisher, too. Ma said they had been trying to struggle along without the HERALD but found it impossible to keep up with the procession and now they are members of the family.

Whatever else they say about him, there is this they will have to acknowledge: When a man will pay back $240 to the government which had been paid him on relief, he is entitled to a whole lot of credit. We know of a lot of them who wouldn't do that. What this country needs is more prize rings and less panhandlers.

M. Bemond, who operates the theatre at Ord, Nebraska, was in town today and was sober, as usual. He brought along F. Slomenski, his theatre manager at Loupe City, to look after him. Bemond is strong for the HERALD and says if they would cut out this colyum it would be quite a paper. He told us that right to our face and the doctor at the hospital said that with good care he thought he might recover.

Both Sides Lose

Headlines in the papers say that they have put South Omaha under martial law and called out the militia.

The reason for doing this seems to be because of a street car employee's strike, which has resulted in the death of two persons and the injury of 88 more in rioting and destroying property to such an extent that it was beyond police control. There has never been a strike but what both parties lost.

Our neighbor's Plymouth Rock hens went on strike sometime ago, because of the low price of eggs, and the roosters all went out into that "shelterbelt" to roost with the blue pelicans.

If the court ever gives a man a chromo for stealing the Declaration of Independence we are going to make a kick about it.

We have spent a lot of summers in Nebraska and have had reason to observe crop conditions but we don't believe we have ever seen better prospects for wheat, oats, rye and alfalfa than the state has today. Corn prospects don't seem so good because of the wet and cold weather, which has put back planting, and many farmers have had to re-plant, some on account of the seed rotting and some because of the cutworms. Well anyhow, if the "theorists" will keep hands off and give the state a chance she will come out of the brush and into the alfalfa carrying her banner of "Equality Before the Law."

Variety Club Rooms Deluxe

They have opened headquarters for the Variety Club here in the Paxton hotel and the clubrooms are about the last word in elegance, in fact there is nothing nicer between Chicago on the east and Neligh on the west. Last night Bob Ballentyne, the manager for National Theatre Supply Company, drove around to our hotel with his wife and took us up to the club rooms, where we spent a delightful evening meeting old friends and acquaintances. Bob is always doing something like that. This club is exclusively for those engaged in some way with the theatre business. Bob and Mrs. Ballentyne put themselves out to a considerable extent to show us a good time (and they succeeded, too).

We met a number of theatre boys, some we had not seen in a long time, some we had never met before. We met Carl Reese and Mrs. Reese. Carl used to sell us film years ago and always refused to accept the keys to the theatre when we offered them to him. Carl is still selling film and says he doesn't have the keys to a single theatre. Mrs. Reese says she is the mother of a boy 17 years old. She don't look it. We also met Mr. T. Emmerson, who is the manager of the Omaha theatre and who tendered us the freedom of his theatre, which was very much appreciated. Then we met Evert Cummings, the district manager for Tri-State Theatres, another 100% Nebraskan and no discount. We are inclined to think that Mrs. Cummings is a little better than that. Well, anyhow, we had a delightful time and met a lot of delightful folks (including their wives) and the Variety clubroom is "a thing of beauty" and, we hope, "a joy forever."

Ducks, Pelicans, Mudhens

If the "Brain Trust" expects to put a setting of duck eggs under a Plymouth Rock rooster and hatch out some young pelicans they shouldn't be surprised if they turned out to be mudhens.

In case some of you projectionists should want to brush up on projection we would advise you to get in touch with the Book Department of the HERALD and ask for Richardson's new book on projection. When you get that you have gotten the last word on the subject.

Will Rogers told an audience of colored folks recently that the outlook for his party (and we have our doubts about him being a Republican) was very dark and hazy. It must be that the "Grass Roots" boys have sent him a pair of smoked glasses.

The morning after they had the opening of the Variety Club we were told that cracked ice went up 50%. "Oh Gorsh."

Elmer Gailey, who used to operate the two theatres in Wayne, Nebraska (until the fish went to biting), came into the hotel yesterday and told us about fishing up in Big Stone lake at Ortonville, Minnesota. He said that he hooked a northern pike that was so big that he had to get a span of mules to help pull him out, and after he got him out the lake dropped six feet. And we said, "Oh, for gosh sakes Elmer, haven't you been up with H. J. Longaker at Glenwood, Minnesota." Those two boys are mighty good fishermen.

Ennis Quits Paramount To Enter Production

Bert Ennis, writer and pioneer in motion picture press agentry, resigned this week from the writing staff of Paramount's eastern short subjects studio, to enter production. Mr. Ennis before joining Paramount had been advertising manager for some of the large companies in New York and was in charge of the Roxy Theatre publicity department.

During the past 18 months Mr. Ennis has been writing the gags and off-screen comment for Paramount's "Screen Souvenirs," and various scripts for Paramount "Varieties," including some novelties for fall release—"Laugh These Off" and "Movie Milestones." In "Milestones" the company will present some of the biggest scenes from outstanding silent successes: "Covered Wagon," "Beau Geste," "Blood and Sand" and "The Miracle Man."

Consolidated Opens New Oklahoma House

Consolidated Theatres, Inc., subsidiary of the Griffith Amusement Company, recently opened the new Washita theatre, at Chickasha, Okla., containing the most modern equipment throughout, including air conditioning apparatus. George Limerick is manager of the house, which was constructed virtually within the old walls of the Sugg theatre, one of the oldest theatres in southwestern Oklahoma.

"Tom Mix Clubs" for Juveniles

The "Tom Mix Miracle Riders' Club" has been started as an exploitation idea for Mascot's "Miracle Riders," a serial, by the Lieb-Gold Company, New York, which now is conducting a "Frankie Darro Club." "Tootsie Pops" and "Uncle Sam Talkie-Movie Projectors" are tied in, and the sponsors will also use Tom Mix cowboy accessories.

Heads Equipment Division

Edmund T. Dawson has been appointed in charge of the theatre division of the Cable Chair Corporation, New York, headed by the John L. Cable steel furniture manufacturing interests.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

Columbia

LAW BEYOND THE RANGE: Tim McCoy, Billie Seward—Very good western and McCoy is finally establishing himself if the box-office is any barometer. Used this in June, ordinarily a very poor month, but it drew more dough than any other "McCoy" we have played. These Columbia McCoy's are certainly better westerns than the Buck Jones' that Universal is turning out.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LET'S LIVE TONIGHT: Lilian Harvey, Tullio Carminati—Set this in for four days starting on Sunday and after the matinee tried hard to secure another picture more suitable but was unable to do so. First of all, the recording does not reproduce satisfactorily owing to a lot of imitation French and possibly some real French. I have this to say, Lilian Harvey and Tullio Carminati do not come close to being star material. Their performance is ridiculous. Business quite poor during the run.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

PARTY WIRE: Victor Jory, Jean Arthur—Satisfying comedy drama that will go well in small towns. —John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

First National

FLIRTATION WALK: Ruby Keeler, Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien—A-1 musical that everyone liked but did not do any extra business. Why, I don't know. Possibly it's getting a little old. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

G MEN, THE: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsey, Ann Dvorak—Well done "government vs. gangster" film that pleased. OK.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Gloria Stuart—Not up to Warner Bros. standard in regard to musicals. Picture failed to please more than 50%. Picture drew way above average business but what good does it do if the patrons are not satisfied? Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 16.—Phil Billiet, Coliseum Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

LIVING ON VELVET: Kay Francis, George Brent, Warren William—This is a good program picture. Was well liked. But did not do much business on account of storm and rain. Running time, eight reels. Played June 16-17.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Olka. Small town patronage.

MAYBE IT'S LOVE: Gloria Stuart, Ross Alexander—Ross Alexander has built himself plenty of patronage since his performance in "Flirtation Walk." Young folks here would go to see him no matter what the picture might be. Good business but just program picture. Running time, 62 minutes. Played May 8-10.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

Fox

BABOONA: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—One of the best animal pictures we've played for a long time. However nobody got excited over it. There are some very comic scenes of animals and some very beautiful photography from the air as this picture was taken from airplanes. It's something new. Played June 7-8.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

BLACK SHEEP: Edmund Lowe, Claire Trevor, Tom Brown, Eugene Pallete—Another "aboard ship" story, but well done, and my audience was satisfied. Good mixture of suspense and comedy. OK.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS: Alice Faye, James Dunn—Dancing, singing, laughing, all in all a clever show. It takes a large city to totally appreciate a good picture like this, where otherwise a western would substitute in a small city. Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 19-20.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

GREAT HOTEL MURDER: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen—Is our public fed up with this pair? I'll say they are. The same old technique as in "The Cockeyed World' and all the others that have come out since. Picture fair but they are tired of the old bickering and wisecracking that always goes with their pictures. Too much of a good thing—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—Here is one of Will Rogers' best pictures. It pleased everybody that came to see it. Played in a rainy spell and yet drew above average business. Keep up the good work, Will, and the weather man may give us a break yet. Boost it to the limit fellows, and clean up on it. Running time, 79 minutes. Played June 9.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—For genuine entertainment would say that this is Rogers' best. But as one country editor to another, suggest that they show Will how to hold a printer's "stick"; also that linotype had a sound entirely foreign to any self-respecting machine. Plenty of other technical faults, overlooked, of course, by the layman. Played to fine business. Running time, 79 minutes. Played June 9-11.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

LITTLE COLONEL, THE: Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore—It's the answer to the exhibitor prayers. We sponsored a Shirley Temple Safety Club a week ahead, giving the boys and girls pins who joined it. When the last few minutes in color appeared everybody was hypnotized. It puts new life in the theatre, when Shirley comes to town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

LITTLE COLONEL, THE: Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore—Hit the spot picture. Who wouldn't like Little Shirley? I'll tell you who does like her, true honest-to-nature people and the wiser of the younger generation. Kids of course. Fairer business. Running time, 80 minutes.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

LITTLE COLONEL, THE: Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore—Just wowed 'em as usual. This one drew a few more comments than "Bright Eyes," however, they seem to like her in any role just as long as it's Shirley Temple. They think nothing of driving 60 miles out here to see Temple or Rogers. Packed the house twice in one night in a town of about 500. Sent out postcards about two weeks ahead of picture to rural customers and got returns from same. Played May 19-20.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple—Usual Temple, except that its cast and story are not as good as previous Temples. Obviously a lot cheaper, but should do business.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

PECK'S BAD BOY: Jackie Cooper, Thomas Meighan—A typical family picture, with a popular title which did a very good business. It had some star value, but would call it a program picture and not a special.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

SPRING TONIC: Lew Ayres, Claire Trevor—Comedy, romantic picture. You saw "Doorway to Hell" starring Ayres but he wasn't as good as in the former picture although he loves to tame untamed tigers that have already been tamed. Fair business. Running time, 58 minutes.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

$10 RAISE: Edward Everett Horton—A swell comedy. If there was ever a darn fool of the screen Horton is the one of the best beyond the darn fool. Laughs, pauses, but no Al Jolson sobs. Fair business. Running time, 70 minutes.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN: George O'Brien—Good western. Something that is quite different than the old see-through westerns. Fair business. Mostly our Monroe County faithful farmers. Running time, 66 minutes.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

MGM

AFTER OFFICE HOURS: Clark Gable, Constance Bennett—Personally I found this one hard to follow but many reported quite favorably on it. As a high-priced special, I consider it not up to much. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 21-22.—G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

AFTER OFFICE HOURS: Clark Gable, Constance Bennett, Stuart Erwin, Billie Burke—Gable has a role that he can sink his teeth into in this one and that makes it a good picture. He is no matinee idol and our audiences were getting fed up on him as the great lover. Billie Burke was her own fluttery self, slightly ga-ga as always. She dates back a long way with her work. It may have been all to the good in the old days but the excessive fluttering and her squeaky voice does not register with our audience and they are very vocal in their panning of her.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

AFTER OFFICE HOURS: Constance Bennett, Clark Gable—A fast moving and entirely satisfying picture. Okay both as to entertainment and at the B.O. Running time, 73 minutes. Played June 13-15.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

AFTER OFFICE HOURS: Constance Bennett, Clark Gable—Good program picture. Not a special and did only average business for us. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 2-3.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

AFTER OFFICE HOURS: Constance Bennett, Clark Gable—Romantic, vacational, adventure type of picture. The average New Yorker might go for it but farmers hate it. The exhibitor likes it but the public pays for it. Fair business. Running time, 73 minutes.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

BABY FACE HARRINGTON: Charles Butterworth—Not enough in this one for a two-reel comedy. A misfire if there ever was one. A lot of them held their noses as they came out and that don't make an exhibitor feel any too good. Better have the exits open for they will go for them as that is what they did with us. The lowest gross for a Saturday for a long time. Friday patrons advertised it for us adversely.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CASINO MURDER CASE: Paul Lukas—There are too many of these murder stories being produced, the vicious cycle. This picture is okay and interesting but we have had some six of the same type in the last sixty days and this one flopped at the box office. And the only reason, as I see it, is that the public is getting fed up on this type.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CASINO MURDER CASE: Paul Lukas—The usual murder story. A series of murders, the obtuse district attorney, dumb police detective and the smart private detective with the super power brain. And of course our hero solves the mystery in the last reel and gets the gal. However, it's fairly entertaining and can be classed as a program picture. If your patrons like murder mysteries it will get by OK. Did average business here. Played June 5.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

CASINO MURDER CASE, THE: Paul Lukas—Murder mystery. I could see through some but the most had me guessing, though. Believe me, though, it was a clever murder mystery and were the detectives marvelous though! Fair business. Running time, 84 minutes.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage..

MARK OF THE VAMPIRE: Lionel Barrymore, Bela Lugosi—A horror film that was laid on a little too thick and as we see it they forgot to end it. We had the first experience of at the end of show people waiting and wondering when the end would come after the film had run out.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MURDER IN THE FLEET: Robert Taylor, Jean Parker, Una Merkel, Ted Healy, Nat Pendleton—Well balanced comedy murder mystery aboard ship. Suspense and comedy combined to make an entertaining picture. Week end OK.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Excellent. The music in this is superb and the story is fair. This musical is so good it almost deserves the raves you read about it in the press sheet. Pleased 100% here and did very good business. Running time, 104 minutes. Played June 15.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—It was beautiful, but only a few knew what it was all about. Don't lose any sleep, if you haven't bought this. They got real restless on this picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Personally liked this as well as "Les Miserables" but your shoot-'em-down and ride-'em-rough crowd will not go for it. However, it is a picture that should grace the screen of every exhibitor as it is the best of its kind to date. Light opera. Played June 4-5-6.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

RECKLESS: Jean Harlow, William Powell—This picture has a high priced cast and that helps to get them in. The picture is just fair. Harlow as a singing and dancing star is terrible. The picture would have been much better if the singing and dancing had been left out, or if they had put someone in the role that could really sing or dance. Did average business here. Played June 8.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SEQUOIA: Jean Parker, Russell Hardie—An almost unbelievable picture. Beautiful outdoor shots and completely captivating. Pleased everyone and played to good business. At the risk of being called sentimental, hope every deer hunter sees it. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 16-18.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

SHADOW OF DOUBT: Ricardo Cortez, Virginia Bruce—Well made picture and well acted but slow at box-office. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

TIMES SQUARE LADY: Virginia Bruce, Robert Taylor, Pinky Tomlin, Nat Pendleton—Just a fair program picture. Tomlin was well liked, nice voice, sang a couple of songs. It will get by as a program picture. Some action, some comedy.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TIMES SQUARE LADY: Robert Taylor, Virginia Bruce—Fairly good program picture. Nothing to write home about but seemed to please. Average business here. Played May 29.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

VAGABOND LADY: Robert Young, Evelyn Venable—Average programmer with just about enough comedy to get it by.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y.—Small town patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young—Romantic, adventure, love, thrills, and heart throbs. A swell show with Wallace at partially his best, like "Villa." Young played well and the planes were swell with all the grinding noises. Fair crowd, but liked it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 16-17.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

WINNING TICKET, THE: Leo Carrillo, Louise Fazenda—No good. Only got film rental and a lot of kicks. Running time, seven reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

ALL THE KING'S HORSES: Mary Ellis, Carl Brisson—No good. Did the poorest business this year. Several walkouts. Running time, eight reels. Played June 11-12.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

BEHOLD MY WIFE: Sylvia Sidney, Gene Raymond—Far above the average program entertainment, everything here to provide good screen fare. The story is exceptionally strong, ranging from light comedy to heavy melodrama. The title is absolutely all that I can find any fault with and that because the show gave us a very poor midweek gross. I should have used this for my Sunday change.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

DEVIL IS A WOMAN, THE: Marlene Dietrich, Cesar Romero—No business, no friends. Lots of black looks for showing such a picture. What could be worse? Don't play it, it'll do you harm. It's clever but can't be understood by our farmers. I think some will never come back. Well acted but story didn't take.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

GILDED LILY, THE: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray—Very good in every way. Running time, 80 minutes. Played May 26-28.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

GLASS KEY, THE: George Raft—Not up to Raft's standard. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 8.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West—While this was not the production of "Belle of the Nineties," this did better for us at the box-office. Only thing I might suggest was that there was too much Mae West. Running time, 64 minutes. Played June 16-17-18.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

IT'S A GIFT: W. C. Fields, Baby LeRoy—I read several rather unfavorable reports on this and was more than pleased when it was so much better than I expected. Mostly slapstick comedy but it seems that is what the majority of the fans here love. The laughs follow each other in rapid succession and all in all I can say that this pleased as much as any W. C. Fields we have played.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LOVE IN BLOOM: Gracie Allen, George Burns, Joe Morrison, Dixie Lee—Played on Family Night and went over all right. Very good comedy. Running time, seven reels. Played June 19-20. —E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

MISSISSIPPI: Bing Crosby, Joan Bennett, W. C. Fields—Went over very well and pleased about 80% of our patronage. Running time, 86 minutes. Played June 9-10.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS, THE: Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer, Charles Ruggles—One of the most delightful screen entertainments in many a day. Being a costume picture, it has considerable to overcome in gaining the favor of the fans, but it establishes itself as a real hit before the end of the first reel. Comments were numerous and enthusiastic in praise. In my own opinion, the best comedy drama in Paramount's line-up this year.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone—Even the women went for this one, without the romance, which was never missed. Running time, 89 minutes. Played May 19-21.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

RUGGLES OF RED GAP: Charles Laughton, Mary Boland—This without a doubt is the best since "Cabbage Patch." While it will not have the general appeal and box-office draw that the "Cabbage" had, nevertheless, it ranks right up in the same class. Just one of those pictures that has positive entertainment. The cast is overwhelmingly good.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

RUMBA: George Raft, Carole Lombard—Played this on Bargain Night and for some reason failed to draw. Raft is not so well liked here and for that reason picture failed to please although George Raft tried hard to put the picture over. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 12.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

RUMBA: George Raft, Carole Lombard—A typical Geo. Raft picture and if your patrons like Raft should go over big. Done a little extra business for us. Running time, seven reels. Played June 5-6.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

WINGS IN THE DARK: Myrna Loy, Cary Grant—Just in time for what my patrons had been asking for. Good action, and pleased all. Business above average. Running time, 75 minutes. Played May 4.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

RKO

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES: Anne Shirley—Well directed and played, but business way off. Got the children and 400, which is slight in this situation. Running time, 79 minutes. Played May 12-14.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

DOG OF FLANDERS: Frankie Thomas, Helen Parrish—Here is a good little picture that pleased everyone. Did not draw film rental because of rain. If the weather man don't give us a break pretty soon, we'll have to close up and it has rained exactly six straight days, and you know what that does to show business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 19.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

DOG OF FLANDERS: Frankie Thomas, Helen Parrish—An honest-to-goodness picture. One that should be compulsory to see in all schools and churches. The church organizations asked for a decent show, now they have it. Pure life, as it is with all its hardships. Why don't the church going public give RKO a break now? Paramount made Mae West in "Goin' to Town" and the public flocked to see her and her fantasy. We played a picture of Our Saviour Himself and got very few. After all I guess it's life. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 21-22.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

GAY DIVORCEE, THE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Strange as it seems, I had a number of decided kicks on this from the Saturday night fans. I can easily see that this is a picture that will not be appreciated by all classes. Although it is above average fare, I think it has been rated just a hit too high. Monkey suits and dance scenes never go over very big here.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

GRAND OLD GIRL: May Robson, Hale Hamilton—Good one to tie in with the schools. Will click that way. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 30-31.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

GRAND OLD GIRL: May Robson—The general patronage seemed to like this one pretty well. However, it is no more than just a picture to fill a date. It's not so bad and not so good. Think it over a while before you play it. Pleased some and some it didn't. Played May 31-June 1.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

LADDIE: Joan Beal, Gloria Stuart—I consider this an exceptional picture since my second night doubled my first night. If your patronage is like mine, step on this one a little extra. Running time, 69 minutes. Played June 13-14.—J. M. Lakeman, Princess Theatre, Haleyville, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE MINISTER: Katharine Hepburn—Just some more evidence that RKO is producing more fine pictures than any other exchange this year. Somewhat of a "class" show but anyone that would kick on this would have an awfully low "I Q." Should be on everyone's list of the ten best of the year. Hepburn does the best work of her career in this. Lots of good comedy in this that one might not look for on account of the title.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

MURDER ON A HONEYMOON: Edna May Oliver, James Gleason—A hilarious comedy. Not much of a plot but you'll see the two peas in a pod for Laurel & Hardy, who are Gleason & Oliver. Fair business. Running time, 74 minutes.—G. E. Shannon, Swissland Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. General patronage.

RED MORNING: Steffi Duna, Regis Toomey—I thought this about average, not quite, but the considerable number of complaints I had on this must mean that I had it over-rated. I still think it a pretty fair show but the customer is always right.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

ROMANCE IN MANHATTAN: Ginger Rogers, Francis Lederer—This pleased all the way around. Not a growl nor grumble from the patrons. This is a delightful comedy romance. Not heavy comedy but thoroughly entertaining throughout the picture. Ginger Rogers is as always adorable, even though she doesn't dance or sing. Lederer is likewise very convincing in his characterization. Played June 2-3.—Chas. Summers & Son, Elite Theatre, Seiling, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: William Powell, Ginger Rogers—I do not need to tell you that there are many fine players in this one. If you ask me, I am here to tell you "Star of Midnight" makes one of the best film fares in quite some time. You will make no mistake in setting this in your best playing time.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: Ginger Rogers, William Powell—Very good picture. Very much on the order of "Thin Man" and is every bit as good. Did very good business on this one. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 12.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SILVER STREAK, THE: Sally Blane, Charles Starrett—Picture lacks stars, but has plenty of action. Did exceptionally good business due to a railroad shop town close by. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 23-24.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

WEST OF THE PECOS: Richard Dix—A natural for this part of the country. And should go anywhere. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 11.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

United Artists

CLIVE OF INDIA: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—The history students raved about it, others walked out. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 17-18.—J. M. Lakeman, Princess Theatre, Haleyville, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

LES MISERABLES: Fredric March, Charles Laughton—Truly a credit to the industry. If your patrons are the type to appreciate good acting, fine production and top direction, you cannot over-advertise this one. It is not arty or talkie, just get them in. Played June 11-12-13.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE: Spencer Tracy, Jack Oakie—This picture is rather old. Didn't set the world on fire but seemed to satisfy those who saw it. We do not double bill our pictures. I imagine it should be double billed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

MIGHTY BARNUM, THE: Wallace Beery, Adolphe Menjou, Janet Beecher, Virginia Bruce—Beery excellent as usual. Have never missed with any of his pictures. Running time, 105 minutes. Played May 5-7.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

WEDDING NIGHT, THE: Gary Cooper, Anna Sten—A fair picture but very little draw. A less than average crowd seemed to enjoy it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 10-11.—J. M. Lakeman, Princess Theatre, Haleyville, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN: Boris Karloff—Don't give it your best playing time although it may not disappoint. Played June 2-3.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

CRIMSON TRAIL, THE: Buck Jones—The poorest Jones I ever saw to the best midweek business in several years. Not a single laugh, just riding, riding, and a halfwit to throw in a little of the terror element. We certainly hope Universal gives Jones better material than this for his future horse operas.—L. V. Bergtold, Opera House, Kasson, Minn. General patronage.

GOOD FAIRY, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Herbert Marshall—This one only did average business. Frank Morgan really saved the picture and put it in a class slightly above programmer. The majority seemed to enjoy the comedy in it although one patron walked out saying "worst show yet." Played June 20-21.—J. M. Lakeman, Princess Theatre, Haleyville, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

GOOD FAIRY, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, Herbert Marshall—Played this picture weekend to an average business but the farmers would have much preferred a westerner. It certainly is no special in my estimation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. Small town patronage.

PRINCESS O'HARA: Jean Parker, Chester Morris—Very good entertainment with a good cast. Played June 10.—Ivan W. Rowley, Ward Theatre, Pismo Beach, Cal. General patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW: Binnie Barnes, Lois Wilson, Frank Morgan, Elizabeth Young—Very pleasing. Played June 15-16.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

TRANSIENT LADY: Gene Raymond, Henry Hull—Hull's performance put this one over. Running time, 72 minutes. Played May 29.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

Warner

SWEET MUSIC: Rudy Vallee, Ann Dvorak—This is a very good musical picture. But Rudy Vallee is not so hot on the screen. Did only average business. Running time, 96 minutes. Played June 23-24.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHITE COCKATOO: Jean Muir, Ricardo Cortez—Just fair. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 22.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

MAKE BELIEVE REVUE, THE: Color Rhapsodies Series—A delightful cartoon, by far the best color cartoon to date. It should prove to be added entertainment on any program.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

UNCIVIL WARRIORS: 3 Stooges—If you want a crazy comedy, here it is. This got a lot of laughs and I gave it my OK. Not high class, but plenty of fun.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Educational

PEG LEG PETE, THE PIRATE: Terry-Toons—Slightly above the average as a cartoon. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

SHE'S MY LILY: Will Mahoney—Booked this for return engagement, that's how good it is. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

MGM

CHASES OF PIMPLE STREET: Charley Chase—Good comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

COLORFUL GUATEMALA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Good colored short.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

FIXER UPPERS: Laurel and Hardy—Good comedy but not as good as some of the comedies they have made. Running time, two reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

the average. Great for both children and adults.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

LOS ANGELES, WONDER CITY OF THE WEST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very good. B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MEMORIES AND MELODIES: Musical Revues—Directed by James A. FitzPatrick. Well done two-reeler based on the melodies of Stephen Foster. Essentially a high class musical that will appeal to the appreciative class. Very good.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MIKE FRIGHT: Our Gang—Good. Boost it. Will please the kids. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

OKAY TOOTS: Charley Chase—Not up to the standard of the usual Chase. Running time, 17 minutes.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SHRIMPS FOR A DAY: Our Gang—Just about the best Our Gang comedy yet. Patrons still raving about it. Laughs galore. You can boost it to the skies. Running time, 19 minutes.—Clarke Gurley, Ritz Theatre, Bainbridge, Ga. General patronage.

Paramount

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Very good and the Chicago office gives you good service on it. I have already signed up for next year for this news and I am not sorry I did, as I think it is the best news on the market. Running time, 9 minutes.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

WE AIM TO PLEASE: Popeye The Sailor—Another good one from Popeye. He is our most popular cartoon character. Running time, 9 minutes.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

RKO

DUMBBELL LETTERS: Too dumb to be good. This is one of RKO's weakest points, their shorts. Why don't they get some orchestra acts instead of wasting film on something of this nature. Running time, 5 minutes.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

United Artists

BAND CONCERT: Mickey Mouse—Stepped out on this and business justified expense. Mickey in class by himself and color has added 100 per cent. Musical score on this splendid and crowds applauded. Would say that it is by far the best one-reeler I have played. Running time, one reel.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

Universal

SKY LARKS: Oswald Cartoons—A good filler on any weak program. Running time, 7 minutes.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

RADIO SCOUT: Big V Comedies—Got a good many laughs. So must have been pretty good comedy. Running time, two reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

RIMAC'S RHUMBA ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good band reel. Very good.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

RUFUS JONES FOR PRESIDENT: Ethel Waters—Good short but the all colored cast makes it plenty hot for child patronage. Running time, 19 minutes.—Phil Billiet, Colisium Theatre, Annawan, Ill. Small town patronage.

SHOESTRING FOLLIES: Eddie Peabody—Why, oh, why, do producers pad a swell one-reeler into a mediocre two-reeler? Take the last five minutes out of this and there would be nothing left but drivel. Running time, 21 minutes.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

SYNCOPATED CITY: Broadway Brevities—About average. Our patrons don't care so much for these. Wish we could get some good two-reel comedies once more. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

VACATION DAZE: Big V Comedies—Pretty good comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

VAUDEVILLE REEL NO. 3: Pepper Pot—Better than average Vaudeville Reel that pleased my patrons.—John A. Milligan, Broadway Theatre, Schuylerville, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Serial—Universal

CALL OF THE SAVAGE: Noah Beery, Jr.—Very good serial. On the eighth episode and same has held up pretty good. Running time, two reels.—E. D. Luna, Cozy Theatre, Wagoner, Okla. Small town patronage.

WABASH AVENUE

CHICAGO

When box office grosses begin ballooning with the arrival of hot weather and what used to be called dog days, then golf, ponies and who-you-were-with-last-night give place in Film Row gossip to reasons why, causes of, and how come. The experting has been going on for better than two weeks now, with business not only mounting steadily but certified by exhibitors pointblank into the teeth of the heavy contracting season. Winnowed out as chief reasons for all the theatregoing are two of the oldest and best: pictures good enough to pull people in and weather bad enough to push them in. And of course there's that Recovery thing, which Republican and Democrat are equally hard pressed to explain to the satisfaction of either or both. Thus Chicago in July, 1935, and small wonder that Loew's is of the opinion it's a good time and place to build.

James Coston of Warner theatres is back in town after attending the Warner convention on the Coast and leisurely touring Canada on the way home.

Steve Fitzgerald, formerly assistant manager of the Stratford, has been made manager of the remodeled, redecorated and otherwise revivified Cosmos, reopened after being closed several months for these operations.

There was sound of revelry by night, also morning, and nothing but a Technicolor camera was lacking to make the press agents association's party in the Josef Urban Room of the Congress hotel on June 29 a Rouben Mamoulian production of the first water (if so plain a fluid may be mentioned in this connection) and a perpetual tribute to the standing and stamina of the aggregation sponsoring it. Four hundred of the industry's finest were on hand and George Givot, the Three Stooges and a flock of other acts entertained.

Larry Stein is back from Hollywood, where he studioed, and from the San Diego Exposition, which he says is a miniature Chicago Fair in a niftier setting, and from Caliente, where he nicked the roulette wheel for fifteen smackers and escaped with a whole skin. As this has not been done previously in the memory of the oldest white settler, to Larry goes this week's Weaver Award for valor under fire, retreat with profit and a cool head in a hot spot.

Aaron Saperstein goes to Indianapolis next week for a meeting of the regional vice presidents of Allied.

The expanded and modernized quarters of Joe Goldberg on Wabash Avenue get handsomer and swankier day by day, and a steady stream of visitors moves through the showrooms, inspecting new lines of equipment, wishing the management well. Attendance at the formal dedication, still to be set, should set an all-time record.

Bill Gehring, sales manager for Clyde Eckhardt at Fox, has left for New York to take charge of the S. R. Kent Drive.

All Balaban & Katz theatres, 36 in Chicago and vicinity, and all Great States houses in Illinois and Indiana towns, formerly booked from the William Morris office here, are now to be booked from the new B. & K.-Paramount office known as the Theatre Booking Office, Inc. Louis R. Lipstone of B & K is president; Dick Bergen, who has handled Great States bookings for years, is vice-president; Walter Immerman, secretary-treasurer, and Elmer C. Upton, treasurer. Nan Elliott, with the Morris office for several years, will join the new organization after her vacation in August.

Lou Abramson of the Allied office is scheduled to undertake an intrepid invasion of the Wisconsin wilds on the 15th. Armed to the gunwales with rod, net and rifle, he authorizes this column to serve due notice on the natives that they hain't seen no fishin' yet.

With installation of new equipment and facilities in its special service laboratory, National Screen Service is now supplying direct to exhibitors a type of special announcement trailer not formerly obtainable save from the New York work plant. It is in use by Balaban and Katz and other large circuits.

There's a guy in town with two (count 'em) suits of clothes, one brown, one gray, neither new. He's important because he controls the temperature and the temperature has a lot to do with the annual competition between bathing beaches and picture shows. When he wears the gray suit it turns cold and rains. When he wears the brown suit, which he has to now and then in the name of common decency and the cleaners' and dyers' union, it turns hot and dry. He's willing to be incorporated, but as yet has received no bids, so he's wearing the brown suit this week and the heat's on. His name is

Engineer Demonstrates Transmission of Sound

Sound was translated into visible waves by Dr. J. O. Perrine, New York, associate editor of the Bell System Technical Journal, at a free public lecture in Salt Lake City recently. The subject of his lecture was "Seeing Speech and Music." He is on a nationwide tour and is appearing in the intermountain states under the auspices of the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company.

By means of an oscillograph, a device which takes sound waves from an amplifier and focuses them on a screen, Dr. Perrine demonstrated the comparative intensity of various types of vocal and musical sounds. Vowels, he showed, have a more intensive sound effect than consonants, and unvoiced consonants, such as s, h, f and p, have comparatively little sound effect.

Gerassy has been placed in charge of the Paris office, and Michael Havas has been named sales representative for Central Europe.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

SLACKER-MEMBERS

Over 4,500 theatre managers from all over the world have applied for and received membership in the Round Table. And as has been stated frequently, there are no dues to pay, no obligations to fulfill outside of those that members voluntarily undertake in reporting what they are doing to stimulate business.

The letter below from Round Tabler Wm. P. ("Bernie") Bernfield, United Artists exploiteer in Kansas City, deals with those members who do not contribute. Copy of our reply follows his comments:

Dear Mike:

Coming in contact as I do with different managers in the various states I travel, I as a firm believer in the Round Table pages, make it my business to ask the theatremen how they regard this department of Motion Picture Herald.

It is surprising that while these managers read the Round Table universally, in fact almost religiously, not too many admit to being regular contributors.

This is hard for me to understand, especially in these days. The average manager whom I contact will admit he has no one to go to bat for him in trying to secure for him a better break. He will agree in the Round Table section he can discover what the other fellow is doing to put over his pictures, but when taxed with the charge he is not doing his share by not contributing, the manager takes refuge in that old, old chestnut of an excuse, he doesn't want to three-sheet himself.

How foolish a statement that is! Some months ago I remember Mr. J. J. Fitzgibbons of the Famous Players Canadian circuit made a statement in the Round Table to the effect that any manager who did not take advantage of the publicity he could receive through your department was dissipating an invaluable asset, or words to that effect.

However, getting away entirely from the publicity angle, to my way of thinking, any manager who voluntarily applies for membership in the Club, should obligate himself as a matter of plain duty to his brother managers to forward at least once or twice a month details of his exploitation activities.

It is all wrong to be content to sit back and profit by what the other managers report and not do anything in return.

And it is your duty to sit down and give these timid brothers a thorough shaking for taking so much and giving so little.

Dear Bernie:

There is plenty of truth in what you say and accept our thanks for saying it. But we doubt the efficacy of giving the timid brothers as you suggest a strenuous shaking "for taking so much and giving so little." Maybe the guilty parties need to be reminded rather than whipped.

As far as the fear of three-sheeting is concerned, we do not doubt but that there are spots where managers play safe in keeping out of print. Although quite a few executives of the Fitzgibbons type encourage their men in this respect, there also are superiors who do not regard these activities with too much enthusiasm. But we do agree with you that the "three-sheet alibi" in too many instances is worn a bit thin.

Perhaps we should feel flattered by the lack of cooperation from the "timid brothers," for it may be that they believe your chairman a magicman who reaches into the air for campaigns, or pulls them out of a top-hat, like rabbits.

Were there handy an Aladdin's lamp, we'd rub it vigorously to transform slacker-members into active contributors. But for the lack of so charming a device, such exhortations as yours, Bernie, will serve we trust to point out to the wayward brothers the error of their ways.

HE RATES AN INVITE

Okay, gentlemen of the distribution forces. You've gathered from coast to coast in convention. Your branch managers, film salesmen, advertising staffs, studio and theatre heads and sich-like came together, digested your next season's product, were feted and stimulated and returned to their respective posts, pepped up to make this the big year.

Well and good, sez we. But why not go all the way and bring to your gatherings a representation of those men who in the final analysis bring in the grosses you've gotta have? Yes, folks, we mean the manager. Doesn't he also rate a shot of that inspiration?

No matter how resourceful and talented your smart theatreman may be, he is bound to become somewhat dizzy on that high pressure week after week merry-go-round. A bit of conventioning would do wonders in clearing his head.

Naturally, any mass movement of managers to distributor sponsored gatherings is not possible nor is it to be expected. But we do favor some practical plan by which worthy and outstanding showmen would be given these trips if only to inspire them to yet greater effort in building up the new season's returns.

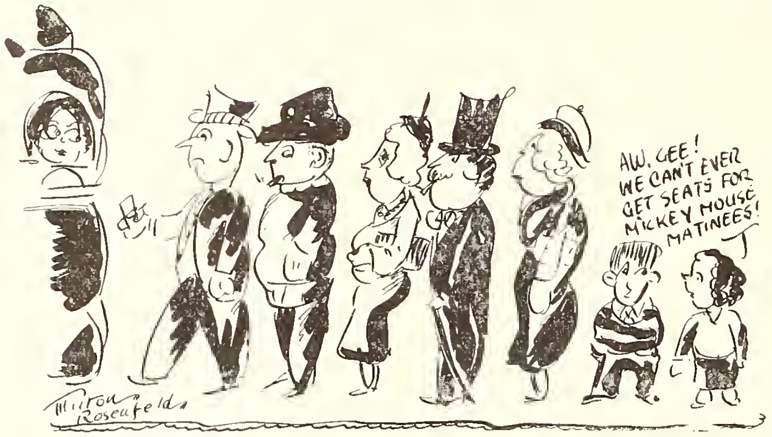
SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS!



Patrons "Mail" Letter For Black's Mobster

That lad Black, up in New Haven, at Loew's Poli, brought the jailhouse right into the lobby on his advance for "Public Hero." Full-blown mobster was stuck in the "can" (see photo) and armed guard paraded back and forth. Naturally, the folks would gather to see what was what, at which time the "prisoner" would stop them with: "Hey, if you're going out, mail this letter for me, will yuh?", passing through the bars missives addressed to Mrs. Moviegoer.

Letter signed Sonny Black, head-mobster in the picture, was addressed to his Ma, and told of his difficulties with the law, tieing in cleverly with the picture and the date at the Poli. Snapper in the letter advised mother to bring the kids so they could find out for themselves that crime does not pay.

For outside bally, Harry had a prison parapet erected on the roof next door to the theatre, with armed guard patrolling the defenses. Banner covered front of building.

Flowers Distributed On "Caliente" Opening

Gals in Mexican costume gave away roses promoted by Irv Windisch for the premiere of "In Caliente" at the New York Strand. Florists also carried windows on the tiein. Merchant tieups were effected with some of the ace department stores, Macy's going for a swim suit co-op, with large window showing Mexican beach scene and live models wearing new Mex beach hat.

Other similar promotions were arranged in Fifth Avenue locations, and helpful in the advance buildup was a series of radio stunts, including interview with some of the players who appeared in person at opening.

Public Fingerprinted For "Let 'Em Have It"

The highlight of Charlie Schlaifer's "Let 'Em Have It" campaign at the Omaha, Omaha, Neb., was tieup with local police wherein Bertillon expert spotted in lobby fingerprinted patrons. Each day various fingerprints were reproduced in papers and persons identifying their own prints received guest tickets. Vacant store adjoining theatre contained display of latest type machine guns, tear gas bombs and other such implements.

Newspaper also cooperated by plugging benefit show held at the Omaha for local milk fund and telegraph companies carried display in branch office windows.

Comedy Parade Tops "Town" Date

Comedy parade was staged by Irv Stein, Bay Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., on Mae West's latest, leading off with police escort and 25 high school boys in a marathon race starting at theatre. Boys wore "Goin' to Town" back banners and were followed by another riding donkey bannered with "don't be an ass" copy. Other youngsters on old-fashioned tandem bikes and tricycles carrying gag comedy banners also took part.

Native Dance Bally Put On At Rivoli

The New York Rivoli went quite native on "Sanders of the River," what with African dances, exhibits, records, and displays borrowed from the Museum of Natural History.

Five savages (?) dressed in African costumes, put on a vivid street bally in the performance of native dances accompanied by tribal music and tom-toms, on a platform built high above the theatre marquee. (See photo.) Put on during the rush hours, the stunt did well in helping to congest the Broadway traffic.

Special lobby display included large war-shield, spears, poison darts, tom-toms, bows and arrows and native head dresses, these all labelled for the information of the curious. Helpful too was a special record by Paul Robeson of the native chants, played over the theatre loudspeaker.

Cooperation of the Museum brought other native material for exhibit, which followed a screening for that institution's department heads. Group of scientists known as the "Africanders" through their interest in the Dark Continent, were present on the opening night.

Warnerites Inaugurate Star-Interview Slant

Newest publicity angle worked out by Charlie Einfeld at Warner's, is a new service for "personal" star interviews to local newspapers.

According to the plan, motion picture editor of recognized paper prepares list of questions for interview as if the star were in town. Questionnaire is then mailed to Eddie Selzer, publicity head, at the Coast studios, who will take them direct to the stars.

Service is pointed to be exclusive and each interview will be timed to break with local opening of star's latest film. Inaugurates in "Broadway Gondolier" press book.

Chairman Weekends In Boston, New Haven

To visit with New England members, to discuss with ad chief Harry Browning, the coming M and P Theatres Round Table guest section plus other Club matters, and to attend that circuit's second annual outing, your Chairman stepped off the merry-go-round and hied himself last week-end to Boston and New Haven.

Under the wing of the hospitable Browning, in Boston, a round of the executive offices was first in order, to greet headmen M. J. Mullin, Sam Pinanski and others, including Division Manager E. A. Cuddy, Bill Selesky, Ed Canter, W. R. Lynch, Hy Fine and Charley Branham. Then an informative "look-see" at Harry's excellent advertising files, explained by Secretary Nan Cohen, a system five years in the making and recommended as tops to aspiring theatremen.

The afternoon was given over to stops around town, guided by the amiable Dave Perkins, and brief visits were enjoyed with RKO adman Jack Goldstein, Phil Di Petro, at the Modern, and a pause at the Paramount to leave cards for absent Harry Brown and John McConville. A phone call to Joe Di Pesa, at Loew's State, and after a lobster dinner with Browning, we ran out to catch Abner Pinanski's bathing beauty show at the Jamaica.

Next call was upon Charley Bassin, at the Oriental, in time to see the customers coming out to his famed promenade in the rear of the theatre for gingerale and cigarettes. Then on the way to the hotel hellos were said to Sam Feinstein, at the Liberty, and Harry Goldstein, at the Shawmut.

Big Time at Outing

Early next morning (Saturday) was picked up by Browning and Perkins to go picnicking with the folks at Plymouth for an all-day outing of swimming, golf and baseball, shore-dinner, dancing and amusing theatrical skits taking off home office executives.

Among those on hand during the day, including the notables mentioned above, were District Managers Harry Wasserman, Chet Stoddard, Francis MacManus, Bob Sternberg and Leo Levison, Kendall Way, Henry Swartzberg, Marion Coles, Jake Laurie and Joseph P. Brennan. Business out of town prevented the attendance of Messrs. Mullin and Pinanski. Over 100 of the M and P personnel were on hand for the festivities.

On the way back we stopped to chat with Paul Kunze and the Missus, of the Old Colony and Plymouth theatres, in Plymouth, and found those charming people in good spirits and doing nicely.

New Haven Active

Sunday caught your hard-breathing Chairman in New Haven to visit with Division head Harry Shaw's Loewmen. Greetings were exchanged with division publicity head Erle Wright, and with Harry Black and assistant Elder at the Palace; Ben Cohen, at the College; Frank Henson, at the Bijou. Regards to Lou Schaefer and Ted Smalley were left at the Paramount through George Reising, and then to the "choo-choo" again and home.

Our regrets and apologies to the members we missed but our time of necessity was limited and we'll be seeing you next trip.—A-MIKE.

Showmanship not only compels persons, but governments as well, to stop, declares Carter Barron, Loew's Theatres Eastern Division Chief, referring to the presentation of June 27, of the Quigley Bronze for May by Governor Harry C. Nice, of Maryland (center) to Herb Morgan (left). The ceremonies held in the Governor's office, were also attended by William K. Saxton, Baltimore, Loew's Theatres City Manager (right) and Edward Arnold, Universal star.

The Governor indicated great admiration for the purposes of the Quigley Awards in recognizing the abilities of theatre managers and publicity directors throughout the world and expressed himself as being pleased to make the presentation. Morgan, won the Bronze for May on "Les Miserables' 'at the Century Theatre, Baltimore.

Lawrence's Contest Honors Late Ruler

In view of the great interest shown in the motion picture by the late King Albert, of Belgium, and to aid in keeping his memory alive, Laudy Lawrence, MGM chief in continental Europe, sponsored a nation-wide competition among Belgian sculptors for the production of a medallion representing the late monarch, to be placed in the lobby of each MGM theatre in that country.

"ON BOSSING AN ART SHOP"

Abilities of Department Head and Flexibilities of Shop Operation Discussed in Second Art Article

by HAL KOPPLIN
Wometco Theatres, Miami, Fla.

Few realize the part an art department plays in theatre operation. In importance it goes hand in hand with the advertising department in selling the attraction. As the newspaper space sells the outside world, just so the art department creates the necessary attractiveness in selling it "at the point of purchase." And, while the advertising department is creative, the art shop is even more so, for here we handle color, depth, lighting and motion. Almost anything can be created that can be imagined. And is.

So to boss an art department is quite an undertaking. The workman himself must be an artist, carpenter, an electrician, an inventor, a lover of work and a master of speed. The fellow who runs the shop must be all of these plus the necessity for being a business-man, a buyer, an executive and a diplomat. The least of these is not diplomat. He must bridge the gap between the manager and the artist. He must smooth the sailing when the work piles up. He has to pacify the manager who brings a week's work and wants it "yesterday." He must realize that the manager has a problem, while not forgetting that he has one, too. Both the manager and the artist are temperamental, I find, and sometimes it requires a considerable amount of strategy to right things. But that's part of the job.

Boss Should Not Boss

The main idea in bossing an art department is not to boss at all. Any man with brains enough to be an artist can pretty well know what's required of him. Naturally, each man must have his responsibilities, which he alone is accountable for. To boss an art department is to know just how much work a man can do in a specified time, and how well. He must understand the peculiarities so prevalent in the various types of work to be done, and therefore, he must give a certain job to the artist he knows is most capable of handling it.

In some theatre art shops it is customary for each artist to be responsible for from one to three theatres by himself. I do not follow this procedure for this reason: very few men can do everything well. One man can do beautiful pictorials; another man does excellent lettering, while still another man can run rings around them in making set-pieces and displays. I try to allocate the work to suit each particular man's adaptability. In other words, I plan each part of a job for the man who excels in that particular thing; i.e., one man does pictures, another does lettering, another makes displays, while still another does newspaper work.

Endeavors to Classify

Of course, in many cases it's not possible to follow this method precisely, because no one knows just how much of each type of work will be needed as the day proceeds. Only then, when a certain thing becomes particularly heavy, do the men work at other than their classification. I find that in doing this the work is speeded up and the finished job is of much higher quality than by having one man begin and finish the entire job by himself.

To satisfactorily run an art shop is to understand artists. Many of them will state quite emphatically that they are not temperamental. True; many of them do not show it outwardly as far as the average person can see. But, just the same they become quite irked when everything is not a happy hunting ground. And it usually isn't. I do not believe that exact hours should be maintained in a theatre art shop. (I suppose I'll be called to time by quite a number of art department heads for saying that.)

Does Not Favor Factory Methods

I do not believe that a law should be applied that each man must be at work at a certain specified time each day. But neither do I expect him to stop when a certain whistle blows. An art shop is not a factory (sweat shop, yes, but still not a factory), and no one can definitely state just how much work will have to be done during the coming day at nine in the morning.

Naturally the workman must be made to realize that he has forty hours ahead of him each Monday morning and that a certain work must be completed at a specific time. If he comes to work at ten, that's his business, as long as the results are the same. For instance, sometimes the boys would like to see the air-races, boat-races, parades, etc., and ordinarily they happen during what would be known as working hours, we try to get together and arrange the work so that they are able to attend. And usually succeed. Until this day we have never had a miss-out under this arrangement.

Artists Appreciate Setup

I believe the boys appreciate this consideration enough to really do better work in the realization that they can get out and see something whenever the occasion permits. If the working hours were maintained just as they are in an office or a factory it would mean that some days the boys would be hanging around idle just because they were filling in their quoted time schedule. On other days there would be too much work for this same group to handle.

As I have outlined above, even if there are but four hours' working time one day, tomorrow in all probability will be twelve. To a business man this arrangement might seem screwy, but to my mind an art department should work when there's work to do. And because the work is as important as it is, it must be done on time. Unlike many other things it cannot be left for tomorrow. For, as funny as it is, tomorrow there may be just as much.

BLAMES ERRORS ON WRONG MANPOWER

Dear Mike:

Floyd Bell's article is so self-evident in the field of sales of any commodity, be it pictures or potatoes, it is almost elementary. Every man who was once six years of age, and that includes theatre managers and publicity men, remembers how he "fooled" his mother with an imaginary stomach ache for the prize of staying home from school—and how he paid for his bad judgment by remaining in bed with a diet of castor oil. The only difference between Floyd Bell and those who persist in "fooling" merchants is that Floyd realizes that he'd only be fooling himself and the others don't.

If some of the so called high powered theatre men and publicity experts would put themselves in the position of the merchant for just five minutes—they would realize the value of promoting only those projects where the merchant profits equally with the theatre. They would experience the ideal situation of having the merchants in their communities call upon them for material for windows, space on programs, and the many opportunities that merchants have to cash in on the glamour of the movies and screen personalities. Give your people an even break and you can always go back again! That doesn't sound difficult, does it? Why a man representing a theatre which must operate in a community three hundred and sixty-five days a year, will jeopardize the advertising possibilities, the life blood of his business, for the sake of a little eye wash will always remain a mystery to me.

Floyd's reference to the job-fearing publicist who prepares his lengthy report on some inane tie-up, brings to my mind the fact that no small amount of these advertising abortions which we charge to managers and ad men can be laid at the doorstep of the Home Offices of some of our chains, where the powers that be demand campaign outlines with "proof" of activity on every picture.

"Leave Good Man Alone"

It seems to me that the placing of a theatre in a manager's or publicist's hands, carries with it the confidence that that man has the theatre's interest at heart—that he has the ability to carry on the work assigned to him and the resourcefulness to properly exploit the attractions he has to sell! If we don't have that confidence in the man he should not be handling the theatre. It doesn't take long to find out if a man has the stuff it takes to sell pictures combined with sincerity of effort.

If he has the stuff let him alone. If he doesn't, in fairness to the man, release him to find some work he's fitted for. He's wasting his own precious years and your dollars. All the outlined reports of advertising and publicity activities and all the samples of exploitation will not put a theatre over if the wrong man is on the job!

I would say that the solution to Floyd Bell's problem "Why Tieups Flop" lies in manpower, the right man in the right job!—SID HOLLAND, Elkhart Amuse. Co., Elkhart, Indiana.

When Floyd Bell, in the June 22 issue, placed the blame for merchant tieup flops upon the shoulder of the theatreman, this old time Round Tabler started a heap of discussion among the members regarding a topic they evidently feel is in need of plenty of airing.

Earle Holden, of Atlanta; Sid Holland, of Elkhart, and Gus Lampe, of Syracuse, have their say on this page, and others will be heard from later.

"LESS PROMISED, LESS DELIVERED"

Dear Mike:

Answering your letter of June 19, there is no doubt in my mind that Mr. Bell is correct in most of his contentions. However, there is one important item which he did not touch upon; that is, in tying up with any merchant, the manager should be sure that there is a motive for tying in. The idea of swapping lobby space for window space is unshowmanlike. In other words, don't approach a merchant unless you have something that can honestly tie in with the product the merchant sells and the product the theatre sells. Then it will not be necessary to offer any inducements to this merchant but the merits of the tieup will more than repay the merchant for any expenditure he may lay out.

It is a fine thing for a manager to have a reputation with a merchant to the extent that when he goes into their place of business for a tieup, the merchant knows he will get an equal break. Another evil is the exchange of screen credit for a newspaper cooperative page. It is my humble opinion that our screen is too valuable to sell anything but our attractions.

It has always been my custom to contact a merchant after the tieup has been finished either in person or by letter, thanking him for his cooperation, trusting that it has helped him to some extent, and that all agreements made by me were carried out.

I also find that the less promised to a merchant the less must be delivered. I have also made a practice of laying out the entire idea for the particular merchant and submitting it to him in full in writing so there is no misunderstanding.

I think that some managers do try to fill their press book, as Mr. Bell states, but in most cases I honestly believe that the manager gets so enthusiastic temporarily that he forgets all bounds of balance and in his endeavor to put a campaign over he sometimes promises more than he can deliver.

It is my belief that if managers will sit down and thoroughly analyze the product they have to sell and then pick out the progressive merchant who may fit into the picture, go to that merchant with the entire campaign in black and white, he can really go back time and time again for further cooperation. The main thing however is for a manager to instil in these merchants confidence. And he should never under any circumstances promise this merchant that the idea will build the merchant's business up to a tremendous volume, but rather sell the angle that this patricular tieup will keep the merchant's name in front of the public.—GUS LAMPE, Schine's Eckel, Syracuse, N.Y.

STORES WISED UP TO TIEUP BENEFITS

Dear Mike:

Floyd Bell is absolutely correct and he had the nerve to be absolutely frank in his discussion, now that he no longer is connected with the theater game. One really wonders just how many theater managers have all along felt the same way as does Bell, but being on the other side of the fence, never just wanted to admit this, even to themselves.

I honestly believe that the whole question of merchant tieups with theaters, goes back a good many years, at the time when we theater men, were taking all from the merchants and giving little in return. It took the merchants these several years to finally get wise, but now that they have, they certainly expect a 50-50 break.

Shoe Now on Other Foot?

As I do not keep any elaborate scrap books to which Mr. Bell refers, I do not necessarily have to worry about my clippings when approaching a merchant for a tieup. However, Mr. Bell did fail to mention that present day sales selling on the part of merchants has become somewhat like showmanship methods, and, if anything, when you contact a merchant for a tieup, it is the merchant now who expects all the breaks, and from past experiences he, the merchant, will get them, if he can. Sort of putting the shoe on the other foot.

No doubt, we all have had our individual experiences with merchants and tieups. And when we stop to think in just how many of these tieups did we really give a merchant a half break, that is if we were able to wiggle free from so doing? So you really cannot blame a merchant who has had it rubbed into him for squawking and refusing to cooperate, especially if he has been roped in before on a tie in where the theater promised him everything and gave nothing.

In the past, when merchants' tieups were proposed in press books, really didn't the theatres get the best of the bargain? Naturally when so called publicity experts prepared press books, they naturally had the interest of the theatre at heart and not the merchants. This was only natural.

There are many pictures made today, which theatres and merchants can get together on, to good advantage. But I honestly believe that when a manager, of today, attempts to make tieups with merchants, he should at least take into consideration that the merchant is entitled to his share of the bargain. And with this thought in mind, and by actually giving the merchant a break, there is no reason why the merchant and the theatre cannot become life long friends, with more tieups to follow.—EARLE M. HOLDEN, Capitol, Atlanta, Ga.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1934, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers.

Warners

There's a great show coming!

Not next fall—not next year—but right smack-dab in the middle of this summer!

This is a friendly but urgent warning not to overlook this quick cash opportunity just because we haven't been yelling about it months in advance.

We've been so busy telling you the great news of "G-Men," "Lamps of China," "Girl from 10th Avenue," "In Caliente," "Alibi Ike" and "Stranded" that we haven't been able to get a word in edgewise about "BROADWAY GONDOLIER."

Here's a show that we had cast lavishly, with DICK POWELL, JOAN BLONDELL, Adolphe Menjou, Louise Fazenda, William Gargan and a load of others . . .

On top of that we had parts written in for a lot of famous radio acts, including Ted Fio Rito and his band, the Four Mills Brothers, and the Canova Family . . .

Warn You

Then we turned the direction over to Lloyd (Sure-Fire) Bacon, and commissioned hit-writing Warren and Dubin to contribute six of their hottest songs.

But we still weren't sure what we had until last week's sneak preview in Hollywood.

That told us in unmistakable audience terms that we've got one of those show surprises that make picture business the most exciting game in the world.

Watch "BROADWAY GONDOLIER"... Watch your campaign on it! . . . And don't say Warners didn't warn you!

THE HAPPIEST MAN IN TOWN!

MARKETS REDISCOVERED

SLOWLY, tediously as the impatient motion picture world counts time and progress, the processes of classification and stratification inevitable for every industry which serves the many publics are becoming apparent in the operations of the studios, most conspicuously of course in Hollywood. The producers have in fact, if not for publicity purposes, arrived at that maturity of viewpoint which no longer requires the assumption that every picture produced is an epic, a classic, a candidate for eternal fame. This is reflected, too, in sales plans and distribution devices.

The development, being in the following of the inevitable, is natural and wholesomely favorable to all interests concerned. It removes many unnecessary fictions from the function of selling and considerably clarifies the process of buying.

A fortnight ago Mr. Douglas Churchill, a Hollywood contributor, wrote in the Herald on a theme which suggested that double billing might be taken by the producers to indicate that the industry was headed back toward the nickelodeon. It would be more accurate to observe that the nickelodeon never disappeared, that it has continued, somewhat modified and improved, and that the more imposing developments of the motion picture theatre have been supplementary developments superimposed upon the nickelodeon beginnings.

There is a market for at least as many grades of screen merchandise as for grades of groceries and clothes and motor cars. And the masses of the lower grade markets are not content with second hand wares, or goods that are cheap because they are old, outmoded or a failure higher up. This is as true of screen merchandise as of any. This explains why, as our "What the Picture Did for Me" department reveals, there are towns where a new Buck Jones is better box office than the best that Garbo ever did.

This season's announcements now closed present the greatest diversity of product that the industry has ever seen, a pleasing promise in behalf of the several and many publics.

INTERNATIONAL

THE winning of the Quigley Award for Showmanship for June, going to Mr. John Armstrong, advertising director of Paramount Theatres, London, for his signal efforts on behalf of "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," is a highly international event. For while he is Mr. Armstrong to the motion picture world, were you to meet him at play in Paris, on the Riviera, or even at the grouse shooting in Scotland, he would be Count Ostrorog. This able showman who did so well by the Lancers is Anglo-Polish and the title is authentic Polish of high degree. Incidentally Count Ostrorog—Mr. Armstrong to us—is the first overseas showman to win a Quigley award. He has previously shared in the monthly honorable mentions.

BACK TO THE SHOW

THE continuing problems reflected in the current discussions and projects concerning the making of the Center Theatre a long run house for films, the while continuing the Music Hall on its present policy, put emphasis once again on the fact that the real estate business is not the show business.

The theatre after all is not an institution of brick, steel and mortar and it is concerned with its housing just about as any other tenant of a leasehold. The theatre itself is an intangible something, an institution made mostly of a showman and his staff, and it somehow consists of what they do and not so much of the place in which they do it.

The Radio City project's two vast theatres with all their pomp and glory are conspicuous exemplifications but not unique. They represent the pinnacle of the effort to make active showmanship out of static architecture, and thereby mark the end of an era.

The rapidly rising level of attainment in motion picture production and the current wave of serious application to showmanship among showmen suggest the possibility that the motion picture industry and its entrepreneurs, having tried everything else to the supreme limit, have now resorted to purveying entertainment to the customers.

WHEN THE TIARE FADES

A GREY Wednesday with Manhattan wrapped in mists brings from Hollywood the tidings of the passing there of our friend, Mr. Ray Long, by his own hand. It is the final curtain on a life of dramatic progressions—the story of the boy from Indiana, through Chicago, New York, Hollywood, rising swiftly to success extraordinary—the wine of life growing heady and turning to bitter beer—flight on the trail of the fairy pipers and an interlude of tiare-scented Tahiti—the return, only to find yesterday's garlands in ashes. It has been just such a story as he so often purveyed through the pages he published—a fate pattern that he of all men might have known too well. His old friends will like to remember him best in the younger, eager years when the world ahead looked good.

This Week

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Still Coding

Tyree Dillard, Jr., enterprising Harvard lawyer and protege of the New Deal's "brain trust," threw the Voluntary Industry Committee a memorandum to chew on when he departed last week for a cruise of the high seas by way of celebrating his retirement as general counsel of the industry's Code Authority.

His proposal, a skeleton plan (see cover), charts self-regulation for the motion picture industry through voluntary arbitration, calling for the creation of an "American Motion Picture Institute" as the agency of central control of a system of national and local boards empowered to adjudicate labor disputes in exhibition and production and to determine trade practice complaints.

While legislation of the trade practice regulations is left to the industry, enforcement presumably would be by decree of the Federal Trade Commission, which takes the place of the deceased NRA as the nation's code agency. Cooperation of the Commission and of the Department of Justice would be sought.

The father of the plan cites precedents as arguing its legality. However, the Voluntary Industry Committee, formed to explore the possibilities of a voluntary code, is not convinced that it could circumvent the legal shoals, and is proceeding warily.

The committee may soon submit the idea to the industry at large for opinions, prior to seeking Federal Trade Commission benediction. Meanwhile, it is presented in full on pages 17 and 18, with an analysis and other code developments on page 13.

Mr. Dent Scolds

From Toronto come reports of the expressed displeasure of Arthur Dent, sales manager of British International Pictures, with the lack of enthusiasm being shown by Canadian theatremen in pictures produced at the seat of the Empire. Mr. Dent threatens a theatre-buying invasion, meanwhile registering intimations that he will speak to the home Government about the deportment of his Canadian cousins. See page 15.

British International Pictures announces, in New York, plans to establish its own exchanges in the United States, if other proposals for distribution in the United States fall through. A decision will be made by Arthur Dent, general manager of the company, with John Maxwell, chairman of the board, upon Mr. Dent's return to England. He plans to sail late this week.

Coming over with 14 films which he hoped to sell for American distribution, Mr. Dent closed deals definitely for only one by early this week. MGM takes "Blossom Time," to be released here as "April Blossom." Other deals, for three or four pictures, were pending.

BIP intends to make a strong bid for the American market, Mr. Dent indicated, producing two-thirds of its pictures with international distribution in view. Mr. Dent takes back with him a quantity of product from American independent companies.

U.A. Announces

United Artists' sales meeting in Hollywood this week brought to an end the year's convention season, and with it came the announcement that eight contributing producers would spend $14,500,000 on 24 productions next year, not including Walt Disney's 18 color cartoons. The company, in turn, will budget $2,500,000 for advertising.

With the convention came a deviation from the old U. A. policy whereby each producer passed on exhibition contract applications for his own productions and the substitution of full authority over all contract acceptances in the hands of Al Lichtman.

New directors were elected to the board, the distribution personnel structure was strengthened by promotions and a realignment of the top line, and the management predicted a 50 per cent increase in rental returns in the new year.

Republic's final regional convention, held in New York, and announcement of the nature of the first eight productions to be produced by 20th Century for Fox Film, were other developments of the week as virtually all companies rested on final product and policy plans for the new season. See page 55.

Huey Hits Back

Senator Huey P. Long, "czar" of Louisiana, extended his sway over the motion picture industry in the state this week when the subservient legislature, in extraordinary session, jammed through a drastic censor law as one of 25 "dictator" measures demanded by the Senator. Film men estimate it will cost the industry $18,000 a year.

When "March of Time" depicted the political dominance of the "Kingfish" not long ago, there were rumors he would seek retaliation through censorship. Some view the measure as pork for hungry job seekers and as a revenue provider. In New Orleans, the showing of "sex" pictures and other objectionable films at some theatres is reported to have added fuel to the fire.

The act empowers the governor to appoint a board of three to approve films they adjudge "moral, educational, amusing or harmless" in character. Others will not be permitted, and drastic penalties are provided. The story is on page 14.

And More Suits

And still more independents have gone to the federal court for relief from distributor-circuit "aggressions" and the resultant conspiracies in restraint of trade which are alleged to have developed therefrom.

In Lincoln, Nebraska, the now defunct Independent Theatres, Inc., this week sued distributors and affiliated circuits for $1,353,000 on the grounds of alleged collusion and conspiracy to control the exhibition situation in that city.

At Milwaukee, Shubert Playhouses Corporation obtained an order against distributors and circuit interests to show cause why product should not be supplied to the independents' theatres at Minneapolis and St. Paul. See page 38.

Fox Studios

The Fox-Twentieth Century situation being what it is, special interest attaches to the issuance this week of a brochure from the Fox Film Corporation studios in California entitled "Departmental Resume and Available Facilities of Movietone City and Western Avenue"—which means the Fox production plant—all dated July 1, 1935.

This document presents Winfield Sheehan at the top of the list, as vice-president and general manager of production, and remarks: "This official is in charge of personnel, and in authority over all departments and production."

Thereafter are listed various general executives and a vast array of departmental managers, craftsmen, etc.

—MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC

Children's Choice

While attempting to prove that school children give radio a high place in their calendar of amusements, Mrs. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, concedes that the screen is the leading entertainment of juveniles, quoting from a survey of the amusement preferences of 3,500 children in New York schools.

Many other striking comparisons and parallels between the radio and the cinema are contained in a study titled "Radio and Children," prepared by Mrs. Gruenberg for the Radio Institute of the Audible Arts, termed the "Hays organization of radio." A similar study may be made for films in the fall.

"The fact that prohibition and censorships are out of harmony with our traditions, and that they are in the end ineffective, should make us seek other modes of regulation," says Mrs. Gruenberg. Story on page 35.

Radio Purge

Addressing the National Association of Broadcasters at its thirteenth annual convention in Colorado Springs this week, Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, warned that Congressional regulation of broadcasting may be expected unless the industry purges itself of the offensive and improper.

Mr. Prall said while the Commission felt a good start had been made toward self-regulation, particularly by the large networks, the job has not been completed. Gross and wilful infractions of the Commission's standards would be followed by ruling stations off the air, he cautioned. The story is on page 37.

Theatres Flooded

Motion picture theatres in several upstate New York cities were inundated by a flood this week which cost $15,000,000 in general property damage. It was the worst flood in 100 years in the state, and exchange centers and circuit division offices in Albany and Buffalo were still attempting at press time to ascertain to what extent theatres have suffered.

Elmira was out of touch with Hornell theatres, which are known to have been closed at the flood peak Monday and Tuesday. Theatres in Bath and Addision were under water, although houses at Ithaca, Corning, Elmira and nearby towns were open.

Film deliveries were going through to the three unaffected towns mentioned, but on the Lehigh Railroad as trucks were unable to penetrate through the flooded area. Exhibitors were required to travel to the railroad station at Sayre, 20 miles from Elmira, to pick up prints for Ithaca, Corning and Elmira.

The biggest flood damage, in Watkins Glen, evidently caused considerable loss to the theatre there.

Virtually all theatre owners in the area fear that the loss of crops will react at box offices over weekends.

Watertown's theatres were not affected, and Rochester was out of the direct storm area, conditions being good within a 30-mile radius. Damage to electric lines, however, took its toll at box offices almost everywhere in the section.

From Binghamton came word that business there, as well as in the surrounding territory, was crippled severely, what with bridges washed away and roads made impassable.

Fred Perry, of Meco theatres, Binghamton, wired that "the local radio station WNBF has been broadcasting without a pause all night since the disaster, giving to the anxious public the exact happenings of the second, as well as reporting lost and found people in the terrible flood. Thousands have been made homeless in this terrible disaster."

Germany Televises

Once again television's eyes seem to have proved larger than its stomach, and despite a large new station in Berlin the problems of technical development are restricting television screen coverage to scenes having only three or four persons, while the cost of the receivers still is prohibitive.

However, the development of fast handling of news event television from the scene of the action—in one to five minutes—by means of a new "pickup" truck is giving the newsreel companies considerable to contemplate. Wilhelm E. Schrage, well versed in matters televisionary in Germany, writes in this issue of the HERALD, page 49, of the newsreel and other developments in the television field.

Resolvers in Wales

Now that the results of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association summer conference at Cardiff, Wales, can be winnowed thoroughly and action separated from words, little of material benefit to the small exhibitor is expected to come out of the convention, says Bruce Allan, HERALD correspondent in London, this week.

Resolutions were passed, some of them sharply enough worded, but interpretations and applications are something else again. Mr. Allan's resume article is on page 48.

Up Ten Million!

Recognizing the growing interest in things cinematic of the Wall Street leaders who make up its audience, the Wall Street Journal undertook an investigation of the budgetary phases of 1935-36 production programs, from which it concluded that "announced schedules" would require a $10,000,000 increase in production expenditures next year over the $110,000,000 spent this season.

Extending its study further, the Journal estimated that theatre attendance had increased 10,000,000 in a year, from 60,000,000, and that business at the box office will continue to improve, not only because of the general business betterment but due to the "sincere attempt to improve the quality of pictures that has been increasingly manifest." Results of the investigation appear on page 34.

French Quota

The business of the motion picture in France feels that Americans will reap benefit from the decree extending for a full year the quota regulations, without adding any further restrictions, says Pierre Autre, HERALD correspondent in Paris. Departure from last year's policy of revising the act each six months gives importers an opportunity to plan distribution. Mr. Autre also shows in tables the current taxation system in France, both in Paris and in the provinces, and contrasts the assessments with those to be paid under a promised reduction averaging one-third. The story and tables appear on page 69.

Box Office Mintage

Indicating, says the U. S. Treasury, a general upward trend in business bringing a greater demand for currency, the U. S. mints in the fiscal year ending June 30 had one of their busiest twelve-month periods in their history.

The domestic coinage was 608,414,207 pieces, valued at $39,131,127, as compared with 46,634,250 pieces, at $3,499,125, in the previous year, and 32,154,300 pieces at $27,861,420 in the 1933 fiscal year.

"The heaviest demand was for the smaller coins," reports the Bureau of the Mint. "The total number of pieces included 412,266,000 pennies, 61,982,003 nickels, 69,413,000 dimes and 48,905,252 quarters."

This is good news to the industry, because the general demand is a reliable indicator that more nickels, dimes and quarters are finding their way to the box-offices.

MACHINERY PROPOSED FOR VOLUNTARY CODE

"Institute" Would Have Labor Councils for Production and Exhibition and Industrial Boards on Trade Practices

Submitting of Plan to Industry Depends upon Results of Subcommittee Study of Legality of Provisions

Self-regulation of the motion picture industry through a nationwide system of adjudicating machinery that would administer a voluntary code, together with a method of arbitrating trade practice and labor disputes, is outlined in the plan proposed by Tyree Dillard, Jr., who retired last week as general counsel of the Code Authority. The proposal, now in the hands of the Voluntary Industry Committee, composed of 10 members of the former Code Authority, for a study of its legal adaptability, will be turned over to the industry, probably within a few days, for a decision by all elements on the advisability and practicability of its adoption before it is submitted to the Federal Trade Commission for approval.

In essence it is described by its title: "An Outline of a Pian for Voluntary Arbitration in the Motion Picture Industry." It proposes to create an "American Motion Picture Institute," the structure of which shall consist of these components:

I. American Motion Picture Labor Council.
  1. Production Labor Council.
    a. Extras.
    b. Electricians.
    c. Etcetera.
  2. Exhibitor Labor Councils.
    a. Vaudeville and Presentations.
II. American Motion Picture Industrial Councils.
  1. Local Industrial Councils.

The American Motion Picture Labor Council, Mr. Dillard suggests, shall be established with offices in New York, to act as a supreme court in all labor disputes. It would be composed of representatives of all employee groups with an equal number of employers, with or without an impartial member. Any unions participating would agree to ban strikes, and all employers would agree not to resort to lockouts.

Local labor councils would be set up in each exchange territory or other designated area to handle labor disputes, and decisions would be subject to the right of appeal to the higher labor council in New York. Mr. Dillard suggests that the mediation machinery operated by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences governing actor-writer relations with the studios might be incorporated, as well as the rules and regulations prescribed by the standing committee for extras. It might be feasible, the plan recommends, to create a Motion Picture Production Council for other studio labor complaints, to act as an intermediate labor board and appellate tribunal.

It is provided that local boards with exhibitor and distributor representation be established in each key city to adjudicate trade practice complaints. Appeals would be taken to the American Motion Picture Industrial Council, the court of last resort in trade practices, unless the determination of the local council was unanimous, in which event application for an appeal would be necessary.

Starting on page 17 appears the full text of the Dillard plan for the setting up of an "American Motion Picture Institute" for self-regulation of the industry.

The Industrial Council also would serve as the governing board of the entire Motion Picture Institute, which would be designed as a nonprofit corporation and act as the central control of all component agencies.

Mr. Dillard emphasizes his proposal is a broad outline of a plan for voluntary regulation, and no attempt is made to supply all the details or suggest solutions of controversial issues, which necessarily would be taken care of in rules of practice to be adopted by the industry. The plan is not a code, but chiefly, a chart of the machinery by which any code could be administered. The details are left for industry representatives to determine.

In behalf of the legality of his idea, Mr. Dillard submits two important and precedent-setting court decisions. In one, Appalachian Coals, Inc., vs. U. S., the United States Supreme Court refused to enjoin 73 per cent of the bituminous coal operators in the country who had adopted a plan governing production and sale of the product.

In the other case, titled Wolfenstein vs. Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., and involving the legality of certain regulations covering practices in the ladies' dress industry, the Supreme Court of New York decided manufacturers and retailers had the right to join in correcting abuses or to stabilize the industry, provided the plan did not constitute a restraint of trade.

His plan is the only one specifically for the industry that is receiving any sort of serious consideration by the Voluntary Industry Committee, headed by J. Robert Rubin, vice-president of MGM. Powerful labor groups to which it was submitted in Washington for reactions and officials of the U. S. Department of Labor are reported to think well of it.

Whether this proposal or any other will be submitted to the industry depends on the findings of a sub-committee on the extent to which the industry can go in formulating voluntary procedure in the light of court decisions directly affecting the industry. It is scheduled to meet by next Monday at the latest.

Once the industry adopts a voluntary fair practice code and effectuating machinery with the sanction of the Federal Trade Commission, which supersedes the functions of the NRA, the Commission can enforce the provisions on interstate business through the issuance of cease and desist orders. This, believes James L. O'Neill, administrator of the new NRA, will be even more effective than enforcement under the outlawed compulsory codes. Also, various legal means of persuasion and compulsion could be applied by the industry agency itself, it is believed.

Chairman Edwin L. Davis of the Federal Trade Commission said in Washington this week the Commission will be "as liberal as possible within the law" and that the Commission's rules of codification will be "absolutely uniform" for all industries and sufficiently broad so as to apply to all industries alike. He said that changes in the Commission membership might alter methods of administration, but emphasized that no illegal codes will be permitted.

The Code Authority will wind up its affairs the last of next week, said John C. Flinn, executive secretary. Mr. Flinn will not announce his plans until that function is complete.

Industry factors in Wisconsin are speculating what effect a code of fair competition recently adopted by the state will have on their operations. Patterned in part after the NRA setup, the act places extensive powers in the hands of the governor. It prohibits unfair trade and competitive practices, and makes it the duty of the governor to prescribe codes for industries in the state and "to make reasonable classification of persons, employments and standards of fair competition and trade prctices in such business." One of the purposes of the law is to stabilize employment.

Exhibitors continued this week to debate the question of a voluntary code. Typical of many expressions was that of Eugene Blazer, attorney for the Tri-State circuit, operated by A. H. Blank, at Omaha. "A code," said Mr. Blazer, "should not only be a moral influence, but should also have physical persuasiveness behind it." Charles E. Williams, president of the MPTO at Omaha, favors a court of appeals where exhibitors can go with trade complaints. On the other hand, Los Angeles independents, through their spokesman, Harry Chotiner, president of the ITOA, believe a voluntary code would not benefit them.

While no definite commitments were made, it was learned that officials of Fox West Coast are definitely favorable to a voluntary code and feel adoption of regulatory measures is necessary.

Independent exhibitors in Cleveland were meeting with major circuit officials on a new clearance and zoning schedule to replace the current plan which expired July 8.

Ray Long, 57, Dies From Rifle Wound In Coast Hospital

Ray Long, motion picture scenarist and nationally known magazine writer, editor and publisher, died at sundown Tuesday in Beverly Hills Emergency hospital in California, after an unsuccessful operation to remove a bullet from a rifle wound which, said the police, had been self-inflicted.

In Hollywood a Year

Mr. Long was born in Lebanon, Ind., on March 23, 1878. He had been in Hollywood for a year trying his hand at scenario writing and editing for, successively, Fox, Columbia and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. His motion picture efforts were somewhat less than exciting successes. His last effort at employment was an application for the post at the head of the story department at the Paramount studio.

When Bernarr Macfadden acquired Photoplay Magazine, subsequent to the death of James R. Quirk, publisher, Mr. Long was retained as an editor in a somewhat collaborative position with Kathryn Dougherty, who had been Mr. Quirk's closest business associate through his years with the magazine, and through the same years in which Mr. Long had been his closest friend. There were storms in the office of Photoplay and some months ago Mr. Long went to Hollywood to be "western editor" for Macfadden interests, according to the announcements.

While Mr. Long rose to fame as editor of the Red Book in Chicago he was best known as editor of William Randolph Hearst's Cosmopolitan Magazine, which merged with Hearst's International in 1925 and became Hearst's International Cosmopolitan.

Reported to have been one of the highest paid magazine editors, receiving salary and bonuses which sometimes netted $180,000 annually, Mr. Long had been variously associated with Peter B. Kyne, Royal Brown, Damon Runyon, Adela Rogers St. John, Roy Howard, O. O. McIntyre, Ring Lardner and others.

His reputation was founded on a formula for diagnosing the public's literary taste and supplying material to satisfy it.

In 1900, after a brief apprenticeship as a messenger and copy boy, Mr. Long became a reporter on the Indianapolis News. In the five years there he developed his lifelong friendship with Roy W. Howard, who also held a modest position, and with Booth Tarkington, George Ade, Meredith Nicholson and other writers.

He left the News in 1905 to become managing editor of the Cincinnati Post, and, after three years, the Cleveland Press.

Into Magazine Field in 1910.

In 1910 Mr. Long entered the magazine field as associate editor of Hampton's Magazine and later became editor of the Hampton-Columbian. In 1912 he took over the editorship of the Red Book, Blue Book and Green Book magazines in Chicago. Six years later Mr. Hearst brought him to New York and made him president and editor-in-chief of International Magazine Company, Inc., giving him editorial supervision over Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, Harper's Bazaar and Motor Boating.

It was Mr. Long's persistence and enterprise that induced President Coolidge to write for Cosmopolitan the story of his six years as president. Another feat was the publication of John Masefield's first work after he had been named poet laureate of England. It was "The Wanderer," a saga of the sea.

On Oct. 1, 1931, he resigned as head of the International group of magazines and entered the book publishing field as chairman of the board of Richard R. Smith, Inc., a firm which later included Mr. Long's name. Disagreements caused Mr. Long to walk out of his office one day in August, 1932. He announced that he was sailing for Papeete, Tahiti.

Word came back from the South Seas that he had decided never to return to America, but in 1933 Mr. Long arrived in the Hollywood film colony and presently was employed to write and edit motion pictures for Fox Film.

While in the publishing business, which later went into bankruptcy, Mr. Long, with Maxim Gorky, persuaded Joseph Stalin to write a book on "Russia Today." Later he wrote about Russia on his own, as "An Editor Looks at Russia," in which he viewed the Soviet experiment with hopeful eyes. In 1932 Mr. Long published "Twenty Best Stories in Ray Long's 20 Years as an Editor."

Mr. Long was instrumental in 1914 in establishing the Author's Fund, which makes loans to needy writers. He conceived the idea and George Creel, Will Irwin, the late Charles Scribner and Harvey O'Higgins were active in support of it.

Louisiana Adopts Censorship Law

A state censor law was jammed through the special session of the Louisiana legislature at Baton Rouge this week, as one of 25 bills demanded by Senator Huey P. Long. The measure now awaits the signature of Governor O. K. Allen.

The bill was viewed in some industry circles as retaliation for the "March of Time" sequences on Senator Long, and by others as a move to provide jobs and revenue. The sequence in the third edition of "March of Time," released April 19, depicted the Senator's rise to power. It was deleted by some Loew theatres and in theatres in New Orleans.

A three-member censor board to be appointed by the governor is provided, and no film may be released without its approval, which shall be given to pictures of a "moral, educational, amusing or harmless character." The measure places a fee of $4 on each 1,000-foot reel or fraction thereof, the revenue to provide salaries for the censors. Distributors propose to pass the tax to the exhibitor in the form of higher rentals, and the theatres plan to pass it on to the public.

Under terms of the act forbidding any local censorship by parishes or municipalities, the New Orleans censor board will review only stage shows. Censor board members will get $5 a meeting, plus 25 cents for each 1,000 feet scanned. Penalties of from $25 to $500 in fines would be imposed for each violation.

Also adopted by the legislature was a resolution interpreted as giving Senator Long power to expend any state fund for any purpose.

Crosby-Cohen in Film Deal

John E. Otterson, president of Paramount Pictures, now in Hollywood, consented this week to an arrangement whereby Bing Crosby, company star, and Emanuel Cohen, former studio head, will form a partnership to produce one picture annually outside of Mr. Crosby's regular quota for the company. The partners will share profits on the ventures, and it is understood that negotiations are under way for release through United Artists.

Court Reserves Decision in Derr Fight vs Pathe

The combination minority stockholder fight of Pat Casey and E. B. Derr against the present management of Pathe Exchange, Inc., reached an open court hearing Tuesday when Martin King, counsel, argued before New York state supreme court justice Valente for an order granting Mr. Derr permission to examine the records of the corporation. The plaintiff alleged that control of Pathe is under "corporation manipulators."

Frederic R. Coudert, Jr., counsel for the company, told the court that Mr. Derr's suit was not brought in good faith, but "to harass and annoy the company," after Mr. Derr had been "summarily dismissed" as president in 1931, and that for the last six months he had "used every means in his power to insinuate himself back in the company."

Decision was reserved.

Mr. Derr is reputed to be the "moving spirit" in a previous action brought by Pat Casey for the appointment of a receiver, which was subsequently withdrawn and a suit for an accounting substituted. This case is pending before Judge Lauer in New York State supreme court.

Mr. Derr on Tuesday told the court that some 90 minority Pathe stockholders have declared that the corporation is being mismanaged and that assets have been dissipated.

Martin King, attorney both for Derr and Casey, was given 24 hours by the court to submit answering affidavits in the Derr mismanagement action, and he said that he will also move for permission to examine officers and other defendants in Mr. Casey's action before trial.

Independent Wins Arbitration Case Against Paramount

Paramount Pictures this week lost the decision in a New York voluntary arbitration hearing growing out of a complaint by Maxwell J. Wallach, of the Orpheum theatre, on Second Avenue, for fulfillment of an exhibition contract.

President Signs the National Theatre Bill

President Roosevelt at Washington late last week signed the bill authorizing federal incorporation of the American National Theatre and Academy designed to develop the drama, with a group of prominent sponsors participating on a non-profit basis.

Loew's Redeems Bonds

Loew's St. Louis Realty and Amusement Company on August 1 will redeem $265,000 of real estate mortgage notes on Loew's State in St. Louis in advance of maturity by paying par plus six per cent interest and a two per cent premium. In addition $17,500 in notes due on that date will be taken up at par plus interest. The redemption is the balance of a $65,000 loan made in 1924, maturities on which had until August 1, 1939, to run.

BUY BRITISH PICTURES IF YOU EXPECT TO SELL WHEAT, DENT TELLS CANADA

BIP Executive Hints Company Will Kick Way into Dominion Market Unless Exhibitors Purchase More at Higher Rentals

Reference to English Circuit Additions Taken as Threat to Build in Canada; Talks of Exchange System in U. S.

Toronto Correspondence

Disturbing inferences of an unmistakable clarity that his English producing and distributing company will literally kick its way into the Canadian market, unless exhibitors in the Dominion buy more of its product at much higher rentals, were left in Toronto last week by Arthur Dent, executive of British International Pictures.

The situation took on serious intra-Empire aspects when he declared that Canadians could not expect the British Isles to buy wheat and other Dominion products when Canadians refuse to accept British motion pictures.

His remarks were taken at once as a challenge to American competitors who are marketing their product in the Dominion, and, at the same time, a defiance of the right of Canadians to self-government.

Mr. Dent had been invited to Toronto from New York, where he is concluding an apparently unsuccessful attempt to invade the United States market, to address the annual sales convention of Empire Films. His expressions of denunciation so disturbed the gathering that adjournment in disorder was threatened on seven occasions, and were climaxed when he shouted to the delegates, some of them Americans, that the British film industry did not propose to stand any longer for the "entirely dissatisfactory" grosses accruing to British producers from the release of their pictures in Canada. Canadians could expect an economic retaliation from the Mother Country unless they gave more booking time and more money to British product, he added.

Political Action Intimated

The record does not show, however, that Mr. Dent spoke on behalf of British production as a whole, but rather as a salesman for British International Pictures, whose product Empire distributes in Canada, along with the releases of Educational Film and Republic Pictures, of this country. Representatives of both companies attended the convention.

The doors to the convention hall were closed tightly, but the furore created by Mr. Dent's threatening remarks was so pronounced that word of the tirade seeped through to the trade on the outside.

That the "something" which will be done to Canada will be of a political nature emanating from the Mother Country was promised by Mr. Dent by inference, although the nature of the contemplated action remains vague.

He would not say whether he holds the Canadian film-public, the theatre owner or the distribution system at fault, or whether it is a combination of all three. Mr. Dent, however, did give the impression that he was prepared to take action in any of these three directions.

BIP's executive reminded the Canadians about the recent additions to the company's circuit in England, where some 500,000 seats have been added in three months for the purpose of furthering product representation for British International. This was accepted as a threat to build in competition to Canadian exhibitors, unless they "come across."

The most interesting and immediate result of the Dent remarks in this connection was to revive the recurrent rumors of a British-controlled theatre circuit in the Dominion. Furthermore, it was widely reported in Canadian film circles that a joint invasion of the Dominion by British producers and the acquiring of key theatres where British product would have first call on available time, was one of the plans which Mr. Dent had in mind if bookings and earnings through existing channels did not improve.

That BIP wants to be known as seriously considering entering Canadian exhibition in competition to existing operations became known when Mr. Dent told BIP representatives at the convention to "keep your eyes open" for likely theatre properties. They were further instructed that the theatres in which their principals might be interested were not neighborhoods, unless they were "good" neighborhoods and first-class properties.

There are many in Canada, however, who do not believe the sincerity of the company's intentions to build up a theatre circuit. The general viewpoint is that the Dent theatre "invasion" plan is merely a threat and that it would take no definite form if BIP were assured of sufficient outlets for its product.

If the acquisition of theatres is not the method decided upon it is expected that, based on Mr. Dent's remarks, the whole situation would be taken out in the open as an intra-Empire matter for government consideration. This presumably would bring quota threats and such.

Such a course has been mentioned before and is known to have been discussed by Mr. Dent during his visit to Toronto.

Conflict of Opinion

The attitude of Mr. Dent has brought to a head again, in Canada, a producer-distributor-exhibitor disagreement which has been continuing for years. There is a definite conflict of opinion on the earning power of British films in the Dominion which dates back to the time when below-standard British films were brought into Canada and sold under high pressure advertising and exploitation. They did good business, but, so exhibitors charge, soured the Canadian public. In Mr. Dent's own case there has been specific argument regarding the quality of some of the product BIP sent into Canada; on the other hand, some of the largest grosses rolled up by any pictures in Canada this season have been made by British productions.

Mr. Dent said in Toronto that "U. S. distribution of at least 80 per cent of BIP's output" would be taken care of and an important announcement would be made in that connection shortly.

However, as Mr. Dent nears the eve of his return to England only two distribution deals for the States have been consummated, for two pictures, MGM and Columbia each taking one.

Talks of U. S. Exchange System

Interviewed in New York on Tuesday before departing for London, Mr. Dent said that BIP is determined to invade the United States market, regardless, and, if necessary, will establish its own system of exchanges in this country.

Mr. Dent said that of course he would like to have a major company or companies take over his pictures for distribution, but, failing that, there are several alternatives under consideration.

The question of direct sales and distribution through BIP exchanges, or a physical handling arrangement similar to that of Gaumont British with Fox, or whether the company will sell to an independent distributor those pictures which the majors reject, will be decided in conferences with John Maxwell, chairman of the company's board. Mr. Dent plans to be back here in September, by which time he hopes to have a deal definitely completed. Any arrangement will be under the aegis of Alliance Pictures, Ltd., BIP's subsidiary for America.

"The much boosted American bustle is a myth," said squat, bespectacled, genial Mr. Dent, with a tinge of disappointment perceptible behind the smile. Intending to stay a month, he remained two months. "Things work out slower here than in England," he complained.

"International" Background

"Both Mr. Maxwell and myself are quite satisfied with the reception of our pictures by the American trade," he continued. "The response has satisfied us that we can make pictures that should find a market in this country, and we plan, therefore, to concentrate on a new type of international product."

Two-thirds of the company's output of 25 films next year will have the "international" background, while the balance will be a more national type of production, not intended for export, said Mr. Dent. Principally, the export product will be musicals, since BIP has found they are the most successful on the world market.

CHALLENGE FROM DENT

Mr. Dent arrived here with 14 pictures he hoped to dispose of to American companies. On Wednesday of this week a deal for one had been closed with MGM, and negotiation for another with Columbia was pending. First Division is mentioned as an independent company with which BIP may tie up in the fall.

"We intend to cooperate fully with the American Production Code Administration in submitting pictures sent over here," said Mr. Dent. "However, the British Board of Film Censors is very strict, and there will be little leeway left for us here. We do not anticipate that after our pictures pass the British censors they will run into difficulties in America."

Mr. Dent came here also on a buying expedition, and as a result takes back with him a number of independent pictures, among these "New Adventures of Tarzan," from Burroughs-Tarzan Enterprises; "The Lost City," from S. S. Krellberg; "Speed Demon," from J. H. Hoffberg Company, as well as a series of a dozen Bray cartoons distributed by J. C. Barnstyn's British & Continental Trading Company, and two three-reelers from Imperial Distributing Corporation, "Ice Flow" and "East of Java." Other subjects are being negotiated for, including Republic product for British distribution. Exhibition of the American product is planned in BIP's circuit of 250 theatres.

Sees "Improvement"

"I found conditions here generally improved over what they were two years ago, when I last visited America," Mr. Dent reported. "They are not all that could be desired, but certainly tending toward improvement. The atmosphere in business circles is more cheerful.

"Industry conditions in England are much better than in the United States, for two reasons—there is no blind buying, which fact induces quality production, and exhibitors show fewer pictures than they do in this country. Extended runs are more of a regular procedure over there. In any center of reasonably large population, weekly runs are the rule, while here I find changes usually are made twice weekly and sometimes, at the subsequent runs, there are as many as four different programs in a week.

"Therefore in America, a greater number of poorer pictures are made. In England the exhibitor keeps his date book solid for six months, and selects pictures weekly as he goes along. The result is more discrimination. Poorer pictures in England do a relatively smaller gross than here, but that is counterbalanced by bigger pictures doing a much greater gross pro rata than they would here."

While blind buying is banned in England, block booking, or what amounts to block booking, still exists, said Mr. Dent, since the distributors make every effort to force sales of socalled smaller pictures with the bigger ones. However, from an exhibitor standpoint, it is not quite the same problem as here, he added. There are the same complaints about percentage terms and the "rapacity" of distributors. "The exhibitors over there accuse all distributors, English and foreign alike, of everything short of murder," he said, "and the reason they haven't charged murder is that they haven't been able to find the dead body."

Calls British Values Better

There are no cancellation arguments in Britain because the exhibitor sees before he buys, continued Mr. Dent, but many of the exhibitor-distributor problems here are much the same as overseas.

BIP plans a production expenditure this year of between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 for its 25 pictures, and Mr. Dent estimated the "international" productions will cost $250,000 on an average. "Judging from what I've heard about Hollywood, you can get better production values in England for $200,000," he observed.

"We are definitely concerned about proper casting," he said, "and it was for that reason that we secured Buddy Rogers for 'Dance Band,' and Charles Bickford to fill the rugged type of role required in 'Red Wagon.'

"We have found the American artist expensive. He jumps his price when he is imported. For that reason, and others, we are going to build up our own roster of stars."

70 of 82 Sign a New Cleveland Dual Agreement

Seventy exhibitors out of a possible 82 in Greater Cleveland thus far have set their signatures to the area's new double bill agreement, calling for the use of duals only once each week by each theatre during the coming season. The previous agreement expires shortly. No new signatures have been added since the agreement was submitted to the membership of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association last week. Among those who have not signed is one circuit. The rest are small theatre owners. Another general meeting is to be held next week.

Hearings Due Soon in Kansas City Theatre Suit

Hearing on the amended petition of General Theatres Equipment bondholders against the Fox Midwest reorganization, is expected in Kansas City within the next week, according to C. A. Randolph, an attorney for the bondholders. It is understood that Herbert V. Jones, trustee in bankruptcy for Fox Midwest, will not file his trustee's report until the General Theatres suit is completed.

To Regulate Borneo Films

A bill, shortly to be introduced into the legislature of the state of British North Borneo, will regulate the making of motion pictures, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Julian B. Foster, trade commissioner at Singapore.

RKO, Pantages In Pool on Coast

RKO and the Pantages interests have pooled their Los Angeles and Hollywood theatre holdings, effective September 1. Under the arrangement, the Hillstreet, downtown, and the Pantages, Hollywood, will run RKO and Universal product day and date, the understanding calling for 10 to 12 features on a single bill basis and the remainder on a double feature basis. The Pantages replaces the two Warner theatres in that area which were in a one-year pool with Warner. The deal was arranged largely in New York last week.

Following the termination of a long term Paramount franchise, RKO is ending its pool in Yonkers with that company, effective September 1. The pooling arrangement was part of the franchise deal. After September 1, Paramount will operate the Strand and RKO will handle Proctor's. RKO operates both houses now. Within the next month Paramount is expected to conclude a pooling arrangement with Si Fabian for the Paramount in Brooklyn, in which Mr. Fabian has an interest. The one-year operating contract expires September 1.

The actual completion of the pooling deal between Evergreen, a Fox West Coast company, and the John Hamrick theatres in Seattle and Portland has been set for August 15. Evergreen will take over operation of Hamrick's three houses in Seattle and four in Portland. Mr. Hamrick is expected to assume an executive title in the Seattle field, the Portland area to be under the supervision of Al Finkelstein, Evergreen partner. Frank L. Newman, head of Evergreen, will continue general supervising of operations in both cities. About 16 houses are involved.

Grimley Named President of RCA Manufacturing, Canada

E. T. Cunningham, president of the RCA Manufacturing Company, has announced that E. C. Grimley, formerly manager of the international department, has been named president of the RCA Victor Company, Ltd., Canada, succeeding Ben Gardner, resigned. Frank R. Deakis will succeed Mr. Grimley in the international department, at the same time retaining his present post as manager of the engineering products department.

It was also announced that at the last meeting of the board of directors F. H. Corregan, secretary of RCA Manufacturing, had been elected vice-president and Eugene Deacon had been appointed general sales manager of the RCA Radiotron division of the company.

Manufacturers Use Screen Players Widely in Campaigns

Adrienne Ames, Dorothy Mackaill, Fifi Dorsay, Cesar Romero and at least 20 other players on the Screenland Fashion roster will find themselves featured in advertising and publicity campaigns totaling, in expenditure on the part of merchandising companies, well over $2,000,000. This was revealed when Ted Green, one of the Screenland Fashions executives, indicated campaigns now under way by some of the manufacturers on the roster of this organization.

OUTLINE OF VOLUNTARY CODE PLAN

Herewith appears the complete text of "An Outline of a Plan for Voluntary Arbitration in the Motion Picture Industry," formulated by Tyree Dillard, Jr., general counsel of the old Code Authority, proposing the creation of an "American Motion Picture Institute" and subsidiary structure, for self-regulation of the industry, as revealed this week in Washington.

Memorandum

Re: An outline of a plan for voluntary arbitration in the motion picture industry.

From: Tyree Dillard, Jr.

Since the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, declaring Section 3 of the National Recovery Act unconstitutional, representatives of various branches of the motion picture industry have announced a desire to continue the beneficial portions of the Code. There is submitted herewith a broad outline of a plan by which it is believed that many industry problems may be solved on a voluntary basis. No attempt has been made to supply all of the details, nor to suggest the solution of certain controversial issues. These may be worked out by the representatives of the conflicting factions.

At the outset, a word on the legal aspects of any plan. Although no exhaustive study has been made of the cases dealing with voluntary trade regulation, two recent cases may well serve as guide-posts for any endeavor in this field.

In Appalachian Coals, Inc., vs. U. S., 288 U. S. 344, 77 L. ed. 825 (decided March 13th, 1933) representatives of seventy-three (73%) per cent of the commercially produced bituminous coal in the United States formed a corporation, the Board of Directors of which was composed of the various producing companies, and the stock of which was owned by the producing companies in proportion to the total amount of coal produced by the several producing companies, for the purpose of acting as an exclusive selling agency of all of its members. The plan involved the allocation of production, exclusive sale, holding coal off of the market, the collection and dissemination of trade information, etc. An injunction was sought under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law on the ground that the operation of the combination restrained trade and tended toward a monopoly. The Supreme Court held the plan legal, saying that the Sherman Act sets up an essential standard of reasonableness and its application is one of intent and effect. The Court among others made the following statement:

> "A cooperative enterprise, otherwise free from objection, which carries with it no monopolistic menace, is not to be condemned as an undue restraint merely because it may effect a change in market conditions, where the change would be in mitigation of recognized evils and would not impair but rather foster, fair competitive opportunities. Voluntary action to rescue and preserve these opportunities, and thus to aid in relieving a depressed industry and in reviving commerce by placing competition upon a sounder basis, may be more efficacious than an attempt to provide remedies through legal processes." (77 L. ed. at 837)

The second case is that of Wolfenstein vs. Fashion Originators Guild of America, Inc., decided by the Supreme Court of New York, Appellate Division, within the last few weeks. In this case, two affiliated trade associations were formed, one representing the manufacturers and the other the retailers of ladies' dresses. Certain fair trade practices were adopted by both associations including the prohibition of style piracy, the prohibition of sales of merchandise by manufacturers in their show-rooms in retail quantities at wholesale prices, and the prohibition of sales by retailers in apartments used for residential purposes. The members of the retail association agreed not to buy merchandise from a wholesaler violating the fair trade practices, and the wholesaler agreed not to sell a retailer violating the fair trade practices.

The plaintiff, formerly a member of the retail association, asked for an injunction on the ground that the scheme constituted a conspiracy, tended toward a monopoly, was in restraint of trade and a violation of the Donnelly Act. In an opinion written by Judge Untermeyer, the Court said:

> "In our opinion these contentions cannot be sustained. The members of these associations had the right to cooperate for the purpose of correcting abuses or to stabilize the industry, provided their endeavors did not amount to an unlawful boycott or constitute an unreasonable restraint of trade (Appalachian Coals, Inc., et al. v. United States, 288 U. S. 344). In the present case there was no intent or power to regulate prices nor even to control production. Indeed, the members of Fashion Originators Guild are not prevented from selling to retailers who are not members of the Uptown Retail Annex. The members of the Uptown Retail Annex are not prevented from buying from manufacturers who are not members of Fashion Originators Guild. The effect of the arrangement is to exclude from membership in the Uptown Retail Annex, and to prohibit sales by members of Fashion Originators Guild to, retailers who engage in practices which both organizations have united in denouncing as inimical to the trade. In this we perceive nothing arbitrary, unreasonable or unduly in restraint of trade. Limiting our consideration to the particular requirement which is challenged here, it is evident that its purpose is to protect the interests of the wholesale manufacturer by protecting the interests of the retailer through whom he sells. If the members of the Fashion Originators Guild shall sell to persons who transact their business in apartments used for residential purposes, it will imperil and may destroy the business of the merchant which is conducted at great expense from the usual retail premises. This will necessarily result in disorganizating the market on which the manufacturers depend. We think they are not powerless to cooperate for their own protection by excluding sales to retailers whose practices, it is believed, are subversive of the industry in which they are engaged. Many similar arrangements, not intended to control prices or limit production but devised to eliminate abuses or stabilize the industry, have been sustained by the Supreme Court of the United States (citing cases) and also by this Court (citing cases). They do not constitute an illegal boycott (citing cases) and are neither against public policy as in restraint of trade nor in violation of the Donnelly Act (citing cases)."

It is also suggested in the working out of any plan for the self-regulation of the industry, that the cooperation and assistance of the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice be requested. A very important function of the Federal Trade Commission is performed through the holding of fair trade practice conferences and the designation of certain practices as unfair after a full hearing.

The substantive jurisdiction to be covered by the plan might be as broad or as restricted as the representatives of the several branches of the industry might determine. They might range, in the field of fair trade practices, from those which are clearly recognized, such as unfair clearance and over-buying, to many of the minor disputes which arise under the Standard Optional License Agreement.

For the purpose of discussion here, however, the jurisdiction might be broadly divided into two classes: (1) Labor, and (2) Fair Trade Practises.

LABOR

Among the best statistics available, it is reported that there are 389,000 employees in the Motion Picture Industry, of which more than 350,000 are employed in theatres (statistics of Dr. Karl Taylor Compton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology). Of this number, many are members of unions. At the present time, in the absence of legal mechanism and a total absence of voluntary tribunals, no means exist for the amicable adjustment of the many problems arising between employer and employee.

The need for such a forum has already been recognized in the motion picture industry where tribunals of limited scope have been established in the production field. Indicative of the need for a vertical forum covering the entire industry and of the success of such enterprises is the record of the operation of certain labor boards established under the Code.

The Standing Committee for Extras, during the period between April 11th, 1934, and April 10th, 1935, received 1,085 complaints of which number 981 cases had been completely adjusted as of the latter date, and in which restitution in the sum of $4,218.62 was awarded.

The Studio Labor Committee as of May 6th, 1935, had received 262 complaints, of which number 258 had been disposed of.

A—Exhibition

In the field of exhibition, hundreds of disputes were adjusted by the National Recovery Administration, including the establishment of wage and hour schedules for entire cities of considerable size. It is believed that no strike and no lockout occurred in the Motion Picture Industry during the operation of the Code.

The Code contained detailed provisions with respect to vaudeville actor labor which, after approximately a year and a half of operation, have been substantially amended and revised by the Code Authority in the light of experience. These provisions now probably represent a very fair standard and should be preserved and administered under the plan.

For the purpose of handling these problems, it is proposed that an American Motion Picture Labor Council be established with offices in New York, to act as a Supreme Court in all labor complaints and disputes.

The Labor Council might be composed of a representative of each of the several employee groups in the industry with an equal number of employers, with or without an impartial member, with or without the right of vote. In subscribing to the plan, any unions participating would voluntarily forego the right to strike, and all employers participating would voluntarily forego the right to lock-out.

For the handling of labor disputes and complaints in the first instance, and to decentralize the operations of the Labor Council, it is proposed that Local Labor Councils be established in each Exchange territory or other designated area with an equal number of representatives of employees and employers and with or without a voting impartial representative. These Local Labor Councils would hear all complaints in the first instance and render a decision binding on all parties, subject to the right of appeal by any person adversely affected to the Labor Council in New York.

B—Production

(1) Actor-Writer Relations. The past record of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences with respect to mediation of disputes and differences between studios and artists would indicate that the machinery at present established might be incorporated in the larger plan suggested here with only slight modifications.

(2) Extras. The splendid record of the Complaints and Grievance Committee which was established under the Code, has been discussed above. The rules and regulations prescribed by the Standing Committee for Extras might be adopted as they now are or with such modifications as are deemed feasible, and incorporated as part of the new plan.

(3) Other Labor Complaints. The successful operations of the Studio Labor Committee, consisting of a representative of the studios, a representative of labor and an impartial chairman, indicate that the handling of these problems is desirable and practical. A review of the minutes of the Studio Labor Committee, of its findings and awards, reveals a most interesting and instructive chapter in mediation.

It might be feasible to establish a Motion Picture Production Labor Council to act as an intermediate labor board and appellate tribunal to hear appeals from specific labor councils composed of equal representation of the special classes of production labor. Appeals from the special labor Boards, such as those for extras, electricians, etc., would be taken to the Production Labor Council, and from thence to the National Council in New York. This would relieve the National Council of considerable work.

TRADE PRACTICES

From the middle of April, 1934, to June 1st, 1935, the Local Grievance Boards established under the Motion Picture Code heard and disposed of 1,576 cases, of which number 400 were appealed to the Code Authority in New York. During the same period, the Local Clearance and Zoning Boards heard 875 individual cases, of which number 136 were appealed to the Code Authority. In addition to the individual complaints heard by the Clearance and Zoning Boards, a schedule was established for the Los Angeles Exchange Territory, which established the clearance of about 360 theatres. Other schedules were also in preparation. The total number of individual complaints heard by Local Boards was 2,451 and the total number of appeals to the Code Authority was 536.

The adjustment of fair trade practices is therefore no longer a theory but a reality.

It is suggested that a single Board, composed of representatives of distributors and exhibitors be established in each Exchange territory for the purpose of receiving complaints, conducting hearings and making awards in the field of unfair trade practices. Any person adversely affected by a decision of any Local Motion Picture Industry Council would have the right to appeal to the American Motion Picture Council in New York unless the decision of the Local Council was unanimous, in which event an appeal would lie only upon the favorable action of the National Council on an application for such appeal.

The American Motion Picture Council would be the governing body of the entire American Motion Picture Institute and with respect to appeals in individual fair trade practice complaints, would act as a Court of last resort, corresponding to the position of the American Motion Picture Labor Council for labor complaints and disputes.

All of the various agencies which have been outlined here would be brought together under a single non-profit corporation known as the American Motion Picture Institute, established for the purposes commonly recited in trade associations of this kind. Its directors would be the American Motion Picture Industry Council.

FINANCE

No attempt is herein made to set forth in detail a method for financing the plan, as this can be worked out if the various factions in the industry are desirous of adopting any such scheme. However, the records of the Code Authority of the Motion Picture Industry indicate that approximately 8,500 exhibitors located throughout the United States contributed to its support. This represents more than ninety (90%) per cent of those theatres located in competitive situations, and would tend to indicate that this problem is not insoluble. The major producers and distributors contributed to the expense of the Code Authority unanimously. On the Legitimate Code Authority, where labor was represented, the unions made substantial contributions to the support of the Code.

In conclusion, I have been advised that the National Recovery Administration has just established an organization which has extended its services of cooperating with any industry desiring to establish a voluntary plan of self-regulation. Facilities of this organization, which has a Local Office in New York, may be used if desired.

Respectfully submitted,
Tyree Dillard, Jr.

Arbitration Hearing Delayed

Hearings have been postponed until July 17, on motions by RKO and Meyer and Schneider in New York on the arbitration award recently granted M. & S. as a result of RKO policies at the Hollywood and Apollo theatres. The hearing was scheduled for this week. RKO seeks to have the award set aside, while M. & S. seeks confirmation. The award gives M. & S. a $40,000 judgment and orders changes in the policy of the theatres.

Fox Foreign Changes

Fox has made the following changes in the foreign personnel: John Lindsay, formerly sales manager in Spain, heads the Venezuela exchange, changing places with E. F. Lomba; Ernest Koenig, formerly managing director of the Warner French branch, has been named assistant to Robert Harley, managing director for Fox in Paris.

U. S. Films Drop in Holland

American and English films lost ground to some extent while French and German product gained in the Netherlands during June, with Amsterdam taken as a criterion, according to a report of F. Van den Arend, American consul, to the department of commerce.

306 Members to Vote On 2 Per Cent Assessment

Members of Local 306, New York projectionists' union, were to meet this week to vote on the two per cent assessment adopted at the recent session in St. Louis of the executive committee of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. The voting date depends on the arrival from Chicago of Harland Holmden, in charge of the union under IATSE supervision. A general meeting is said to be necessary to adjust differences among unemployed members of the union.

A mysterious telephone call to New York police headquarters last week resulted in the posting of 40 detectives on 42nd street to watch the cross picketing situation. Local 306 plans to file complaints with the police commissioner, claiming one of its pickets was manhandled by the police. There appears to have been little headway made in the three-cornered fight among the three local unions—306, Empire and Allied. Four Local 306 men were fined by Judge Rudich in a Brooklyn court last week for picketing.

Attorney General Herbert R. O'Connor of Maryland has ruled that projectionists are equally liable with exhibitors under the state penal law making it a violation to fail to show the approval seal of the Maryland censor at the beginning of each picture.

Fox Studio Roster Lists Complete Executive Setup

The official Fox studio roster, covering both Movietone and Western Avenue studios in Hollywood, records operating and production officials as follows:

Winfield Sheehan, "in charge of personnel and in authority over all departments and production"; John J. Gain, studio manager; George L. Bagnall, studio treasurer; Charles Woolstenhulme, production manager; John Zinn, assistant to Mr. Gain, and George Wasson, studio attorney.

Six units operate at Movietone City, it was said, headed by Winfield Sheehan, Robert T. Kane, Jesse L. Lasky, Edward W. Butcher, B. G. DeSylva and Patterson McNutt.

At the Western Avenue studio, units are headed by Sol M. Wurtzel and John Stone, with Edward T. Lowe and Joseph Engel as associate producers.

Beverly Jones, Two Others Join March of Time Staff

March of Time this week appointed Beverly Jones film editor in charge of the cutting room, and at the same time engaged Charles W. Herbert, A. S. C., as cameraman and Richard W. Maedler as a production staff member.

All were formerly with Fox Movietonews, Mr. Jones more recently serving in Alaska with the Father Hubbard expedition.

New Bank Night Problem Arises

With "Bank Nights," "Screeno," "Jack Pot," "Treasure Nights" and such ticket-sale stimulants making further noticeable inroads during the week in exhibition practice in most of the large cities, there has come to light the possibility of a serious controversy between exhibitors using these stunts and distributors over the relation of the stimulants to percentage picture playing.

Typical is the situation in Indianapolis, where one exhibitor sold so many tickets on a "Bank Night" that only 600 holders reached the auditorium, while 2,000 others were kept outside, their tickets making them eligible for the Bank Night prizes and permitted them to attend a showing at a later date.

Felix Feist Protests

Felix F. Feist, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's general sales manager, wrote in protest to the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana as follows:

"Our attention has been called to one instance here cash prizes unclaimed were lumped as ne award after four nights. The result was hat tickets were sold to 600 people who got nto the theatre and 2,000 who remained outide.

"What about those 2,000 tickets which were lot used on the night when they were sold? There would be no money in the box-office if these 2,000 persons decided to use their tickets to see one of our exceptional productions and the theatre management lets them in, as seems to be the custom. Of course, in a case of this sort, the previously sold tickets, when presented, would be entered as passes and the attempt would be made to settle on that basis.

"Two angles are involved. If a percentage picture is playing on a bank night and tickets are sold which are not used that night, there is the necessity for having some sort of check on the box-office sale. And if a percentage picture plays subsequent to a bank night when the house was oversold, assurance naturally will be desired that the picture be compensated for any previously sold tickets which are presented at the door."

RKO to Avoid Practice

Sentiment of exhibitors in the midwest regarding these practices was expressed this week by Irving Dubinsky, independent circuit operator in Kansas City, who said that the promotions will go on through the summer at least.

RKO's theatres, however, will shy clear of the practice in its 100 theatres, although several of the large circuits have been compelled in many places to adopt the idea to fight the competition.

Injunction Obtained

A temporary injunction against Bank Night prizes at the State theatre in Youngstown, Ohio, was granted by Judge David Jenkins in Common Pleas Court on petition of other downtown theatre owners, who charged the practice was unfair competition. No date for a hearing on a permanent order was set.

The case in Des Moines against George Hundling, Capitol theatre, Newton, Ia., on the legality of Bank Night under the state's lottery laws, remained in status quo.

Viewpoints

BY MARTIN QUIGLEY « « « « « «

ONE hopeful result which promises to accrue from our recent attentions in this column to certain bitter and hostile remarks uttered by Mr. John Maxwell of London during his visit in New York last month is that various British film executives, including Mr. Maxwell, may lay aside, at least temporarily, their time-honored practice of berating, without provocation or reason, the American industry.

A few weeks ago we remarked on the poor taste and, in fact, poor judgment on the part of Mr. Maxwell, while in New York on a mission intended to prevail upon American distributors to accept for domestic distribution certain British films produced by his company, in giving to the press statements characterizing Hollywood pictures as "filthy" and at the same time offering affront to the American industry by proclaiming that the script and film examination service requested by his colleagues in London would not be used.

After Mr. Maxwell had returned to London and after, apparently, he had had an opportunity to reflect on the uniformly courteous treatment received while here from American film executives, several of whom exerted themselves to find room for Mr. Maxwell's pictures on their programs—despite the almost invariably disappointing results at American box offices when British pictures are shown—he seems to have decided to resort to the simple device of denying the statements which had been attributed to him. No specific denial, of course, was made; he merely denied everything.

Mr. Maxwell requested MOTION PICTURE HERALD to publish a correction. This naturally was refused because of reliable testimony at hand to the effect that he had, in fact, authorized the statements attributed to him. Mr. Maxwell was, however, invited to avail himself of space which would be put at his disposal in order to permit him to revise his earlier assertions or to state any new position which he might wish to take. Before replying, however, to this invitation Mr. Maxwell hurried to a Wardour Street gossip paper and registered a disavowal of the remarks which had been credited to him in New York.

Mr. Maxwell, in the Wardour Street paper, referring to the writer, suspects that he "may have had the feeling that I was making some headway in disposing of some of our pictures in the States and his article would be a good means of queering the pitch." The writer hastens to assure Mr. Maxwell that his suspicion is groundless. The record of the Quigley publications for twenty years has been one of friendliest support and encouragement of British pictures. Had these publications sought, as Mr. Maxwell quaintly puts it, "to queer the pitch," a much simpler and easier device would have been to have told just how bad some of the pictures included in Mr. Maxwell's portfolio really are.

The British producer in the course of his rather excited article in the London paper challenges that we "specify the time when, the place where and persons to whom" the assertions referred to were made. Very well, Mr. Maxwell: Time: June 6, 1935; Place Where: Hotel Warwick, New York City; Person to Whom: Mr. Sherwin Kane, reporter for Motion Picture Daily. Incidentally, Mr. Maxwell, representatives of three other motion picture publications interviewed you at or about the same time and each of these publications reported your remarks precisely along the lines of our reference.

However, Mr. Maxwell's present wish to escape, somehow, the odium of his seemingly unguarded remarks is hopeful. It is hopeful because it suggests that perhaps finally certain of the British producers, aided by an irresponsible press, who have mainly devoted themselves to efforts to tear down the American industry and only incidentally to efforts to build up their own, are commencing to realize that they have employed mud-slinging as a trade policy about long enough; that if they are going to continue to enjoy the extraordinary cooperation in the American market which they have been receiving it is about time to drop the groundless allegations of boycott and conspiracy against their pictures in this market, which allegations, of course, are largely indulged in for the purpose of shareholder consumption.

The British investing public has shown an inordinate appetite for a wave of the flag and a cry of American conspiracy. Hence this is what they have long been fed to explain the non-success of pictures which have been failures for no reason other than lack of entertainment value. Meanwhile there has gone on unrelentingly a campaign to discredit and disparage American pictures and the American industry, current examples of which are the recent utterances of Mr. Maxwell.

Mr. Maxwell stepped somewhat out of the conventional role of the British producer in his New York remarks. Ordinarily the procedure here is a poor-relation ap-

$3,222,226 Fees Asked by Lawyers From Paramount

The anticipated deluge of applications from lawyers and others for fees for participating in Paramount's reorganization came last week and increased to $3,222,226 the amounts already asked for such services. This sum does not include the $458,029 already paid by the corporation on this account. A hearing on all applications will be held July 18th before Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe in New York.

In celebration of its emergence from bankruptcy the sales division of Paramount this week started a "Jubilee Drive" for bookings and contracts. District managers will act as captains and report to Division Managers J. J. Unger and Charles Reagan.

To Bid on 12 Properties

The 12 New England theatres and other property of Goldstein Brothers Theatres Corporation will be sold at public auction at Springfield, Mass., with a new G.B. company, in which Paramount will have a 52 per cent interest, prepared to bid in the properties.

The houses are the Broadway, Springfield; Victory, Holyoke; Calvin and Plaza, Northampton; Palace, Pittsfield; Strand, Westfield; Strand, Palmer; Casino, Ware; Rivoli, Chicopee; Garden, Greenfield, and the State, Utica, N. Y. The houses were acquired from the Goldsteins by Paramount several years ago and were assigned to Olympia Theatres subject to a mortgage to secure bonds outstanding in the amount of $597,039, including interest.

Under the plan of reorganization approved by the federal court recently, it is proposed to foreclose on the properties with the bondholders' committee bidding them in at the auction. They will then be assigned to the new company in which Paramount will have the controlling interest.

Local Operation to Continue

The company will continue the policy of local operation of theatres which was inaugurated in 1932.

In line with this policy, indications are that all or most of the partnership and operating agreements which were extended from June 27, last, to September 27 will be renewed on a long-term basis in the near future.

New partnership contracts and management agreements of a minimum duration of one year are expected to be worked out with the present Paramount theatre operators prior to October 1, it was learned. Indications are that no changes in theatre operators will be made where operating results are on a satisfactory basis, as is now the case in virtually all situations.

The Securities and Exchange Commission concluded in New York the hearings started in Washington on Paramount's reorganization, with John Hertz, who was chairman of the Paramount finance committee before the receivership, and who is now a director, on Wednesday detailing his entrance into the company, the policies he instituted and his break with Adolph Zukor at a time when Paramount's financial difficulties were coming to a head. He told of his resignation in January, 1933, less than a month before the receivership.

Among the late applications from lawyers and others for fees was that of Rosenberg, Goldmark & Colin for $18,728 for legal services. This firm was paid $13,500 earlier. Another was a group of applications aggregating approximately $170,000 filed by the Paramount stockholders' protective committee for expenses and disbursements of the committee and its members. This is in addition to approximately $328,000 asked by the committee and its counsel, Cook, Nathan & Lehman. The bondholders' protective committee asks $90,863 for expenses, disbursements and liabilities, in addition to $282,390 asked by the committee and its counsel, Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardner & Reed.

The Munger debenture committee asks $7,945. Accountants and a consulting expert employed by Malcolm Sumner, attorney, ask $23,500, in addition to the $150,431 asked by Sumner and his associate, Edwin L. Garvin. The Peter Grimm committee for Paramount Broadway bondholders asks $56,914 in addition to $10,000 asked jointly by Grimm and Joseph P. Day for services in connection with the Criterion block, which was lost at foreclosure sale recently.

Samuel Zirn, attorney, asks $76,207 as attorney for debenture holders in addition to $82,868, which he asks jointly with three other attorneys for services in the case of Robert S. Levy vs. Paramount Publix, which was an early action to place Paramount in receivership.

Charles D. Hilles, trustee, asks $10,000 for services as a receiver in addition to $118,000 for services as a trustee. Hilles has already received $20,000 for receiver's service and $32,433 as a trustee.

The largest single application was that of Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, counsel to the trustees, for $700,000. This firm has already drawn $250,000, additional.

The additional tabulations included an application by the stockholders' protective committee for $105,000 expenses and $70,000 for fees for Barney Balaban, Maurice Newton and Gerald Brooks, members of the committee. Nathan Burkan, counsel for the merchandise creditors' committee, asked $50,000, while fees of $10,500 were asked for three committee members.

The law firm of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood, special counsel for Paramount and for Kuhn, Loeb & Co., asked $150,000, and Kuhn, Loeb, the principal in the drafting of the reorganization plan, asked $114,287.

Saul E. Rogers, attorney, asked $10,000. Joseph P. Day and Peter Grimm, realty experts, asked $10,000, and Jacob Lesser, attorney, asked $37,500.

The creditor bank group committee applied for $30,000 for Percy H. Johnston, chairman of the committee and chairman of the board of Chemical Bank & Trust Co., and $20,000 for Max D. Howell, a member of the committee.

peal; an urging for reciprocity and cooperation. Immediately, however, on his return to London the British producer has been accustomed to put a different face on the situation. There he vilified the American industry at large and particularly Hollywood; charges prejudice, conspiracy and boycott, and appeals to everyone and everything outside of the naval and military establishments to keep American pictures out of Great Britain.

We regret that Mr. Maxwell, who is one of the more substantial and reliable of the British producers, was not more mindful of the proprieties on his recent mission to America. His wish now to escape from the position into which his remarks placed him is heartening. The incident to him doubtlessly will be a lesson; to others of his colleagues we hope it shall be.

Files Application To Appeal from Fox Met Plan

The Layton Realty Corporation, landlord for several New Jersey houses operated by Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, has filed with the United States circuit court of appeals in New York an application for leave to appeal from the order of Federal Judge Julian W. Mack confirming the reorganization plan of Fox Metropolitan.

George C. Levin, attorney for Layton, advised Judge Mack of the filing of the application after Judge Mack had granted the petition of the Fox Metropolitan trustee for authority to disaffirm the circuit's leases on the Palace at Bergenfield and the Dumont at Dumont, N. J., both owned by Layton. Mr. Levin explained his client opposed the reorganization plan because of alleged inequities to theatre landlords. It is doubtful whether action on the Layton appeal will be taken before October, since the circuit court has adjourned.

Testify to Losses

In granting the disaffirmation request, Judge Mack noted that the Layton company should file affidavits in opposition with Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey, who could overrule Judge Mack if the objections warranted. It was testified that Fox Metropolitan has lost $70,069 on the Palace and a comparable amount on the Dumont since the inception of the receivership.

Permission was granted the trustee to disaffirm the lease on the Queen Anne, also in New Jersey, without objection. A loss of $61,000 was reported for this theatre in the three years of receivership. Authority was granted for placing the Biltmore, Carlton, Stratford and Duffield in a new subsidiary company which would be permitted to cancel the leases on the first three in the event the new operating arrangement fails to correct current losses. Disaffirmation of the leases reduces the circuit's holdings to 81 theatres, which compares with 145 when the receivership took effect.

Receivership Extended

Purchase by Fox Theatres Corporation of a 50 per cent interest in Fox Metropolitan, and subsequent reorganization of Fox Theatres, now in receivership, under Section 77-B of the bankruptcy laws, was advocated Tuesday by Gustavus A. Rogers, counsel for Fox Theatres' creditors, at a hearing before Federal Judge Martin T. Manton in New York. Mr. Rogers urged the purchase as a good investment.

The court indicated it agreed and on the application of Milton C. Weisman, Fox Theatres receiver, extended the receivership six months.

Financing Revealed

Details of the 1929 financing of Fox Metropolitan were revealed to the Sabath Congressional committee investigating real estate reorganizations and the activities of bondholders' committees, by Ernest Niver, a vice-president of Halsey, Stuart & Co., and the revelations drew sharp criticism from the committee. Committee counsel was directed by Representative A. J. Sabath to investigate the company's use of the mails in distributing a prospectus for a $13,000,000 Fox Metropolitan bond issue in 1929.

First still from Miss Marion Davies' new production coming in August.

Late in August Warner Brothers will be presenting Miss Marion Davies in "Page Miss Glory" with Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell and sundry others. It is a Cosmopolitan picture, of course. Also the story is a bit Cinderella of flavor. The play is by Joseph Schrenk and Philip Dunning, and the direction by Mervin LeRoy. This still photograph is by Manatt.

This is another of MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S pictorial presentations of coming product, early, and first, advance views of keynote pictorial material concerning more important and pretentious offerings of the new season.

COMBINED PRODUCTION BUDGET FOR 1935-36 SET AT $120,000,000

'Wall Street Journal' Sees $10,000,000 Increase in New Season Outlay, With Trend Toward Fewer and Better Pictures

Thousand Shorts Taken Into Account, but Apparently Not the States Right Producers' Budgets for Feature Pictures

Wall Street estimates a $10,000,000 increase in motion picture production costs in 1935-36, calculating a total expenditure of some $120,000,000, and draws the conclusion that the trend in Hollywood is toward making fewer and better motion pictures next season.

This observation was made on Monday by the Wall Street Journal of Dow, Jones and Company, from a study in Hollywood of the new programs of leading companies.

At the same time it was estimated that steadily increasing attendance at motion picture theatres has mounted to an average of 70,000,000 weekly, a 10,000,000 average weekly increase in a year.

The estimated total expenditure for 1935-36 is based on the 480 to 490 features on "announced schedules," which, it is assumed, were those made known at the recent sales conventions by 13 of the largest companies, as follows:

Company	Features Announced
Chesterfield	9
Columbia	52
Fox	54
GB	16
Imperial	7
Invincible	9
MGM	50
Paramount	65
Radio	48
Republic (and affiliates)	57
United Artists	24
Universal	42
Warners	60
Total	493

Too, the estimated budget gives effect to the average number of 1,000 short subjects produced yearly, but apparently it does not include the expenditures that will be made by the smaller independents releasing on the states right market and whose budgetary plans are at this early date unavailable.

Maturer Pictures Preferred

Dow, Jones found that "the reception accorded film adaptations of best selling novels has indicated a public preference for a more mature type of motion picture entertainment, and that the industry's recognition of this trend is shown by the unusually large number of novels listed for dramatization, including, besides many best sellers, two operas as well as works by such standard authors as Dickens, Victor Hugo, Robert Louis Stevenson" and others of that standing.

"There is a distinct possibility," the investigation brought out, "that even the increased allotments for features to be produced this coming season may prove inadequate, should the success of "Becky Sharp," Hollywood's first feature length venture into three-filter Technicolor, induce other producers to bring color more extensively into their production this year. Besides the rentals which must be paid to Technicolor for use of its equipment and patents in filming and developing color pictures, three times as much raw stock must be exposed in making Technicolor pictures."

BUDGETS UP WITH RISE IN PROFITS

Plans for greater expenditures in motion picture production schedules for the coming 12 months are said by the New York Evening Post to be "in line with and apparently prompted by the substantial improvement in earnings and the better prospects for some of the large companies."

"These two factors," it was pointed out, "also have attracted heavy scale demand for shares of the leaders in recent weeks, resulting in new high prices for the year or longer."

The following table, computed by the Journal, and based on its investigation in Hollywood, undertaken by Linn Unkefer, a staff correspondent, gives the total production costs, including short subjects, for the last seven years:

Year*	Total Cost of Production
1935	$120,000,000
1934	110,000,000
1933	135,000,000
1932	180,000,000
1931	200,000,000
1930	150,000,000

(*) NOTE: Evidently the computation refers, respectively, to the seasons of 1935-36; 1934-35; 1933-34; 1932-33; 1931-32; 1930-31; 1929-30.

In making comparisons with the total number of features produced in this country and the amounts spent on their making, the survey was arbitrarily limited. The approximate combined total of 541 features is given for virtually all companies in 1934-35, whereas for this season the figure includes only the 480 to 490 features definitely announced by the 13 largest companies.

Costs of importations are not included in the budgets for any year.

The large sums spent in production during 1931 and 1932, in the opinion of the Journal, "reflect the efforts of producers to recapture a diminishing public interest through lavish musicals and experiments, rather than the sincere attempt to improve the quality of pictures that has been increasingly manifest during the last year."

"The decline in theatre attendance terminated in 1932," it was pointed out, "and in the following year box office receipts indicated a tendency to level off. With the improvement in general business conditions and the introduction of better pictures in 1934, weekly theatre attendance increased almost 17 per cent over 1933.

"Although statistics are not complete for the first six months of 1935, preliminary estimates are that the current year will witness a continued improvement in motion picture theatre attendance."

Reviewing attendance figures, they showed that the high point was reached in 1930 when 110,000,000 visits a week were averaged in the United States, and that the succeeding three years witnessed a rapid decline in patronage with the low point being reached in 1932, when only 60,000,000 paid admissions to theatres weekly. This represented a decline of more than 45 per cent in two years. The effect of the depression was most pronounced in 1931, when attendance dropped from 110,000,000 to 75,000,000 weekly, or 32 per cent in one year.

Average weekly motion picture attendance in the United States for the last eight years is shown by Dow, Jones in the following table:

Year	Average Weekly Attendance
1934	70,000,000
1933	60,000,000
1932	60,000,000
1931	75,000,000
1930	110,000,000
1929	95,000,000

The Wall Street Journal took note of the advancements being made by foreign producers. However, it was found that "the improved type of pictures announced for the coming year, together with the feature of Technicolor, are expected to do much toward restoring the threatened prestige of American films in the foreign market. Although American-made motion pictures furnish 70 per cent of the world's screen diet, and motion picture royalty (rental) receipts have increased steadily throughout the depression (approximately $75,000,000 in 1933 as compared with $70,000,000 in 1929). "European producers have become increasingly aggressive," it was said.

"Handicapped by the language problem in talking pictures as well as the growing competition of English, German and French pictures in the European market, American producers have been faced with an increasingly difficult foreign sales problem. Total number of feature pictures produced in England, Germany and France increased from 451 in 1933 to 513 last year. Although European production schedules for the coming year are not yet available, preliminary announcements presage a still greater increase in continental picture production during the 1935-36 season."

RADIO TRAILS MOTION PICTURES IN CHILD INTEREST, STUDY SHOWS

Children at All Times Prefer "Movies", Stage Orchestras and "Funnies" to the Radio, Institute Survey Reveals

Prohibitions and Censorships Out of Harmony with Traditions and in the End Ineffective, Says Mrs. S. Gruenberg

Radio is less important as a counter-attraction than exhibitors and others in the industry think it is, according to a survey just completed, which showed that at least "the rising generation" continues to prefer its motion pictures above all other entertainment.

That, and many other comparisons and analogies between air programs and the screen, and their relative effects on impressionable youth, were revealed in a study, "Radio and Children," written by Mrs. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, authority on child training, for the Radio Institute of the Audible Arts.

The Institute, described in detail in the HERALD issue of June 29, was founded by Philco Radio & Television Corporation, with Pitts Sanborn, music commentator, as director, and with the aim of acting as a clearing house for information and ideas on radio, "to quicken public interest in worthwhile programs, and to encourage fuller utilization of the radio as an instrument of entertainment," with objectives similar to the public relations activities of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America in the field of the screen.

While attempting to prove that school children give radio a high place in their hierarchy of amusements, Mrs. Gruenberg conceded to the motion picture a still higher position by quoting from a recent unpublished study by Azriel Eisenberg submitted in fulfillment of the requirements of the degree of doctor of philosophy at Columbia University. Mr. Eisenberg's investigation of the radio interests of nearly 3,500 children in the intermediate grades of New York City schools found that:

"The only amusements which both boys and girls at all times prefer to radio are: going to the movies, listening to an orchestra on the stage, and reading the 'funnies'."

Moreover, Mrs. Gruenberg emphasized, in information gathered from various groups of parents through Child Study Association questionnaires in 1933 and 1934, only 12 to 13 per cent of the children were described as being radio "fans." This, however, she added, turned out to be a classification of parental judgments rather than of children's practices.

Published concurrently with the study by Mrs. Gruenberg was a survey of current radio programs suitable for children and adolescents, conducted by the Committee on Radio for Children of the Child Study Association of America. Chairman of the committee is Mrs. Cass Canfield, wife of the president of Harper & Brothers, publishers, and a patroness of the American National Theatre and Academy, recently chartered by the federal government. This radio review list is similar in aims to the "Selected Motion Pictures" listings, compiled by the Preview Committees of the west and east coasts and published by the MPPDA.

The Child Study Association next September will decide whether to undertake a survey of motion pictures similar to that made for radio and children's literature, and a screen previewing committee may be formed.

FILMS NOT DANGEROUS TO CHILD, SAYS WRITER

Adolescent youth is in no danger from most of the films being shown, said Mrs. Sidonie Matsner Gruenberg, director of the Child Study Association of America, in her book, "Your Child Today and Tomorrow".

"The moving picture shows, which supply so many of the children with their chief opportunity to learn life, have been, on the whole, fairly wholesome; and the movement to improve the films further will probably leave these sources of instruction safe, from a moral point of view, so far as concerns the knowledge of life that the adolescent gets.

"The only real danger from the 'movies' and the theatres is likely to be the cultivation of the habit of passive entertainment."

Mrs. Gruenberg's activity in child training goes back to 1906 when she became associated with the Child Study Association. She is lecturer in parent education at Teachers College, Columbia University, a member of the governing board and chairman of the radio committee of the National Council of Parent Education, chairman of the parent education committee of the National Advisory Council on Radio in Education, on the advisory committee of the Radio Institute of the Audible Arts, a member of the boards of several educational organizations, and author of "Your Child Today and Tomorrow," "Sons and Daughters" and other books.

Many of the findings adduced in "Radio and Children" parallel similar situations in the film field.

Mrs. Gruenberg found that while children have a desultory interest in radio prior to school age, that interest reaches its peak at about 10 years.

"When we find," said Mrs. Gruenberg, "that children prefer thrillers, adventures, mystery stories, melodrama, with suspense and continued-in-our-next effects, and comedy that is not so high in the radio, and in their reading, and in the movies, we must see that these situations and the emotions they arouse are probably meaningful for the child.

"The reasons that children give for their dislikes are equally revealing. The most general reasons are: 'silly,' 'uninteresting,' 'impossible,' 'incomprehensible,' and 'repetitious.' Other frequent reasons were: 'too much love story'; 'comics that are silly, not funny'; 'not exciting'; and so on.

"Children who have already developed considerable discrimination with respect to reading or the movies, seem rather immature when they first make the acquaintance of the radio."

"We might," observed Mrs. Gruenberg, "compare the radio with the cinema and find common features, of a kind that continue to worry parents in regard to both, as well as contrasts that suggest problems peculiar to the radio. The cinema, for example, like the radio, presents its message simultaneously to large numbers. And because of this mass appeal, both tend to design their programs on the common denominators of human interest—which are not very lofty. But in contrast to the cinema, the radio is an ever-present challenge—to use or not to use, to select, much or little—whereas 'going to the movies' depends, at least for younger children, on the decision of their elders. Even where, as with older children, it involves a frequent need to choose between programs, the cinema lends itself to relatively easy adjustment and compromise; but the radio may call for a half dozen decisions of an evening and no alternative can be postponed for another time.

Some Spellbound, Some Bored

"Like reading and the movies and parties and other recreational activities, the radio calls upon the parents to guide children in making choices —when, what, how much? . . . Both forbidding and permitting are meaningless unless they are parts of sympathetic counsel and guidance. . . .

"It is impossible to make sure from either the parents' observations or the children's whether the direct effect of a given program is desirable or undesirable," she observed further. "Many parents, for instance, feel that news or current events programs are less overstimulating than imaginative stories. Yet here is what one boy takes to heart in a survey of the day's news:

"'Every-one be quite! X— is on the air. with many thirls. Drumm; Calvin Cologe dies; country morns; all flags at half mast. Time marches on. Drumm; Big tornadio in Calaforano. Many killed. Wirr loom! Bong! help! wirr oww! Time marches on. I like it because it has many thirls and the scenes are acted out.'"

That was the youngster's written reaction to a well known program.

Looking to the future, Mrs. Gruenberg declared: "In every stage of our social development the appearance of abuses or of unsatisfactory conditions arouses many to speech and action. One of the first things we hear in such a situation is, 'There ought to be a law.'

"Without going into the philosophy of legal restraints and regulations, most of us will recognize that there are some things that the policeman cannot do as well as somebody else. The fact that prohibitions and censorships are out of harmony with our traditions, and that they are in the end ineffective, should make us seek other modes of regulation; but, as in the management of children, the easiest move is to shout 'Stop that!'

"Many groups of parents have actually succeeded in stopping programs that they disliked; but in general such efforts end on the negative note without insuring a substitute that is in any way an improvement.

CENSORS INEFFECTIVE

"The problem of suitable and proper programs can be solved only through pooling a wide range of experience and judgment, and discussions in this spirit are essential if the radio is to fulfill its promise as a medium which can meet an almost infinite variety of common needs. . . .

"Like the movies and certain educational undertakings, the radio is from time to time confronted with problems that let themselves be attacked by systematic research. Numerous problems have thus been appearing. Research, however, has its obvious limitations, for it has no completely valid techniques or apparatus for measuring the subtler 'human equations' of interest and emotion.

Censorship Less Successful

"The greatest need in the development of the radio is to have the creative efforts of trained men and women turned toward this field as worthy of serious application. Parents must come to see that the direct action of censorship and negation will not take us to our goals as quickly as this seemingly longer road."

In making the survey of programs for the Radio Institute, the Radio Committee of the Child Study Association, consisting of parents in the general membership and members of the Association's processional staff, listed the following typical programs for children which seemed to meet the suggested standards of emotional emphasis, good taste, truthfulness, attitudes and sentiment, language and quality, and advertising: Singing Lady, Nursery Rhymes, Terry and Ted, Roses and Drums, Buck Rogers, Bobby Benson, Billy and Betty, Let's Pretend, Radio Theatre, Junior Radio Journal, The Puzzlers, and Chats About Dogs.

The Committee reported that not only has there been marked improvement in broadcasting for children, but also that there are indications of an increasingly constructive approach.

The Criteria Defined

These are the criteria developed by the Committee in evaluating children's programs:

1. Emotional Emphasis. While excitement and adventure are both valid and desirable in children's entertainment, dramatized violence, brutality and crime are hardly suitable for their daily consumption.

2. Good Taste. "We recognize and may reject 'low' comedy, coarse voices, offensively loud noises, and unworthy behavior."

3. Truthfulness. "We may legitimately demand truthfulness and sincerity in programs where either the background or the story itself purports to convey information. . . . But we cannot apply this criterion in the same way to programs that are frankly imaginative."

4. Attitudes and Sentiment. "In programs designed for amusement, the subtle arts of propaganda have no place. . . . We must be wary of condemning programs (with gunplay. —Ed.) on the ground that they will make children militaristic or lawless."

5. Language and Quality. "More important than the minutia of diction is the question of quality in the whole program. We do have a right to expect certain standards in writing, dramatic presentation, acting, and incidental music."

6. Advertising. "The advertising policy is a factor to be considered in evaluating any program. Does it make an unwarranted emotional appeal?"

On the subject of taste, Mrs. Gruenberg said that "we can usually recognize what is objected to as 'cheap,'" and that "like others who must attract the largest possible public, such as newspaper publishers and motion picture producers the broadcasters have to cultivate the tastes and standards of the very people to whom they cater."

"Not only the broadcasters but also the parents," said Mrs. Gruenberg, "must become fully conscious of what these criteria actually imply as to the future of programs for children and young people."

Renee Boucicault Dies Poverty Stricken at 36

Renee Boucicault, a granddaughter of Dion Boucicault, Irish actor and playwright, and daughter of the late Aubrey Boucicault, once popular on the New York stage, died in Bellevue Hospital, New York, last week of bronchial pneumonia. She was 36 years old. A fortune, estimated at $170,000 and inherited from her maternal grandfather, fell away through unfortunate investments, until at the time of her death she was believed to be entirely without money, and had recently been working in a Broadway grill as a waitress. She was married twice, both unions ending in divorce. Miss Boucicault was herself an actress. She appeared frequently in court battles relative to contests over the estate.

Evans, Noted Stage Producer Dies at 64

Robert Martin Evans, 64, theatrical producer credited with having "discovered" Jeanne Eageles, famous actress, died late last week of a heart attack in New York, where he lived. Born in Nashville, Tenn., Mr. Evans was the descendant of an old southern family. He began his career as a producer at Luna Park, Coney Island, then operated by Thompson and Dundy. He later became one of the best known theatrical producers. He produced several extremely popular musical comedies and managed numerous important players.

Roche, Chicago Theatre Veteran, Dies at 60

Colonel William Roche, Chicago showman, died last week at the ago of 60 at the local American Hospital. Heart and kidney ailments, which had bothered him in recent years, recently became acute. He had been active in local theatrical circles since 1889, his first position having been that of manager of H. R. Jacobs' Academy of Music. He managed many of the city's leading theatres.

Jackie Coogan Answers Motor Crash Actions

Jackie Coogan has filed answers in Los Angeles to two damage suits aggregating $500,000, brought against him by relatives of two men killed in a motor crash May 4, in which his father was among the four killed. Young Coogan denied his father was intoxicated or was driving without regard for the safety of the passengers, as charged in the actions. Young Coogan is en route to the East.

Films Seen Aiding Anti-Crime Battle

Public interest is shifting from the "gun-toting" desperado to the police and trained investigators who bring those criminals to book, largely as a result of the new emphasis placed on the agencies of law enforcement by the motion picture screen and the press, declared Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in an address this week before the annual meeting of the International Association of Chiefs of Police at Atlantic City.

This new attitude, in the opinion of Mr. Milliken, should go a long way to aid the anti-crime crusade now underway.

"The press and screen of the nation have made good," he said, "in their promise to cooperate to the utmost in focusing public attention upon the problems of crime detection and law enforcement. The apprehension of the criminal has come to have news value equal to the commission of the crime. And the public which admires true courage, has come to sense the vast difference between this quality, and the acts of desperation and false courage of the machine-gun gangster."

"We have passed a period," he pointed out, "when the criminal seemingly held the stage. . . . Today the news of a crime whets public expectations of the apprehension of the criminal or criminals, and the public heroes are those who untangle the tortuous skeins woven by the alleged master minds of crime and who destroy or deliver these criminals to justice, at the risk of their own lives.

"By bringing the achievements of the police and the federal crime detection agencies into sharp relief, the press and screen reflect and foster a renewed interest on the part of the public and especially the youth of the country in the heroes of the law. This should mean much to the maintenance of our national morale in dealing with the crime problem."

Casting Head Tours Theatres for Talent

Fred Schlusser, casting director at RKO Radio's Coast studio, is on a tour of the New England summer theatres, in search of talent with new leading men particularly in mind. Six candidates for tests were discovered in his first week. He will visit the Connecticut coastline, stopping at the well-known summer playhouses en route.

Guimond Joins Staff Of "Box Office," Regional

Lou F. Guimond, well-known advertising and publicity man in the industry, has joined Box Office, regional trade papers published by Ben Shlyen, Kansas City, as associate editor with headquarters in New York. Entering the business as an exhibitor, Mr. Guimond has held sales and advertising posts with Triangle, Hodkinson, Paramount, Realart, Columbia, Selznick and GB.

Named State Censor

Florence J. McCreesh, 22, daughter of Senator John J. McCreesh, of Philadelphia, has been appointed to the Pennsylvania censor board. She will serve as an inspector.

CLEAN UP PROGRAMS OR U. S. WILL DO IT, BROADCASTERS ARE WARNED

National Association Committee Protests Commission's Indirect Censoring After Address by Prall at Convention

The United States Government, through its spokesman, Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, served notice upon the National Association of Broadcasters in convention in Colorado Springs this week that Congress will "take a hand" unless broadcasters clean up their programs.

Following this pronouncement, the association's legislative committee, reporting Monday, warned against the Commission's gradual assumption of indirect censorship powers and predicted it would result in regulation by Congressional enactment. The report raised the question whether the Commission may revoke broadcasting licenses for the purpose of controlling the content of programs, and if this is not, in effect, censorship.

Mr. Prall denied the Commission can exercise any censorship over programs, saying: "I do not believe that there has been the slightest degree of censorship invoked upon networks by the Administration or by our Commission." He revealed, however, the inauguration of a "new deal" for radio, and warned of the Commission's determination "to free the air of objectionable programs."

He said that by the Commission's action a better standard of programs is assured, and that the industry can rely on the strong arm of the Commission to protect it against those within its ranks who spurn the new standards. It is not as a reform movement but the result of the demand of listeners for elimination of improper material, he said.

100 Station Cases Pending

"Today," he continued, "after only five months, there has been a wholesome cleaning up. Stations have taken the view that results can be accomplished by self-regulation. That is well. We, on the Commission, are gratified. The job has not yet been completed, for our records show that there are still some 100 station citations pending involving programs. These are not confined to medical continuities. They include lotteries, astrology programs and other seeming violations of broadcasting 'in the public interest.' But we do feel that a good start has been made.

"Particularly gratifying to us has been the leadership of the nationwide networks.

"Otherwise, there is strong possibility that Congress itself will step in and take a hand, and perhaps write into the law program restrictions with which stations will be forced to comply. That would be unfortunate, particularly when the result can be accomplished without it.

"We do not have in mind the deletion of stations which can show that the program excesses complained of did not constitute the major part of their schedules, or which have since taken steps to clean up; but we will not condone gross and wilful infractions. Stations have been deleted in the past due to program shortcomings, and it may be that a few of the pending cases will necessitate this drastic action. I hope not.

Broadcaster the Judge

"The broadcaster must be the judge. If he is incapable of judging, then we must assume that he is not the proper person to hold a broadcasting station license. . . . Radio should be the modern Paul Revere and be used to warn the public against the fake advertiser."

Denying charges that six-month licenses were instituted as a means of coercion and intimidation, Mr. Prall explained the old Federal Radio Commission felt short-term licenses would permit the broadcasting structure to be kept sufficiently fluid and allow shifting of station assignments. He revealed there is pending before the Commission a resolution by Commissioner Brown to extend the license term to one year.

Split on ASCAP Issue

Delegates—432 in number—showed a sharp division at the Tuesday session over the controversial issue of performance fees charged by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers for copyrighted music. The session broke up without having come to any agreement, but after expressing confidence in Isaac D. Levy of Station WCAU, Philadelphia, treasurer of the copyright fund—the association's "war chest" for its attack on ASCAP.

Mr. Levy, whose tactics in the controversy were sharply criticized by one faction, was upheld by the majority as the convention gave him a vote of thanks and confidence.

Joseph C. Hostetler of New York, copyright counsel for the broadcasters' association, urged the group to support the Government in its suit against the society for alleged infringement of the antitrust laws, but declined to recommend what the convention should do meanwhile—whether to file suit of its own or sign five-year extension contracts with the society on the present basis. The directors of NAB favor a "per piece" plan of payment, but this compromise has been rejected by ASCAP, and several individual stations and members since have signed the new contracts.

Form Own Association

Member stations of the association without network affiliation formed an association of their own, with the primary purpose of selling such stations to advertisers as a group. There are 265 stations with no network tieup, 40 of which joined the new group at the outset. Edward Allen of WLVA, Lynchburg, Va., was selected temporary president, and the organization was titled National Association of Independent Broadcasters.

Delegates Divide on Issue of Copyright Music Fees; Counsel Urges Support of Suit Against Composers

Forty-two of the 77 newspaper-owned stations in the country unanimously voted to organize as a separate section of the National Association to handle problems peculiar to them. This group planned to propose to the convention that annual prizes be awarded to stations for conspicuous public service.

Andrew Cruse, chief of the electrical division of the U. S. Department of Commerce, who recently returned from a survey of the television situation in England, France and Germany, predicted the new medium would show marked progress in Europe in the next two years.

Air Advertising Gains

J. Truman Ward, president of the association, reported a membership of 385 and a gain of 40 since last year's convention. Member stations told of appreciable increases in air advertising.

Arthur Church, manager of KMBC, Kansas City, chairman of the association's commercial committee, introduced a resolution pledging the convention not to accept "boilerplate" programs offered for publicity by film companies and magazine publishers, and committing stations to refuse all business on a cost-per-inquiry basis.

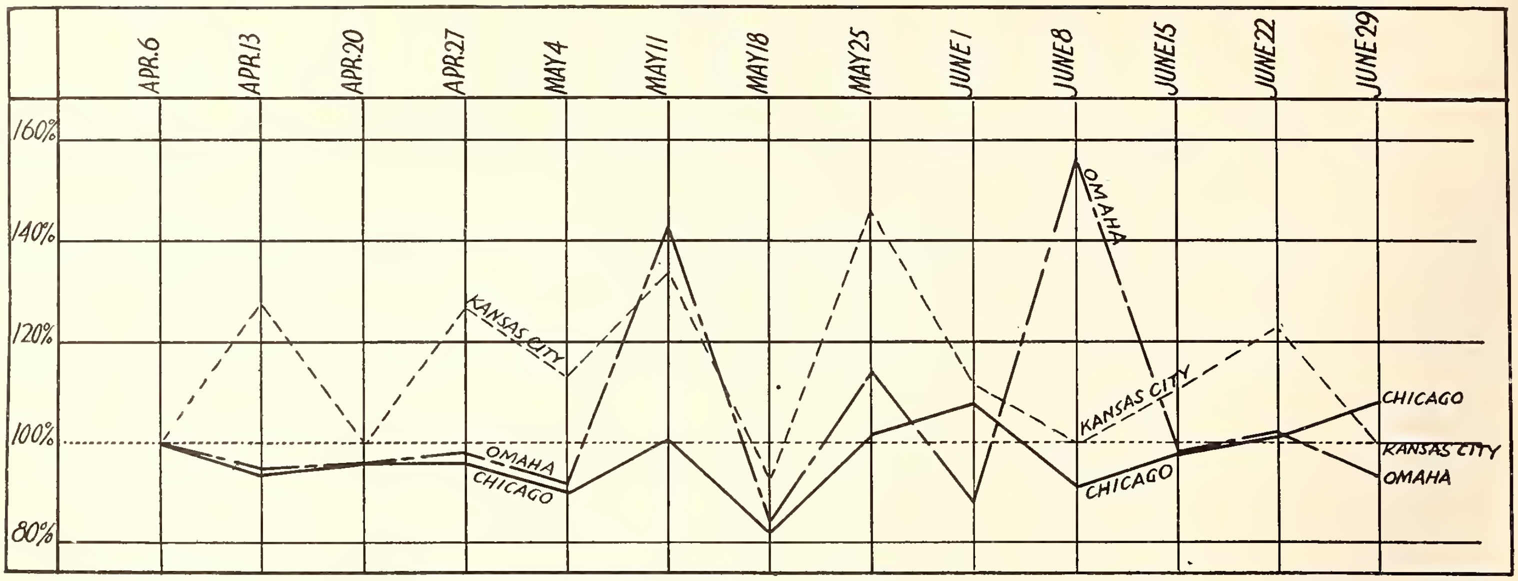
Leo Fitzpatrick of WJR, Detroit, announcer for Father Coughlin, was slated for election as the next president. He was picked by the nominating committee and the opposition faction as well.

Minnesota Receivership To Be Ended by Court Order

A final hearing is scheduled for August 1 in St. Paul, when the receivership of the Minnesota Amusement Company is expected to be ended by formal court order. The assets of the company have been returned in part as of June 29. The company has been in receivership since January 29, 1933, with William Hamm, Jr., as receiver, and has been carrying on a limited expansion plan. Houses have been opened at Minot and Fargo, N. D.; Eau Claire, Wis., and Winona, Minn. Theatres at Mankato and Rochester, Minn., are to be opened shortly. Tentative plans call for the reopening of the Minnesota in Minneapolis, largest in the northwest, about October 1.

Virginia Censor Board Receipts $29,755.50

Total receipts of the Virginia state censor board at Richmond for the year ended June 30 were $29,755.50, the highest figure yet attained. Expenses, including salaries, were $16,522.28, leaving a surplus of $13,233.22 which was paid into the state treasury. The report was submitted by Edwin S. Reid, director.



The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of box office grosses, indicates the trend of business in each of three Midwestern key cities during the thirteen weeks period from April 6 to June 29, 1935. In each city the gross for the first week of the period is taken as 100 per cent for that city.

NEW $1,353,000 SUIT AGAINST DISTRIBUTORS

Independents at Lincoln, Neb., Charge Conspiracy; Product Fight Starts in Minneapolis

Distributors and their circuit affiliates were the targets this week of two new attacks in the courts launched by independent exhibitors on charges of aggression involving conspiracy. One action, filed at Lincoln, Nebraska, demanding $1,353,000, echoed a previous suit for $440,000, filed last April, while the second, in Minneapolis, brought a federal court order requiring distributors to show cause why they should not supply product to the complaining Shubert Theatre Players Corporation's Palace theatre, Minneapolis, and Lyceum, St. Paul.

Federal Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux acted in the Minneapolis case in Shubert's suit against Minnesota Amusement Company (Publix) and large distributors, alleging conspiracy in restraint of trade by forcing the independent to charge a 15-cent minimum admission as a condition to obtain product. Hearing was set for August 5.

Collusion Charged

Charged in the second Nebraska suit, filed in federal court at Lincoln, with entering into collusion and conspiracy to control exhibition in that city were the Lincoln Theatre Corporations of Delaware and Nebraska, Paramount, Universal, RKO, Fox, MGM, Vitagraph, United Artists, J. H. Cooper and Bob Livingston. They are being sued for the additional $1,353,000 by the now defunct Independent Theatres, Inc. The first suit, filed in behalf of State Theatres, Inc., in April, asking $444,000 on similar charges, is still waiting in the courts.

The plaintiffs said they came into possession of the Rialto in 1932, the Liberty in 1933, and the Orpheum in 1934, at which time the defendants controlled 75 per cent of the picture product in the territory and 90 per cent of all the feature attractions, having, it was alleged, entered into an agreement between Paramount and Joe Cooper, who owned Lincoln Theatres, with the other defendant film companies. This made the bulk of the product available to the defendant Lincoln's five houses, while the four independent houses of the town tried to operate with the remainder.

Aim to Defeat Creditors Asserted

Mr. Cooper is charged with having kept several houses closed at various times before Independent Theatres entered the town and refused to pay the landlords of the three theatres figuring in the suit which caused the landlords to take them from him. After that, the petition said, action was taken to place all the assets of the old Delaware corporation in a new Nebraska corporation.

Paramount was interested in the situation, it was claimed, because Lincoln Theatres was a subsidiary to the Publix plan reputedly intended to obtain control of key spots in Nebraska, having a similar subsidiary ownership in Omaha, Norfolk, Grand Island, Columbus and Fremont. Mr. Cooper and Mr. Livingston, who then was operating the Strand, were said to have entered likewise into a "harmonious" agreement wherein Mr. Livingston showed westerns and such, while the best product went to LTC houses. So few of the houses were kept in continual operation that some pictures bought, stated the petition, could not be shown and the availability of second-run pictures was practically nil.

When operation was begun by Independent Theatres, a vaudeville policy was established at the Orpheum and talent handled through an RKO subsidiary, the RKO Vaudeville Exchange. Contracts were entered into with RKO by the plaintiff, but after three weeks of vaudeville service the contract was canceled by orders from RKO Distributing Corporation, it is alleged, and such action, it was charged, involved restraint of trade.

In April, 1934, according to the complaint, Independent lost all its theatres and at that time had incurred indebtedness of $21,000. Also, the leases on the three houses were valued at $200,000 (Orpheum); $130,000 (Rialto), and $100,000 (Liberty).

Allegedly damaged in the actual sum of $451,000, ITC seeks three-fold settlement amounting to $1,353,000. Attorneys Paul Good and Loren Laughlin represent the plaintiff.

Held in Baltimore, Is Charged with Film Theft

Mike Seigel has been ordered held in $500 bail for the action of the Baltimore grand jury following a hearing in which he was charged with receiving stolen goods, in the form of the films of the Baer-Braddock fight, which he was renting to local theatres. Mrs. Harry L. Boyler, president of the Oliver Film Corporation, testified the company had exclusive rights to the film, that one print was stolen in New York and was discovered on exhibition in Baltimore. A second action seeks an injunction to restrain Seigel from showing the films.

Townsend Heads Acoustic Group of Research Council

Ralph Townsend, assistant director of sound recording for Fox, has been elected chairman of the Research Council acoustic subcommittee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences on the Coast. The subcommittee plans a questionnaire study of wall coverings, set materials and the like used in each studio, and will correlate the information in a report for distribution to various departments in each studio.

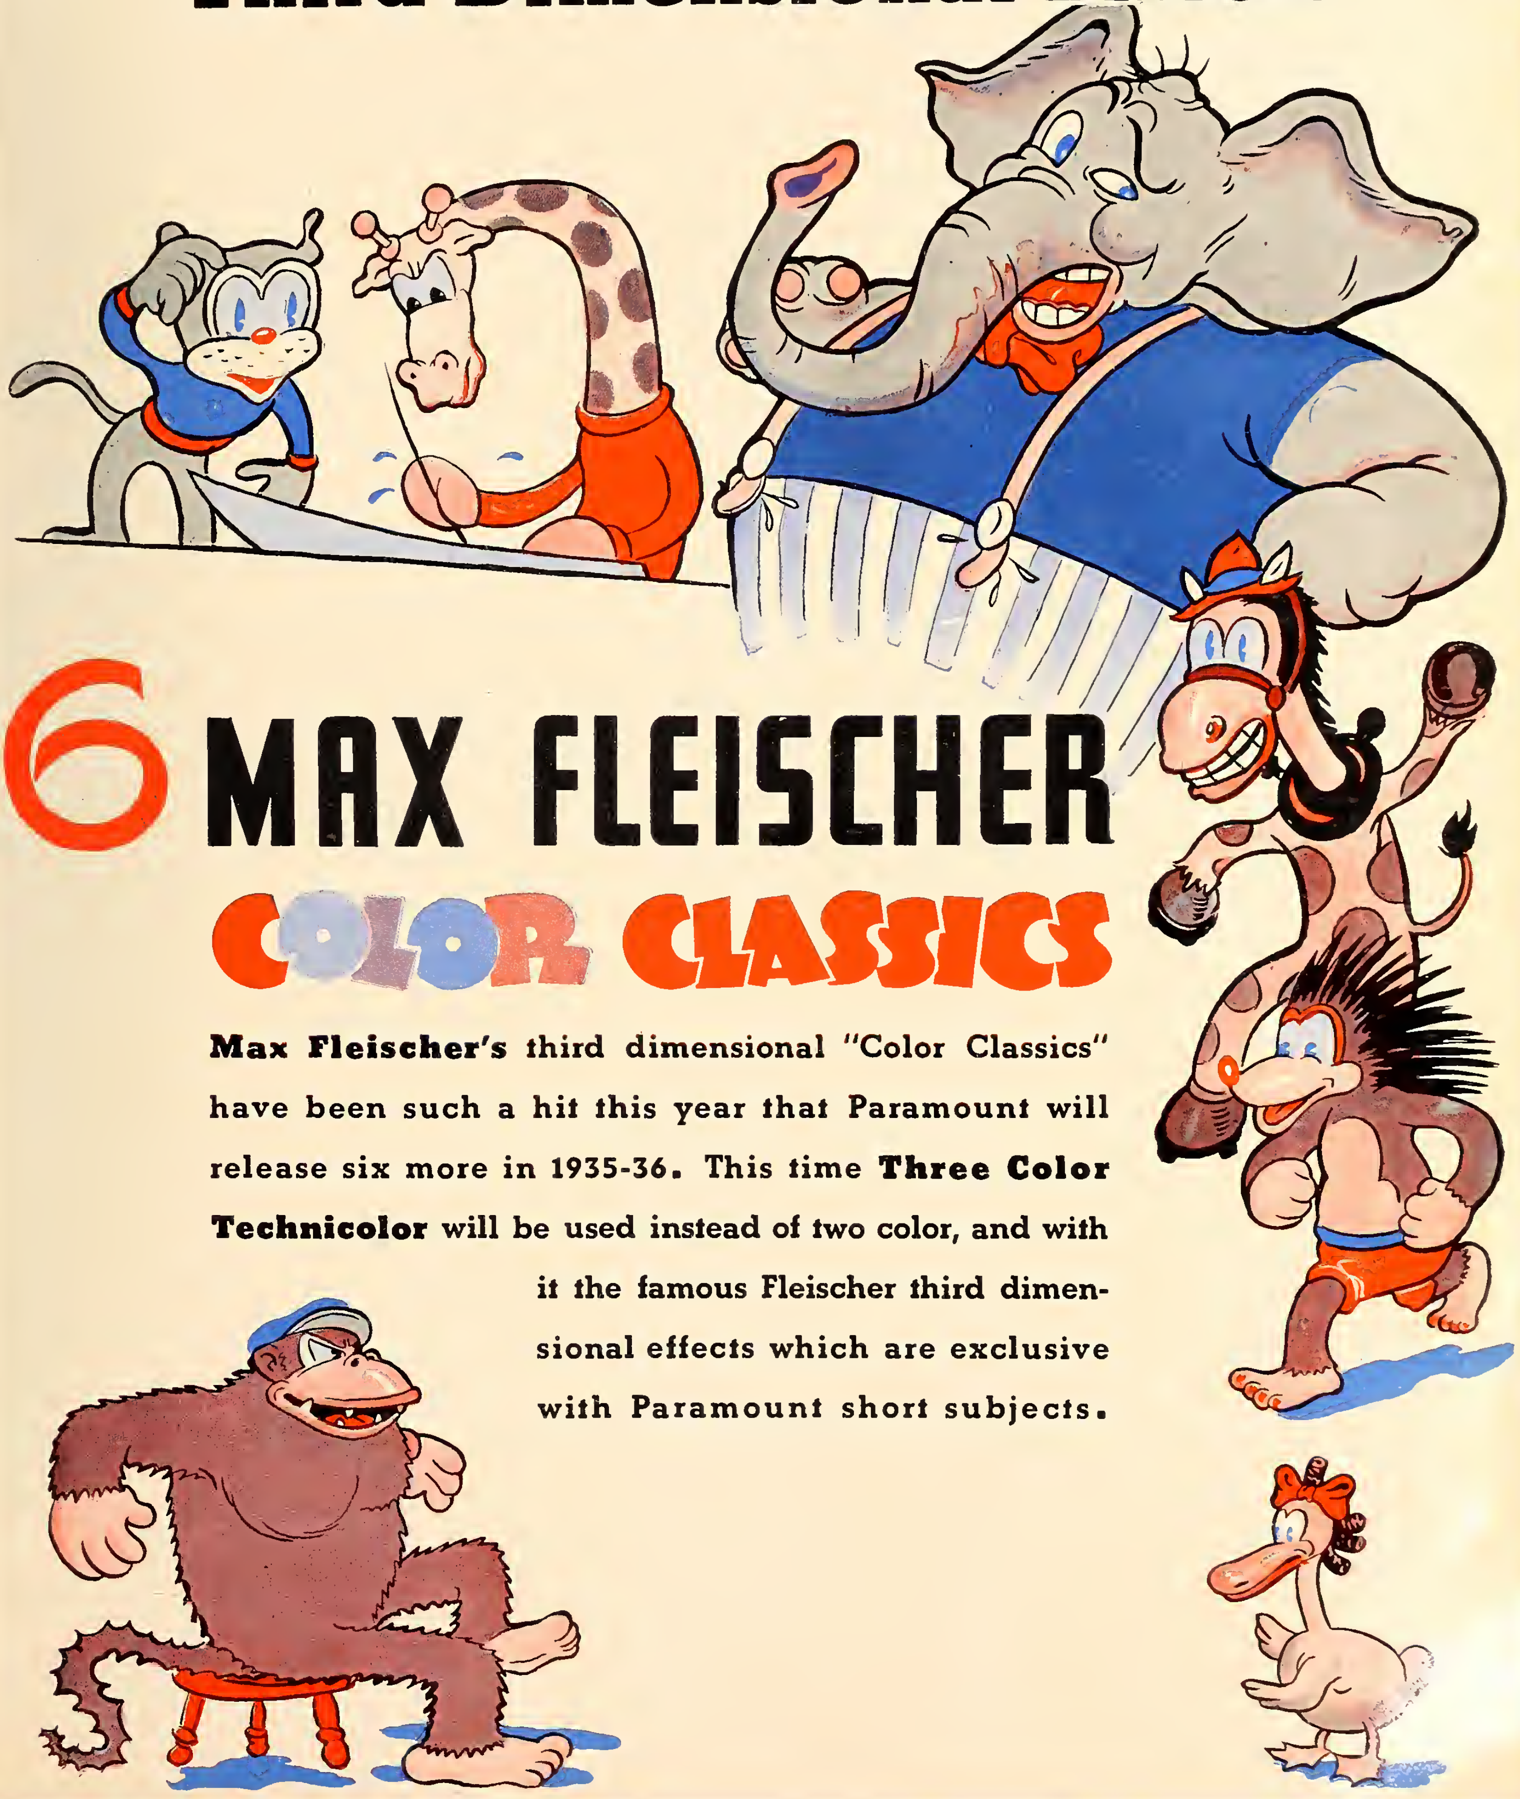
6 POPULAR SCIENCE
SHORT FEATURES

Six one-reelers in Cinecolor . . The first "Popular Science" reel recently released as one of this year's Paramount Varieties has proven so popular that a series of six similar subjects will be included in the Paramount short feature program for 1935-1936 . . . Using the great scientific resources of Popular Science Magazine, these shorts will portray in full color the wonders of science.

Popular Science Monthly will advertise and publicize these short subjects through the medium of its pages to over 2,000,000 readers.

Three Color Technicolor Plus The Fleischer Third Dimensional Effects

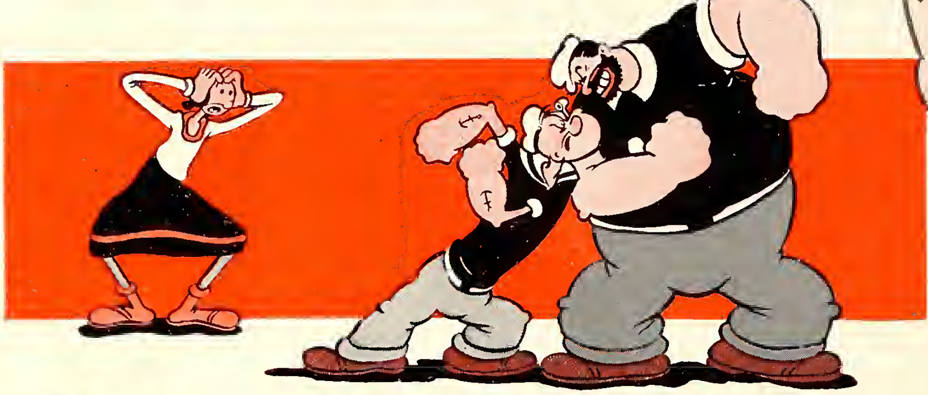


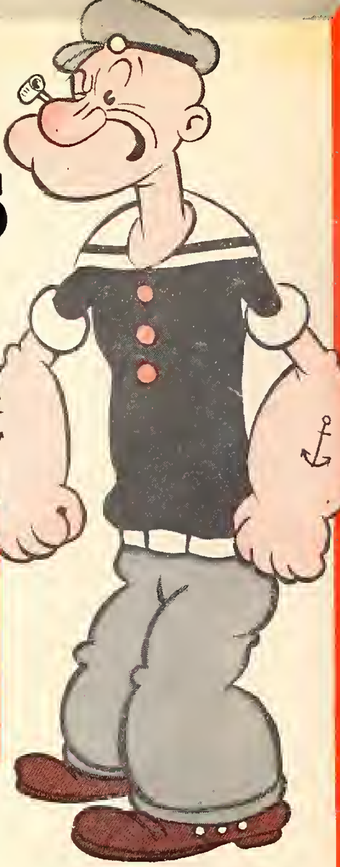
6 MAX FLEISCHER

COLOR CLASSICS

Max Fleischer's third dimensional "Color Classics" have been such a hit this year that Paramount will release six more in 1935-36. This time Three Color Technicolor will be used instead of two color, and with it the famous Fleischer third dimensional effects which are exclusive with Paramount short subjects.

MAX FLEISCHER'S Great Cartoons





12 POPEYES

Max Fleischer's little giant of entertainment stepped out in 1934 and grabbed the national cartoon championship. The whole nation is now "Popeye"-conscious . . . Popeye Clubs are springing up all over the country and are sending thousands of enthusiasts into theatres to root for Popeye.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

Ned Sparks, the original ten-minute egg of the movies, passed through Kansas City a few nights ago from Hollywood on his way to Canada to do some fishing.

"I'm tired," Sparks moaned. "Tired of working. I feel like the old man who said 'I eats well, I sleeps well, and I feels well, but when somebody mentions work I gets terribly sick all over.'"

Al Sherman, film reviewer for the Morning Telegraph, a theatrical and racing newspaper in New York, last Friday was expecting a messenger at his hotel quarters from his paper to bring him his weekly reviewer's pass for the Capitol on Broadway. When it failed to arrive at the appointed time, Al called the newspaper and was informed by his managing editor that the boy had been waylaid by three gunmen and robbed. "They wanted your pass," the m. e. told Mr. Sherman.

Al, of course, thought the boss was kidding. Until he bought a paper and learned that the messenger actually had been held up. The boy had been taking $10,000 in cash and checks to a bank.

The present cycle of "G-Men" has a special appeal to Frank Boucher, executive of Paramount's Dominion theatre circuit affiliate in Virginia. Frank used to be a "G-Man." He was in charge of the Information Division of the Department of Justice at Washington—interviewing the "nuts" seeking a way into jail. That was back in the days before the war, when William J. Flynn and William J. Burns were at the helm. It was Frank's good pleasure and subsequent misfortune to testify before a Senate committee inquiring about the activities of the Harding Administration.

One of these days producers of "G Men" films will learn that the Department of Justice has no more "G Men." They are "F.B.I. Men"—members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Cecil Blount DeMille knows what it is to cool his heels. He learned the other day. He was scheduled to meet members of his staff to record some additional sound effects for "The Crusades." When he arrived at the recording room the little red light was burning on the outside and this meant his entrance was prohibited. He stood five minutes. He stood 10, then 15, and 20. C. B. knew there was no sequence in the picture which required that long for recording, so he carefully opened the door.

And there sat members of his crew swapping stories. They had turned on the red light so as not to be bothered.

The little town of Grafton, in Massachusetts, which, according to the movie moguls, is the only one in the country to have "preserved the atmosphere of 1906," is all excited over the impending local filming of "Ah, Wilderness." Director Clarence Brown, of MGM, himself a native of North Grafton, sent back a few shots to Producer Hunt Stromberg at Culver City and they were pronounced just the thing.

Both California and Connecticut failed to provide the location desired, but at Grafton are elm-shaded streets, a startlingly white church, a grain and feed store and other appurtenances of old Americana. However, the town has had no motion picture theatre for six years!

TO AID IN HELPING the race feeling between whites and colored which has been strained recently in New York's Harlem, scene of a race riot some weeks ago, Ben Roman, owner of the Renaissance theatre, 137th street and Seventh Avenue, on Tuesday staged a monster all-day outing for 6,500 colored children in Central Park.

The army of youngsters, augmented by 2,000 men and women as guardians, marched with banners from the theatre to 99th street and Fifth avenue, and encamped at East Meadow, covering the entire ground, eight blocks square. Ten large double-deck busses carried 1,000 of the younger children. Twelve colored Elks and Masonic bands led the parade. It was the biggest thing Harlem's 400,000 population had seen in years, and Mr. Roman had been enrolling the participants at his theatre for the last six weeks.

At the East Meadow field Mr. Roman distributed 10,000 bottles of soda pop, 20,000 sandwiches, which required 750 loaves of bread, 6,500 plates of ice cream, and other goodies, all served by 400 buxom Harlem mammies. Also, there were 400 prizes for the pie eaters, ice cream quaffers and watermelon annihilators who had the time of their young lives in contests, and Mr. Roman took motion pictures of it all to show in his theatre. Every pickaninny got some sort of prize.

Seventy-five stalwart Irish cops were on hand to make certain that the spirit of friendliness would prevail.

The Reverend Samuel J. Williams, Ohio crusader for the gospel who is attempting to convert Clark Gable to evangelism, is apparently too late; Clark has already heeded the "Call of the Wild."

The crusader made an unsuccessful trip to California, which was widely publicized in the press, to contact Clark to "pray with him and endeavor to get him to return to evangelism." The women of Hopedale, Ohio, Gable's home town, urged him in his efforts, he said, and when he arrived at Metro's Leo the Lion studios at Culver City he told officials that a vision of Mrs. Bertha Harmon of his flock inspired the movement to win Gable to preaching.

"Mrs. Harmon," he said, "saw our church on a hill—and a lot of clean white stones around it. Down in the valley were a lot of lions and I was among them. The lions represented the movie people. All of a sudden the good people came out of the church and threw stones down at the lions. The stones represented their prayers and each one bounced off a lion's head and the lion was killed."

Metro's lion was flattered—not flattened.

When Norma (Mrs. Irving Thalberg) Shearer had a baby the other day the affair was on a grand colossal scale, requiring a suite of four large rooms at the California hospital, six nurses in constant attendance, a doctor's fee reputed to be $5,000 and another room for friend husband.

The same medico (Dr. Harris) who participated at the birth staged the debut of the Crosby twins. When Bing visualized a fee of $10,000 he offered to play the Doc a round of golf, the payoff being either $5,000 if the surgeon lost or $10,000 if Bing were the goat. Bing paid.

An American fox terrier from Hollywood barely escaped being escorted out of Dalmatia by Yugoslav police in the post-election unrest. In Siberik, Dalmatia, a man, later revealed as a Yugoslav detective, asked Lillian Gish and her sister Dorothy, who have been motoring through the Balkans, the meaning of the red-white-and-blue ribbon worn by their fox terrier. When Lillian replied that those were the American national colors, the agent said they were also Yugoslavia's—blue, white and red—and accused her of deliberately insulting Yugoslavia by adorning a lower animal thus. Then he cut the colors off the dog collar and pocketed them.

The next morning the actresses found their passports confiscated at the hotel office and they were summoned to police headquarters. After a long explanation they received somewhat of an apology.

Trudging through New York's lower east side, in the inquisitive frame of mind of the newcomer to the big city from the plains country of Kansas City, young Al Finestone stopped for dinner at a Rumanian restaurant on Delancey Street. He asked for a menu and attached thereto was a wine card. "It was brutally frank, too," reported Al, "suggesting the following prescriptions":

Rye whiskey for strength, gin for kidneys, claret for the liver, rum for colds, Scotch whisky for headache, cognac for the stomach, creme de menthe for nervousness, white wine for reducing, port wine for the blood, sherry for weakness.

An old trunk, laden with silverware and other treasures and containing mementos of her childhood, had been given up for lost by June Knight until the other day when an expressman delivered it to her at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio in Culver City.

Ten years ago, so Read Kendall writes in the Los Angeles Times, Miss Knight left the trunk in safekeeping of relatives. Shortly afterward they started a 'round-the-world tour and Miss Knight and her mother lost track of them. When Miss Knight became successful in theatricals she dropped her real name, Valliket, for Knight.

A note which accompanied the trunk informed the actress that her relatives had finally read where Miss Knight and Miss Valliket were the same person, so they shipped the trunk to the studio. And without asking for a handout.

LITTLE RESULTS SEEN FROM CARDIFF SESSION

Small Exhibitors' Grievances Plenteously Aired, but Effective Action Is Something Else

by BRUCE ALLAN

London Correspondent

Retrospection of the events at the Summer Conference of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association at Cardiff reveals that they took almost exactly the course that might have been predicted, and that is only another way of saying that it was rather a disappointing event. Its importance in previous years has rested almost entirely on the fact that rank and file exhibitors have taken the bit between their teeth and forced resolutions going some way beyond official policy, and for that matter, practicability.

Little Effect in Prospect

There were resolutions this year, and some of them sound drastic enough, but there is an impression that they will have very little effect on the trade situation.

The General Council meeting, for instance, adopted the policy of the London Branch that 40 per cent should be a maximum film rental and that the rules of the association should be amended to make it possible to take "appropriate action" against any member disregarding the rule. The big question remains: just what constitutes "appropriate" action, and will the most appropriate action be effective action.

So also with regard to further resolutions deprecating the failure of some distributors to observe the Kinematograph Renters Society's policy of preferential terms for small exhibitors. H. Victor Davis undoubtedly contributed one of the most eloquent and logical papers, but there was a big "If" about the subsequent discussion.

"If 50 per cent of exhibitors closed their books for three months, they would have renters coming to them," was one remark. But the best comment on that seems to be the reminder from Thomas Ormiston, an ex-president of the association, that a cooperative booking plan which he once prepared had been defeated by exhibitor apathy and not by distributor opposition. It is true that, during the discussion, the proposal was revived that all exhibitors should entrust the CEA Council with their bookings, but just what chance that policy has of being successfully applied is known to every exhibitor—and every distributor.

"Fantastic" Rental Demands

Apart from rentals, the main interest of the agenda undoubtedly attached to Simon Rowson's analysis and forecast of the quota situation.

It followed expected lines in indicating a probable continuance of the Films Act after 1938 with the addition of provisions for a minimum cost clause of £10,000 or £12,000 for British films. Where it was provocative was in the suggestion that the Act was necessary in order to protect the exhibitor from "fantastic" rental demands, based on a practical monopoly of foreign product by gentlemen who could plot in a "Wall St. parlor" free of any embarrassment from antitrust laws which do not apply to England.

The discussion showed that the exhibitor's views about compulsory British films are colored more by present hardship than by the prospect of future benefits. F. W. Morrison, one of the theatre men who helped to put the Act through, declared that it had served its purpose and ought not to be continued. Thomas Ormiston, still more prominently associated with the original campaign, was heard discussing the possibility of substituting a tariff for the quota. There was frequent expression of fear of the situation next October, when exhibitors face a 20 per cent quota.

It is probable that a poll of exhibitors would show a big majority for repeal of the Act, but that does not alter the fact that Mr. Rowson's suggestion for increasing its stringency is based on a very shrewd appreciation of the visible and invisible factors of the situation.

By a contract with Tobis-Sascha of Vienna they will feature Paula Wessely, star of "Masquerade in Vienna," in three pictures under the direction of Walter Reisch. American and British supporting casts will be used and the three pictures are scheduled to cost $125,000.

Musicals Emphasized

Completing immediately "Invitation to the Waltz," "DuBarry," "Music Hath Charms," "Old Heidelberg," "My Heart's Delight," and "Honors Easy," British International Pictures will get to work on an extensive plan of studio reconstruction in preparation for the fall production program, for which ten subjects already have been scheduled.

Richard Tauber's third BIP film (following "Blossom Time" and "My Heart's Delight,'), will be one of the first to go on the floor. It is being specially written by Eric Maschwitz, and the chief setting will be Covent Garden—market place and Opera House.

Evidencing John Maxwell's belief in the musical, several other subjects in the new lineup will be of this category. One, to be directed by Arthur Woods, will be comedy against a Paris background. Another will be a spectacular version of a current West End success. A third will star Harry Roy, the dance band leader who recently married Princess Pearl, daughter of the Ranee of Sarawak. A fourth will be a version of "The Lilac Domino," with Gitta Alpar. A fifth is another vehicle for Joseph Schmidt, the midget tenor of "My Song Goes Round the World."

Buddy Rogers will provide the sixth, in "Star of the Circus," with June Clyde opposite. "Funny Face," thus far uncast, is a seventh musical, and "More Sunshine" an eighth. Two dramas, "The Tenth Man" and "Living Dangerously," complete the list.

D. W. Griffith, scheduled to make "Broken Blossoms" for Julius Hagen at Twickenham, is reputed to be determined to make an English Lillian Gish out of the role which she played in the original version. Daily tests are covering a wide range of unknowns as well as many actresses popular in British films. Similar efforts will discover a male lead for the opportunity which Richard Barthelmess used so effectively.

Annual profits of the theatres are stated at more than $60,000, and are expected to be increased by the extended application of the principle of "automatic admission"—patrons getting their tickets from slot machines.

Acquires Share in Studio

British National Films, Ltd., new British production unit backed by J. Arthur Rank, the milling millionaire, and Lady Yule, has acquired a 50 per cent share in the Iver Hall studio plan originated by Charles Boot, of Henry Boot & Sons, Ltd., one of Britain's wealthiest building firms.

Occupying the 180-acre estate of the late Col. Grant Morden, M.P., the Iver Hall plan calls for five full stages, of which B.N. will occupy one, leaving four available on a service basis.

Total costs involved will reach £150,000, it is stated. The studio will be active in March, 1936.

British National has two films to make for G.B. release and the first, "Three Fevers," directed by Norman Walker, is nearly finished. Recently the company has been associated in trade reports with the new activities of C. M. Woolf.

Charles Boot will be chairman of Pinewood Studios, Ltd., owning company of the new plant, and J. Arthur Rank is the only other director. The capital, £200,000, will all be privately subscribed, it is stated.

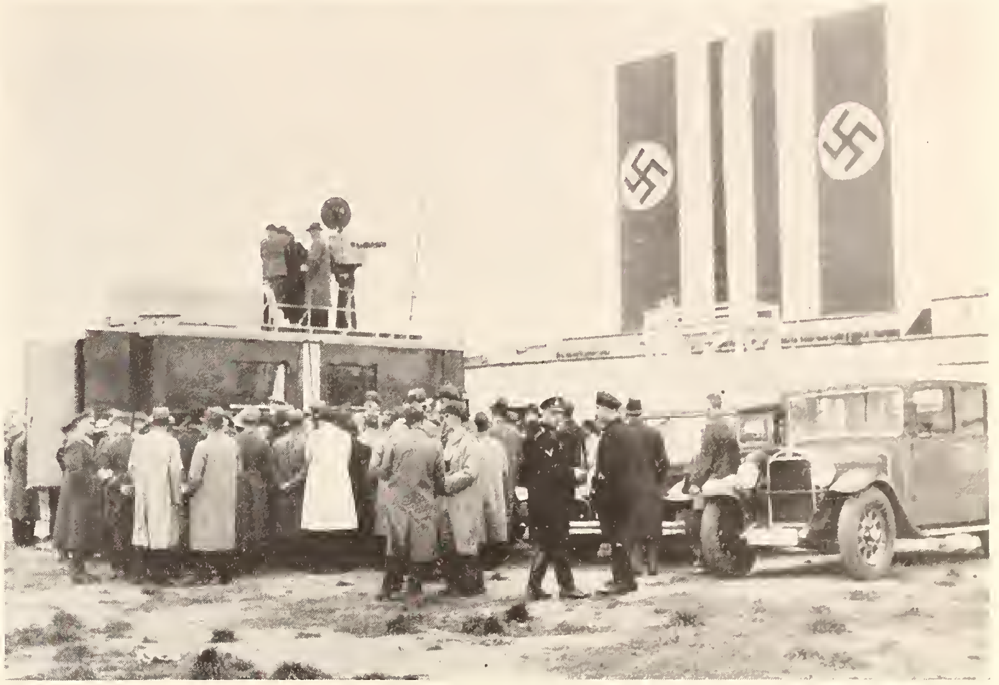
BERLIN TELEVISION NEWS BROADCAST CHALLENGES REELS AND EXHIBITORS

Transmission Made in One to Five Minutes with "Pickup" Truck; Limitations of Image and Receiver Costs Problems

by WILHELM E. SCHRAGE



Prodded by government orders out of Berlin, the German Broadcasting Company is employing television to widen the political propaganda value of sound broadcast. Shown is a television outdoor pickup car, used to transmit a Nazi demonstration from Tempelhofer Field. The television truck is jockeyed into position in front of the platform where Adolf Hitler is to speak. Atop the truck is the television outdoor pickup camera.

While there are strong indications that efforts to market television in Germany have gone ahead faster than scientific development has warranted—a case of eyes larger than stomach—the new television newsreel with its broadcast within one to five minutes of the event, and from the scene itself, is giving the regular newsreels much to think about.

The Mirror of the Day, which sometimes is stored for the regular television program three nights a week, from the new station of the German Broadcasting Company but also is often transmitted from the "spot" of a news event, works without delay directly upon the screen of the home television receiver. These newsreels are made by means of an "outdoor scenes" television truck. The truck carries on its roof a standard motion picture camera mounted on a cast-iron roof trunnion, allowing the camera to be moved in any desired direction. The hollow pillar of the camera support is used to convey the exposed film ribbon to the dark room of the truck interior.

Film Developed in 20 Seconds

By use of special apparatus and extremely fast working chemicals, the film can be developed in 20 seconds, though usually requiring about one minute. The still wet film is then sent at once through an "Abtastgerät" (an apparatus comprising scanning devices, etc.). The high-frequency impulses obtained are transmitted over special cables or by means of small ultra-short-wave transmitters in the truck to the television station, and from there broadcast immediately to the radio listener. Very often the exposed film is shown for the second time in the evening.

Pictures and accompanying sound are photographically recorded in the usual manner, and while the fast developing process may cause some decrease in sound and picture quality, it must be remembered that this is only the beginning, and if we keep in mind the high ability of the German chemical industry it is quite within possibility that these difficulties will be solved in the near future.

Against this time delay of only about one minute (or even five), the ordinary newsreels cannot compete. The only hope, then, of the newsreel industry is to improve the technique of newsreel production. Everybody knows that the newsreel interests have a very powerful weapon against television — the technicolor newsreel—which is today far away from practical utilization, but not by any means a hopeless case.

Systems of television in full colors have been invented, of course, but they were mostly designed on paper, and even if small scale demonstrations have been made, this kind of television seems to be pretty remote. Some experts even believe it is entirely hopeless for the next 50 years.

Two Powerful Transmitters

After experimenting for years, the German Broadcasting Company recently inaugurated a brand new television station, the largest one in the world, in the German capital. The station has two powerful ultra short wave transmitters, which radiate the sound and image impulses over an area not only covering the entire four and a half million metropolis but also many villages and cities surrounding Berlin. According to estimates, an area of about six million people is served.

The new station is on the air daily from 9 a.m. to about 11 p.m., but for some unknown reason is not in operation on Sunday. Since some program difficulties encountered in finding fitting programs could not be overcome entirely, many old talkers have been shown. However, for two months now, a highly entertaining program has been radiated on three evenings of the week (Monday, Wednesday and Saturday from 8:30 to 10 p.m.).

Out of first-hand information, on the ground, Wilhelm E. Schrage writes of matters televisionary in the accompanying article. Mr. Schrage was technical editor of the Berliner Tageblatt and is the author of "Radiotechnique" and "Television".

As an introduction for these evening programs are radiated the newly created newsreels, "The Mirror of the Day." In addition, some of the latest "regular" newsreels, showing events outside of Berlin, as reproduced in the Berlin motion picture theatres, are televiewed.

Political Background

In the main part of the evening program, television reproductions of motion pictures and plays, with more or less political background, appear on the receiver screen of the Berlin radio listener, or, shall we say, "televiewer." Well-known celebrities and politicians speak in front of the television camera. Radio artists heretofore known only by their voice will be seen as well as heard on the television screen. Famous explorers and well-known scientists now can explain and illustrate their lectures by pictures and diagrams. Art collections, timidly kept in well-guarded museums, will be brought to the home of the "televiewer" by experts in description along with actual image.

Despite the fact that there are at present some technical and also some important program difficulties, which reduce the efficiency of the television image to a degree not to compare with the performance of a modern motion picture theatre in Berlin, the German theatre owners feel pretty uneasy as to what degree this new art will reach in the near future. They remember very well that radio broadcasting did not start with the same high quality obtained today. They remember also the fate of the phonograph industry, which suffers now because of radio, and many Berlin exhibitors are considering thorough improvements of their facilities, to be well armed against television progress.

How far and when these apprehensions may be fully realized no one can predict. But there is one fact which has to be kept in mind. Even if the image quality of home television should remain as it is at present (which no one believes), and the prices for television receivers should decrease, television will be a heavy competitor for the German film industry, especially for the theatre owners, which might experience a decline in theatre patronage while not sharing in the income obtained by production of films especially made for television reproduction.

Television Receivers Expensive

To arrive at a clear understanding of the German and also of the American situation, we must keep in mind the fact that television receivers are expensive at present. The smallest television receiver on the German market, as manufactured by the Loewe Radio Corporation, which is capable of reproducing a television image of about 4 by 6 inches, costs approximately $240. This picture size is, of course, not large enough to give a performance as satisfactory as a picture shown in a modern film theatre. The Fernseh Corporation, Berlin, manufactures home television receivers with an image size of about 10 by 12 inches, but the price is so high that no quotations have been given to date. The estimated price is about $1,000, and even if it were considerably lower, such a receiver would not be within the means of the large mass of movie theatre patrons. But this is not all!

Nobody will expect the television image of a home receiver to have the same quality as a picture shown in a movie theatre, but not even the home movie quality may be obtained by the television system at present in use in Germany.

Mass Shots Unsatisfactory

As the television experts term it, the German television system operates on a 180 lines basis. That means the entire picture area is divided into 180 tiny lines regardless of how large or how small the size of the reproduced television image might be. To speak in the terms of the motion picture industry, a 180-line television picture might by equal to a movie picture consisting of about 40,000 picture elements. Since a home movie of equal size consists of about 150,000-500,000 picture elements, the difference in detail quality is quite large. Fortunately the German television camera men know how to avoid trouble by these limitations. They restrict the television image of "fair medium shots." They do not take pictures which show more than three or four persons, in case a stage performance is to be televiewed. The direct pickup of mass scenes often tried in the past months has not been successful. Despite the fact that some enthusiastic reports from abroad are stating the contrary, the present German 180-lines television system cannot even show an image quality of mass scenes, for example, what one sees from a big league baseball game when occupying one of the outermost seats.

Despite the fact Germany is the first country in the world with a regular television service, and though England will be ready to start in the early fall of this year with a similar system, the American television technique is much further advanced than European progress. How far this is true can be seen from the fact that one of the most progressive television companies in Germany, the Fernseh Corporation, recently made an agreement with an American television laboratory to exchange patents and experience. The same German company ordered an American television receiver which will be demonstrated next month at the radio show in Berlin.

"Far from Stabilized": Sarnoff

"The very rapidity of recent progress" in television experimentation "stands as warning that we are far from a reasonably stabilized development," said David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, in an article captioned "Radio Opens Its Eyes," in This Week, the magazine section of the New York Herald-Tribune, last Sunday.

"It would be economic folly," he said, "to set up a nationwide system at tremendous cost, only to find it hopelessly inadequate in a short time." Mr. Sarnoff pointed out that last autumn a 240-line television picture with a frequency of 24 a second was being used, whereas now the pictures are 343-line, 60-frequency, so that every receiver built last autumn would now be obsolete.

The next proper step in the development, he said, is proper field demonstration from which to set a basis for technical standards.

Mr. Sarnoff said that the fact that "clear and pleasing pictures" can be transmitted between two engineers working under perfect laboratory conditions is no guarantee that their methods will be applicable to popular television. He cited the limited service range, rarely more than 25 miles and frequently only fifteen. He pointed to the relatively small size of transmitted pictures.

He called attention to the fact that comparatively little is known as yet regarding ultra short waves. "Is every passing automobile going to ruin the television fan's evening," he asked, "because of impulses, sent out by its ignition, that 'splash' the picture?" He said that airplanes passing over the laboratory in the Empire State building cast shadows on television images, and added, "What about other interferences, when television gets down to the street?"

If it were established that the public was satisfied with the small image, Mr. Sarnoff said, the next question would be: "Just how long and how frequently will they sit before a television receiver and rivet attention on the visual action? And what kind of programs would they want?"

Managers Form Pittsburgh Unit

A new organization, known as the Theatre Managers' Association of Pittsburgh, and designed to further the mutual interests and for the protection of its members, has been formed in the Pennsylvania city. Represented are the Warner circuit, Harris Amusement Company, Loew's Penn and Mott theatres and Shea's Fulton theatre. Motion picture theatres only are included.

Officers are: Mike Cullen, manager of Loew's Penn, president; L. B. Cool, manager of the Fulton, vice-president; John H. Harris, general manager of Harris Amusement, secretary; Harry Kalmine, Warner zone manager, treasurer. The board of directors includes: George Tyson, James G. Balmer, Harris; Joe Feldman and Ben Kalmenson, Warner; Gene Murphy, Loew's Penn; Owen J. Cleary, Fulton theatre. Business and social meetings are to be held regularly.

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana has invited all theatre owners of Indiana and Kentucky, whether they are members or not, to attend the regional meeting of Allied States Association, the national organization, to be held at the Claypool Hotel, Indianapolis, this week.

Officers and directors for the coming year will be elected at a meeting of the Independent Theatre Owners Association in Los Angeles July 15.

The Independent Exhibitors of Massachusetts, Inc., local Allied unit with headquarters in Boston, will hold a meeting next Tuesday.

Allied of New Jersey will hold its three-day meeting at the Ritz Carlton Hotel in Atlantic City on August 21. The local unit will meet at Asbury Park, N. J., next Tuesday.

Canadian Theatres Gross $24,954,200

The receipts of 924 motion picture theatres in Canada totaled $24,954,200 for the year 1934, according to figures compiled by the Dominion government at Toronto. The total was exclusive of amusement taxes.

Employment was provided for 5,238, other than proprietors, the employees receiving aggregate compensation of $4,446,200. The provincial governments, exclusive of Saskatchewan, which has no tax, obtained a total revenue of $2,737,929 from admission taxes.

The figures indicated that receipts have declined steadily since 1930, when the total was $38,479,500. The percentage of decrease was lowest in Ontario, reaching 31.1 per cent, highest in Prince Edward Island, with 54.5 per cent. The index of admission prices during the four years showed a decline of 18.5 per cent.

On a per capita basis, the totals indicated that every person in the dominion spent $2.40 on motion picture entertainment during the year. Provinces with greater percentages of city population showed a higher average per capita.

UNITED ARTISTS ANNOUNCES 24 FOR 1935-36 AT COST OF $14,500,000

18 Walt Disney Cartoons Also To Be Released; Lichtman Given Full Authority Over Producer Member Contracts

This year's sales convention season, conducted by distributors to acquaint selling forces with new season policies and exhibitors with new product lines, came to an end this week with United Artists' meeting in Hollywood.

The company announced for 1935-36 a program of 24 features, to cost $14,500,000—averaging some $600,000 apiece—and 18 Walter Disney color cartoons, both groups to be merchandised to theatres and to the public on an advertising budget extended by $600,000 over this year's expenditure of $1,900,000.

Al Lichtman, new president, was vested with full authority over all U. A. contract acceptances, the company's individual producer members having heretofore passed on exhibition contract applications for their respective productions.

There was a new board of directors elected, composed of Mary Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Samuel Goldwyn, Al Lichtman, James Mulvey, Dennis F. O'Brien, Nathan Burkan and Edward C. Raferty.

Too, the court approved Art Cinema's sale of its holdings in United Artists to the company for $650,000, placing control, following acquisition of Joseph M. Schenck's stock, equally among Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Chaplin and Samuel Goldwyn—each owning 1,000 shares.

50 Per Cent Business Rise Seen

The management predicted to the convention delegates that there would be a 50 per cent increase in gross in 1935-36 over 1934-35, which was described as the company's "most profitable year."

Mary Pickford obtained Walter Wanger to produce two pictures for her next season.

The distribution personnel structure was strengthened by promotions and a complete realignment of the top line.

Gathered at the Ambassador hotel in Los Angeles were 175 delegates from studio, home office and the field, headed by Mr. Lichtman, Arthur W. Kelly, in charge of foreign distribution; Hal Horne, advertising-publicity director; Harry D. Buckley, vice-president of United Artists Theatres; Kay Kamen, representing Walt Disney; Harry Gold, Paul Lazarus, Jack Goldhar and Charles Stern, sales executives; Paul Burger, sales development manager; N. A. Thompson, sales controller; Albert Margolies and Len Daly, press agents; Nathan Burkan, counsel, and others. Sales managers and salesmen from every exchange in the United States and Canada were the delegates.

Contracts in Lichtman's Hands

Opening of the convention on Monday morning brought the announcement from Mr. Lichtman that each of the eight producers associated with the company has placed the responsibility for all distributing contracts directly in his hands. This deviates from the policy that has been in force almost since the inception of the company and immediately created speculation as to the future status of the individual producers' representatives who heretofore have approved sales contracts. Among these representatives are James Mulvey, who has been approving Samuel Goldwyn's contracts, and Emanuel Silverstone, who has been acting for London Films.

The election of the new directorate came in Hollywood Tuesday at a separate meeting of the four owner-producers—Miss Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Goldwyn. The new board held its first session immediately.

Back east, at Wilmington, Del., the order formally approving the sale by Art Cinema Corporation of its holdings in United Artists for $650,000 to the company was entered in Chancery Court and became effective immediately. Art Cinema's one-sixth interest goes into the U. A. treasury.

Kelly Sees Improved Gross

Arthur Kelly made the prediction that the impetus of a carefully organized business advancement coupled with a well planned producer-schedule will bring to the company in 1935-36 an increase of 50 per cent in gross business over this season, which, he said, "has been the most profitable." Here he referred to foreign business, and gave as his reasons for the upturn the increased number of pictures, expansion of the exchange system and "production policies geared to the demands of audiences in all parts of the world."

Mr. Kelly, who followed with a discussion of world distributions and its relation to the company, was the lead-off speaker at Tuesday's session, at which Maurice Silverstone talked about the British market, and Hal Horne outlined new advertising, exploitation and publicity plans. Harry Buckley was another speaker, talking on "General Policy and Theatre Circuits," the while Kay Kamen concentrated on "Exploiting Disney Product."

The appointment of Harry Gold, eastern sales manager, as general sales assistant to Mr. Lichtman, a post that was found necessary following Mr. Lichtman's promotion from general sales manager to the presidency, was not a surprise. Mr. Lichtman, however, will continue to function as sales manager.

The executive realignment was extended to include the promotion of Paul Lazarus as Mr. Lichtman's "inside" assistant, Mr. Gold concentrating in the field; Jack Goldhar will serve as western division manager, while Charles Stern, assistant eastern division manager, succeeds Mr. Gold in full charge of that post.

The $600,000 increase in the advertising budget, to $2,500,000 for the year, will be spent in newspapers. Mr. Lichtman told the convention that generally new and extensive advertising efforts will be made.

Eight Producers

The 24 features next year will come from eight producers—Charles Chaplin, Samuel Goldwyn, Mary Pickford, David O. Selznick, Alexander Korda (London Films), Reliance (Edward Small and Harry Goetz) and Darryl Zanuck.

Walt Disney's 18 short subjects will, like his previous commitment, include nine Mickey Mouse and nine Silly Symphony cartoons.

For the first time in four years, Charles Chaplin will be seen in a new production—"No. 5"—a dramatic comedy which will be followed by a drama produced and directed by Chaplin, but starring Paulette Goddard instead. Chaplin will not appear in this film.

50 Per Cent Increase in Rental Business Predicted; Eight Producers Announce Titles for New Season's Productions

Marking the 17th anniversary of the company, Samuel Goldwyn, although not a founder, will increase his schedule from three and four a year to six, as follows:

"Dark Angel," with Fredric March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall.

"Barbary Coast," with Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson and Joel McCrea.

"Shoot the Chutes," to star Eddie Cantor, with Ethel Merman, Parkyakakas and the Goldwyn Girls, and to be directed by Norman Taurog.

"Navy Born," original, by Mildred Cram, to star Miriam Hopkins, with Joel McCrea.

"Splendor," original play by Rachel Crothers, starring Miriam Hopkins and featuring Joel McCrea. This will be produced under a special arrangement between author and producer, whereby Miss Crothers is to share in the profits of the production in lieu of a predetermined sum.

"Dodsworth," the screen version of the book by the Nobel Prize winner, Sinclair Lewis, and the play by the Pulitzer Prize winner, Sidney Howard, will be Mr. Goldwyn's sixth production.

Two from Mary Pickford

With the start of the new season Mary Pickford will devote herself exclusively to motion picture production. She will contribute two stories. In answer to reports he had not only signed with Paramount for 1935-36 production, but would also produce two films for Mary Pickford for United Artists, Walter Wanger said this week that an announcement would be forthcoming before the weekend.

There were no Douglas Fairbanks productions listed in the announcement.

David O. Selznick, the newest of the producers to join the company, from Metro, is scheduled to make five for U. A. in 1935-36, under the corporate name of David O. Selznick Productions, Inc.

Alexander Korda will likewise release five next year, as follows:

"100 Years from Now," by H. G. Wells, directed by William Cameron Menzies.

"The Man Who Could Work Miracles," also by H. G. Wells, directed by Lothar Mendes, with Roland Young.

"The Ghost Goes West," starring Robert Donat, directed by Rene Clair from the story by Robert Sherwood.

"Cyrano de Bergerac," by Edmund Rostand, to star Charles Laughton.

"The Lion of Mayfair," by Robert Sherwood and Lajos Biro, also starring Charles Laughton.

Edward Small and Harry M. Goetz, heads of Reliance Pictures, continue under the United Artists banner, releasing three next season, as follows:

"Red Salute," starring Barbara Stanwyck, with Robert Young, to be directed by Sidney Lanfield.

"The Melody Lingers On," with Josephine Hutchinson, Helen Westley, and directed by David Burton.

"The Last of the Mohicans," by James Fenimore Cooper.

Jack London's "Call of the Wild," in which Clark Gable is starred with Loretta Young and Jack Oakie, is the Darryl Zanuck production which will shortly be released by U. A.,

for 1935-36 contracts, as directed by William Wellman.

A dinner-dance at Hollywood's Trocadero Club on Wednesday evening, attended by the delegates, executives and United Artists owners, producers and stars, concluded the convention.

Product Activities of Others

While United Artists was determining its season's plans, other companies were drawing together the last loose ends for the completion of their programs.

Edward A. Golden, Republic's sales manager, announced at the last regional sales meeting, held in New York over the weekend, that the company has unlimited finances and is in a position to guarantee the production of the entire 1935-36 program of 53 features. The meeting, held at the Park Central Hotel, was attended by 50 sales representatives in the New York and Philadelphia areas, and concluded a series of five regional conventions.

Executives who addressed the gathering included W. Ray Johnston, president; Herman Gluckman, president, Republic Distributor Corporation of Greater New York and Philadelphia; Bud Rogers and E. H. Goldstein; Jack Bellman, chief of sales in New York and Philadelphia; Dave Sohmer, New York manager; Harry La Vine, Philadelphia manager; Mike Levinson, and Edward Finney, advertising director.

It was announced that Mrs. Tony LaCasey will retain an interest in the Philadelphia Republic exchange operated by Mr. Gluckman.

Eight from Twentieth Century

While S. R. Kent, Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl Zanuck and William Goetz were in the last stages of discussion on the nature of the contract that will formally merge Twentieth Century Pictures with Fox Film, after the signing of which the four will travel westward to the studio, titles of the first eight pictures to be produced by Twentieth Century-Fox Film were made public.

It was made plain that the eight productions listed would not complete the activities of the company for the next season, but that others will be announced from time to time. These are in addition to the program for next season which was published last month by Fox Film.

The first eight to be made by the new Twentieth-Fox are as follows:

"METROPOLITAN," starring Lawrence Tibbett, is to be directed by Richard Boleslavski, from the original by Bess Meredyth and George Marion, Jr.

"THE MAN WHO BROKE THE BANK AT MONTE CARLO," starring Ronald Colman, based on the Russian play and adapted by Nunnally Johnston, to be directed by John Ford.

"SING, GOVERNOR, SING," by Howard Smith and Nunnally Johnston, featuring Ann Dvorak, Fred Allen, Phil Baker, Paul Whiteman and his band, Ramona, the Yacht Club Boys, Rubinoff, and to be directed by Roy del Ruth.

"MESSAGE TO GARCIA," based on the story by Elbert Hubbard and the book by General Rowan.

"EARTHBOUND," by Basil King.

"SNATCHED!" by Kubec Glassman.

"SHARK ISLAND," based on the life of Dr. Samuel Mudd.

"JOHN BARLEYCORN," by Jack London.

Celebrity to Produce Features

Celebrity Productions will increase its production activities in 1935-36 to include six features, in addition to the short subject cartoons already announced. In addition there will be a third series of ComiColor Cartoons.

The company has sent Harry A. Post, vice-president, to Hollywood to arrange for stories, directors and talent.

Conquest Pictures Sets Schedule

Conquest Pictures, headed by Pierre Arnaud, will distribute next season six one-reel novelty "Tales of the Tribes," already completed, depicting the lives of American Indians. There will be at least three features: "Desert Strikes," produced in Morocco; "The Battalion of Death," and "War Drama," protraying the inside story of World War spies.

Bryan Foy Productions will make six westerns for Warner Brothers next season. The films were those originally intended to be made by Leon Schlesinger, Warners' short subject producer, and in their production Mr. Foy will be assisted by William McGann, Warner contract director.

Walter Futter will contribute a series of eight Hoot Gibson westerns to the states right market, starting on the first, "Frontier Justice," on July 15. Mr. Futter has completed a two-reel "special," "The $200,000 Snatch," which is supposed to tell the story of the Weyerhaeuser baby kidnaping.

Paramount Looking for Shorts

Lou Diamond, head of Paramount's short subjects department, left New York this week for Hollywood studio conferences and to look for likely short subject material. The company is interested in viewing any single reel subjects with a view towards adding them to its program.

With 14 available sound stages and 18 pictures either under way or set for immediate production, Paramount studio executives are occupied with a problem of studio management. Their concern is to prevent dialogue of one film reaching the sound track of another.

Paramount this week signed Harold Hurley to a new contract as associate producer and exercised another option on Mae West.

"N.T.G." in New Series

Nils T. Granlund (N. T. G.), Broadway master of ceremonies, has been signed by E. Schwartz, of Master Art Products, to appear in six short subjects based on the amateur performance idea, story and dialogue by Herman Pincus, and with Ben Schwartz directing. Mr. Schwartz will also distribute "Stars of Tomorrow," also written by Pincus, featuring Ted Claire.

Four More Shakespeares from Warner

Warner Brothers are planning to follow their "Midsummer Night's Dream," recently completed by Max Reinhardt, with at least four more based on the dramatic works of William Shakespeare. The Shakespearean works under consideration include "Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," "A Comedy of Errors" and "The Merry Wives of Windsor."

Marion Davies probably will appear in "Twelfth Night," under the Cosmopolitan banner. Josephine Hutchinson is being considered for "As You Like It," while Jack L. Warner has James Cagney in mind for "A Comedy of Errors." Sir John Falstaff in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" will probably be portrayed by Guy Kibbee.

Showmen's Jubilee to Feature a "Movie Day"

Movie Day in the Showmen's Variety Jubilee, scheduled for Atlantic City, September 3 to 8, is set for September 7. AMPA Day is September 6. Members of the Variety Club of Philadelphia are taking an active part in the program. There will be a ball and entertainment on the opening night, with screen tests to be held every day except the last. A film and radio resemblance contest is also scheduled.

There are numerous film men on the National Advisory Council, which includes: Jack Alicoate, A. R. Boyd, M. B. Comerford, Jay Emanuel, John C. Flinn, Bruce Gallup, John H. Harris, Hal Horne, Ed Kuykendall, Dr. Leon Levy, Alfred J. McCoster of WOR, William McMahon, Lewen Pizor, A-Mike Vogel, Ralph J. Wonders of CBS and Walter Woodward of Erpi.

Romance

Adapted from a recently presented stage play, this is a story of October and June love with a light comedy background in which there is plenty of action. Smartly produced with modernistic settings embellishing eye value, the story is pitched to an intriguing key and moves speedily with much to stimulate and hold attention in all phases.

Given a theatrical atmosphere, the story deals with a fairly familiar situation. Middleaged playwright Gaye, convinced that the days of romance have passed him by, is adored by his secretary, Linda Brown. Feelings she expresses give him just the necessary idea for a smash theme for his forthcoming show. It is just the spark needed for the show's leading man, very much in love with Linda, to sweep her off her feet. Their marriage philosophically abetted by Gaye, he leads her a strenuous athletic wedded life that leaves the girl limp and very much desirous of the serenity and calmness that would have been hers had Gaye been her husband.

The inevitable separation ensuing, Linda concocts a compromise situation which provides Reynolds with the evidence needed for divorce. In the finale, Gaye realizes that Linda prefers his charm to Reynolds' hectic spontaneity.

Supplementing the entertainment provided by the three principals, there is a lot of merry comedy contributed by butler Flogdell and Miss Darling, the show's character woman. A showmanship asset and an entertainment feature is the work of Astrid Allwyn.

While a comedy, the show is distinctively adult in audience appeal with its major interest directed at woman patrons.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Producer, Douglas MacLean. Director, Wesley Ruggles. Assistant director, James Dugan. From a play by Samson Raphaelson. Screen play by Herbert Fields and Claude Binyon. Sound, M. M. Paggi. Film editor, Otho Lovering. Art directors, Hans Dreier and Ernst Fegte. Photographer, Leon Shamroy. P. C. A. Certificate No. 861. Comedy

Plenty of adaptable showmanship is available in this picture's title, personnel, story content and production values. Essentially a light, frolicsome comedy, occasionally slow in action but generally fast moving, it uses situations rather than straight story idea to create its laughter. A popularly keyed love story, which encounters many merry complications, supplements the comedy motivation. These, combined with other ingredients, have as their objective easily understood amusement. While a definite continuity is preserved, direction of the picture does not hesitate to veer off many times to garner laughs from gags and situations that probably were inserted during production.

In the yarn, "Click" Wily, Ed Olson and Gladys are a trio of promoters who don't consider ethics in their activities as long as easy dough is assured. While they're stranded in a swank hotel, a yeast company offers a prize for the photograph of the most beautiful girl in the world. An expert photographer, inspired by Click, makes a composite of all the world's beauties, and names her Dawn Glory. The photo wins and then come demands from the contest sponsors and the press that Dawn be presented in person. While cashing in on endorsements of all kinds of products, sensational and somewhat batty stunt flyer, "Bingo" Nelson, announces he will marry her. In the meantime, Loretta, who has been working with Betty as a chambermaid, has installed Bingo as her dream man.

A dress sent to the hotel is donned by Loretta and when "Click" is at his wits' end as to how to carry on his bit of deception, and newspaper man Slattery is threatening all sorts of dire things, Loretta appears in the gown. "Bingo" goes mad about her, she goes more than mad about him; Click, Olson and Gladys go mad about everything, but in the end, the trio, having reaped a fortune and their deception miraculously proven a reality, "Bingo," who has only sung one song and that in the nature of a Loretta dream, zooms Dawn away to the clouds.

The whole idea of the attraction is showmanship adaptation. The stunts, gags and actualities presented in the picture constitute a ready made exploitation campaign. Naturally there is much to be done about Marion Davies and her first picture for this company, and of course the other principal names, particularly Powell, O'Brien and Frank McHugh should come in for their share of the ballyhoo. —McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Murder Mystery

A formula murder mystery, different only in that its locale is Budapest and its characters are a mixture of social-politicos, police officers and every-day working folk of that city. The production's outstanding showmanship quality is the motivating element. Hardly of the character that will arouse any great amount of curiosity in personnel, or story content, although there is a certain uniqueness in production values and settings, the picture is essentially an average attraction with main appeal directed at the crime-solving fans.

Szegedy, small-time variety show performer, is murdered. He once was the husband of Madalaine, now married to Alvineczy, high government official. A suggestion of political intrigue surrounds Szegedy's blackmailing. Alvineczy learns from maid Lisa of the position which his wife strives to conceal. Circumstances are such that he, his wife, the maid, astrologer Omega, and the dead man's stage partner, Katherine, are all suspected of the crime. Flashbacks tell of the activities of each in retrospect. Captain Torok and his aides come into the case searching for the guilty one. Believing that the other is guilty, both Madalaine and Alvineczy make confessions. Torok, through smart detective work, so eliminates the various suspects that the real killer, knowing the game is up, commits suicide.

Most attractive showmanship potentialities seem to be wrapped up in the story content with its myriad conflicting suspects. As the title and work of the players are hardly of the quality that will stir spontaneous enthusiasm, there is little reason to do anything but give the feature of the usual announcements, with gag stuff based on the crystal gazer's activity being adaptable for a lobby ballyhoo.—McCARTHY, Hollywood.

Vatch the Hits Roll in from WARNER BROS.

where opportunity is given to demonstrate her comedy dramatic forte, it was impressive.

Backed by a music tinged Viennese atmosphere, reflecting that spot's color in its most romantic days, the motivating story is a rather complicated comedy romance drama. Fritz, noted artist and collector of many things, particularly beautiful and alluringly dangerous women, lures Greta, wife of Dr. Karl, to his studio. She poses for a semi-nude portrait. Its publication creates a sensation and Karl is sure that his wife was the model. He assigns his brother-in-law to find out the facts. The brother-in-law, orchestra director Paul, is the fiance of Anita, who is madly in love with Fritz. The artist pestered beyond endurance, finally says the subject is a "Miss Major." Via directory search, Karl and Paul track down a Leopoldine Major. She is the countess' maid. Sent to a concert, where all the principals are gathered, Fritz, sensing the dynamite in the situation, rushes her off to a little rendezvous.

Falling in love with Fritz, Leopoldine begins to shine. Her handling of comedy, dramatic and sometimes frightening bits of business, particularly her fear to visit the studio and pose, is a gem of character work. But jealous Anita blasts the shy girl's visions. Her catty tongue has no difficulty in convincing Leopoldine that she is the subject of scandalous conversation. Miss Rainer again demonstrates her ability as he reacts to her shattered allusions.

In a dramatic anti-climax, Anita shoots Fritz on the steps of Leopoldine's residence. Leopoldine rushes to a theatre and forces an unwilling Dr. Karl to minister to Fritz's wound, to be followed by a finale in which the showmanship value of the triumph of true love is marked as Leopoldine understands that Fritz really loves her.

Although there are other worthy names in the cast which have box office value, this picture seems to require more than anything else an advance which concentrates on popularizing a potential new star. The feature supplemental to that undoubtedly is the comedy romantic dramatic character of the story.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Comedy Melodrama

In every way here is the kind of picture that every showman likes to present and every type audience likes to see. A laugh packed comedy melodrama from start to finish, it is full of showmanship and amusement.

It bears only a skeleton resemblance to the original Charles T. Dazey dyed-in-the-wool melodramatic story and stage play. In place of the dastardly dirty work motivating that work, there is a brand of hokum, nonsensical hilarity that resulted, time after time, in preview audience merriment and applause drowning out ensuing dialogue and action.

Comedy is the picture's showmanship essence. It accentuates all other ingredients of which there are plenty. It's like gilding the lily to say that, from an entertainment point of view, it tops any previous Will Rogers picture, but accepting the preview audience reaction, no other conclusion can be reached. He's all that the patrons expect, but he's not the whole show.

There's a load of fun for everyone in the antics of the feuding, shotgun-toting grandpappy, Charles Sellon, and the insane carryings on of his nutty imported rainmaker, Etienne Girardot, and his Rube Goldberg paraphernalia. There's charming love interest in the romance between Dorothy Wilson and Russell Hardie. The show's comedy dirty work is deftly handled by Alan Dinehart, Charles Richman, Louise Henry and John Ince. Bill Robinson's dancing is a definite entertainment-exploitation asset. There's a comedy thrill in the picture's big action sequence, where the girl jockey is benefited by a surprise flood as she rides to victory.

With early sequences devoted to Steve and Nancy trying to keep the cantankerous old feudish Ezra from shooting somebody, particularly any of the Shattucks, the comedy premise is solidly established. Then at fast and furious fun pace, things start building the climax. Shattuck, having hired the college graduate horse doctor, Andrews, fires Steve, when he catches him tending the injured Greyboy, sole remnant of the once great Martingale estate. Steve, giving smart guy Slick Doherty a dose of his own medicine, goes over to the Martingale entourage. Andrews begins to show a romantic interest in Nancy, which serves to make the snooty Arlene more catty. Wash dances and teaches Steve to dance so that he may make an impression on horsewoman Dolly.

Greyboy's injured hoof needs a muddy track that he may win the big race. As Ezra introduces Pluvius J. Aspinwall, rainmaker, and all his curious contraptions, the fun seethes. Steve visits a classy mode shop (in which there is a showmanship fashion show idea) to get Nancy a gown for the night before the race ball. Shattuck and Slick try a little dirty work only to be frustrated by Ezra. Steve is arrested, thrown into the jug only to go blackface and through a demonstration of his dancing ability make an escape. With Nancy riding, the race starts on a hard, fast track and not a sign of rain in the sky. But Ezra and Pluvius are working. They manage to get water in a surprising way through which Greyboy thunders kneedeep in muck to victory.

There's clean, honest and wholesome fun for every kind of patron in this picture. The exploitation potentialities are almost limitless. It's wide open for all kinds of gag stunts. But in the final analysis, the show's entertainment is its own showmanship. Get a houseful to see the initial performances. — McCarthy, Hollywood.

Dressed To Thrill

(Fox - Robert T. Kane)

Comedy-Drama

Gauged by preview audience reception, there is only a modicum of patron interesting entertainment worth in this picture. On the same basis, elements commonly necessary for an aggressive business-building campaign are limited. In character the story is a comedy romance drama, the locale France and the time the closing days of the War and the immediately following years. In introducing Tutta Rolf, in a dual identity star role, production and directorial technique follows a semi-continental trend, which, in demonstrating that Miss Rolf has much promise as a screen personality, is hardly of the caliber to engender immediate audience or showmanship enthusiasm. Nevertheless, and while the task may not be a simple one in most localities, the predominating exploitation asset is the star to which all the ballyhoo ordinarily given to any newcomer may logically be applied, but in a manner carefully calculated to permit patrons to be the judges.

Based on an appeal situation, direction, in seeking to make it tricky, results in making everything easily anticipated and thus any qualities that might pique suspense are lost.

Bill Trent, Canadian officer, and Colette, small town dressmaker, are in love. With the Armistice, he forgets, but she remembers. Years pass, and with only meager explanation, Colette is now Nadia, a noted Russian actress. The lovers meet again. Banker Trent is enamored of the glamorous star. He doesn't recognize her as Colette, so she sets out to teach him a lesson. First as Colette, then as Nadia, she tantalizes Trent. He spends a fortune on the actress, but borrows money from the dressmaker. In the finale, her deception having the desired effect upon Trent, she reveals herself and of course he is a contrite but appreciative swain.

By using the name of Miss Rolf in combination with ideas of story content and concocting a campaign in which the sense of the title should play a part, exploitation possible of stirring advance audience interest may be developed.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Adventure

The weird, fantastic story of the strange Kingdom of Kor, She, its ever-young queen, and the search for the flame of eternal life, from the pen of the famous Sir H. Rider Haggard, which has been read by countless thousands in the years since its publication, is here brought to the screen by Merian C. Cooper, something of a specialist in the unusual in the motion picture.

With the aid of the vast mechanism of the modern screen, the producer has made of this a tale of high adventure in an unreal world, and has made for the exhibitor what should be an opportunity, in that the unusual, the fantastic, the breath-taking has been handled with a wide sweep of facility, a plentiful use of the imagination, an excellent use of scenic and spectacular effect and large portions of action and suspense.

With the origin of the film, the H. Rider Haggard novel, as a starting point in the selling of the picture, the exhibitor has an opportunity to match the ingenuity of the story and the film with ingenuity in his campaign. Recollections of the type of campaign material which proved successful in the selling of the original "King Kong," by the same company, may be of value to the showman, since both have the same sort of fantastic, amazing unreality in premise and development.

The facts that here, in the search by a scientist for a "flame of eternal life," the incarnation of that flame is a beautiful and apparently ageless woman, that romance comes to this woman when she sees a man resembling.

but to her the reincarnation of a man she killed 500 years before, that this man is torn between love for the young girl who is his companion, and a fascination for the woman who holds the secret of agelessness, should offer ample opportunity for attention-arresting and holding salesmanship. Helen Gahagan, well known on the New York stage, enacts the role of She in a manner which is certain to impress the audience. In support are Randolph Scott, Helen Mack and Nigel Bruce in particular.

As an English scientist is dying of radium poisoning, he tells his nephew, Scott, to accompany his partner in research, Bruce, on an expedition in search of an "eternal flame," as an answer to their years of research into the subject of an "element" which will preserve life. He bases his belief on a family legend which tells of Scott's ancestor, to whom he bears a strong resemblance, who found the place, died there and whose wife returned alone, her servants killed by a great beast.

The two start, reaching a glacial area and an uncharted ice barrier, where they are joined by a brutish man who thinks they are searching for gold and insists on going with them, and his harshly treated daughter, Miss Mack. Amazingly they come upon the bodies of the servants as told in the legend, 500 years old, frozen solidly into the glacier with the body of a huge saber-toothed tiger. An avalanche destroys every one but the three, Bruce, Scott and Miss Mack, protected by an overhanging ledge. A passage is revealed, they enter and are attacked by cannibalistic savages in a tropical atmosphere deep behind the ice wall.

They are saved from attack by the arrival of the soldiers of She, who rules the Kingdom of Kor. Taken there, She calls Scott by the name of his ancestor, whom she killed when he preferred his wife's love to hers, believes him a reincarnation of that man. Miss Mack fights for Scott, but secretly She plans to have her used for the annual sacrifice to the gods. Just in time Scott and Bruce realize the situation, save Miss Mack, attempt to make their escape and again meet She at the eternal fire. Scott insists he will stay with Miss Mack. She demands he follow her into the flame, to have the secret, that he may watch Miss Mack grow old. To prove its harmlessness, She steps into the radiating flame, is transformed into an old and withered hag and dies, while the three make their way to safety.

The glacial discovery, the weird ritual of the sacrifice, the end of She, are the highlights of a picture which offers unusual opportunity for the exhibitor.—AARONSON, New York.

The Rich Uncle

(Metropolis)

Comedy

An importation from Italy, this is out-and-out comedy and, to judge by the reactions of an Italian audience viewing the picture in New York, a highly effective comedy. The laughter was almost continuous.

Lacking subtitle translations of dialogue, the picture is adaptable only to those audiences which understand the Italian in which the dialogue is spoken throughout, but it appears a rather worthwhile film for those exhibitors, probably located in the larger metropolitan centers, who may count upon a patronage of Italians. For them, the film may be expected to prove decidedly satisfactory, both from the standpoint of the lively comedy, as indicated by the audience reaction noted, and in view of the fact that here is a picture in their native language, one of the comparatively few to reach this country.

Perhaps the native Italians will be familiar with the name of the leading player, said to be one of Italy's greatest comedy actors, Angelo Musco. His comedy may be said to be typically Italian, characterized by excited gestures, hair tearing and voluble and volatile conversation, much in the manner of Henry Armetta or Luis Alberni of the American screen.

The story finds Musco, once of the nobility but now poverty-stricken, forced to sell his furniture to provide food for his wife and three attractive daughters. His poverty is the result of endless legal squabbling with his cousin, the physically powerful Rosina Anselmi. She, in turn, has three personable sons, attracted to the three daughters of Musco. Then a rich uncle dies, leaving Musco his fortune. But the large list of prior legacies finds no money with which to pay them, and Musco again despairs. The head of the fraternal order of which the uncle was the president arrives to present three bank books, totaling a large fortune for Musco.

He, with new hope, rushes to the bank in the city only to find it closed. The shock is too much and he collapses in the street, injuring himself. Wearily he returns home, where word comes that the bank has reopened and is ready to pay in full on all claims. Happiness comes to Musco and peace to the family as the differences are composed and the three daughters see happiness ahead with the three cousins. —AARONSON, New York.

Produced by Capitani Film, Rome. Distributed by Metropolis Pictures. Directed by Amleto Palermi. Adapted from the comedy by A. Russo Giusti. Scenario by Gastone Medin. Photograhed by Anchise Brizzi. Music by C. A. Bixio. Running time, 88 minutes. Release date, June 28, 1935. General audience classification.

Mutiny Ahead

(Majestic)

Drama

With a fair quota of action, this production concerns the regeneration of a "playboy," and supplies romance, comedy and drama of the melodramatic and active sort en route to that regeneration.

Since the names in themselves cannot be considered as of marquee drawing caliber, the exhibitor will have to rely upon the story elements. Concentration on the action at sea, which is implied in the title, appears the best method of selling, making the most of the romance and the reformation idea.

Neil Hamilton and Kathleen Burke head the cast, both familiar but not strong names. The treasure hunt for the bullion which went down with a sinking ship 20 years before, the mutiny of the crew with its eyes on the gold, the theft of a necklace, under compulsion, by the young ne'er-do-well, his quest of that necklace when it is stolen from him, and his effort to prove himself not a thief, are all phases of the yarn which should be useful in attracting the attention of those of the patrons who like action material.

Hamilton is the young and fast living man who runs himself broke at the swank gambling tables. A chance friend, Noel Francis, introduces him to two of her friends, who turn out to be big jewel thieves seeking a valuable necklace belonging to Miss Burke's wealthy aunt. When Hamilton learns the nature of the manner in which he is to earn much-needed money to pay his gambling debt, he refuses, but accepts when a gun emphasizes the invitation. He steals the necklace at a party, arrives at the appointed place just after the two jewel thieves have killed each other after a quarrel. Attempting to return the gems, he is set upon, beaten by a group of sailors, and the necklace stolen. He pursues them to the docks, stows away aboard a ship which is about to sail with Miss Burke and Reginald Barlow, as her captain, bound for the bullion which went down with a ship on which he had been an officer 20 years before.

Hamilton is discovered, put to work in the galley after Miss Burke, whom he had met before, and who has seen the newspapers linking his name with the theft of the necklace, has told him what she thinks of him. Leon Ames, mate of the ship, is in love with Miss Burke, and when she turns him down he drinks, insults her and he and Hamilton fight. The mate is put in irons. The site of the sunken ship is reached, the gold brought up after Hamilton dives to save the captain, in diving outfit, from an octopus. Part of the crew, headed by the imprisoned mate, mutiny, and the result is fast action until the mutineers are subdued, chiefly through the work of Hamilton. Hamilton, meanwhile, has been able to prove to Miss Burke that he actually was trying to recover the necklace, and had not stolen it willingly. The conclusion finds Hamilton, quite reformed, and Miss Burke sailing home together.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Majestic. Directed by Tommy Atkins. Produced by Larry Darmour. Original story by Stuart Anthony. Release date, March 1, 1935. Running time, 63 minutes. P. C. A. Certificate No. 598. General audience classification.

The Divine Spark

(Gaumont-British)

Musical Romance

Operatic numbers, admirably rendered by voice and orchestra, costuming, an atmosphere of idyllic romance—these elements, supported by real charm of setting and photographic presentation, are the assets of this English language version of a production by the Alleanza Cinematografica Italiana made in the Cines Studios, Rome.

The ingredients are not new; the famous composers are getting a great deal more limelight as film heroes than they ever enjoyed in the flesh. Even so, the musical and the sentimental will each find a lot to appeal to them in this free telling of the love life of Vincenzo Bellini, famous for "Norma" and a long list of other operas. The atmosphere is that of the eighteenth century, and in line with the period flavor is the introduction of such famous historical figures in the world of music as Rossini and Paganini.

The music is the big selling point, and exploitation will be most successful if it is aimed at music lovers in any community, but for the bigger public there is a strong love interest, and the personality of Marta Eggerth is a definite asset; she acts appealingly besides singing admirably. Phillips Holmes, also, plays his romantic part well, and the character parts are all well cast. It is a class production, and should be handled with that fact well in view.

Vincenzo Bellini, student at the College of Music in Naples, falls in love with Maddalena, daughter of the rich lawyer, Fumaroli, and writes a ballad which he gives to her. The girl is betrothed to Tosi, an official who, inspired by the girl, obtains for Bellini the commission to write a cantata for the King's birthday. The lovers decide to elope, but Maddalena, impressed by a tribute which Rossini pays to Bellini's genius and fearing that she will ruin his career, changes her mind.

Bellini becomes the protege of Ginditta Pasta, a prima donna who has been the mistress of Maddalena's fiance. For her he writes the series of operas which have made him famous, but he is embittered by the loss of Maddalena. "Norma" is a failure because he deliberately chooses a theme of hatred rather than one of love. Maddalena hears of the catastrophe and, making a midwinter coach journey to Milan, gives Ginditta the ballad which Bellini dedicated to her. Introduced into "Norma" without Bellini's knowledge, the number makes the opera a triumphant success, but Maddalena dies as the result of her journey.

All through, the musical values are of the highest order. Story values are best in the opening scenes, picturing the whimsical courtship, and in the finale when Maddalina, dying, takes a tender farewell of her lover, not knowing that the man by her bedside is actually Tosi, her fiance. This angle of romance sacrificed to fame is a possible line of advertising to the general patronage, but essentially it is a film for music lovers.—ALLAN, London.

Comedy-Drama

From the state-owned and operated motion picture studios of Russia comes another picture, which, however much it contains of drama and comedy in the accepted motion picture entertainment style, is still just another phase of the apparently interminable Russian film propaganda.

In this instance it is the intention of the picture to indicate the life of the student in Moscow, at work and at play, and in the pursuit of romance. But always is the implication that under the benign guidance of the state, the young man—or woman—from the remote countryside may come to Moscow, there to work in the factory, study the subjects of his taste.

With respect to the exhibition of this picture in this country, it offers approximately the same opportunity as an item of motion picture merchandise as have others from the same source. That is, it may be said to be of comparatively little box office value for the regular run of motion picture patrons, despite the use of superimposed subtitle translations of dialogue to make for ready understanding of the story by those not familiar with the Russian language.

The locations where any attractiveness might be expected are in those metropolitan centers where an audience sympathetic with the aims of Russia, or particularly interested in foreign screen product, may be found in large numbers.

The story concerns three young Russians, who go from the country to Moscow to study and work in a factory. One Peter, the hero, is deeply interested in automotive engineering, another in the violin, the third in sports. Peter, when he left the country, had promised a girl, Valia, that he would not forget her. In the city, the three are active, Peter living according to schedule, working on his invention, the film's objective seeming to be to impress on the viewer the fact that here is the ideal Communist youth, letting nothing stand in the way of the improvement of himself for the good of the state.

Then he meets Tonia, a girl architectural student, and falls in love with her. He learns that she is the sweetheart of his friend, the sport enthusiast, and their friendship suffers. Then, at the wrong moment, Valia arrives at his rooms, and he turns her out. Peter and Tonia quarrel as a result of Valia's untimely arrival, and part.

Peter continues with his work, and at the conclusion it is found that Valia has married the violinist, Tonia her first love, and Peter is left with his work and the plaudits of the crowd as his invention is accepted as meaning savings in the thousands to the motor industry of the country. The five are once again fast friends.—AARONSON, New York.

The Vanishing Riders

(Spectrum)

Western

Routine western material, this film, featuring Bill Cody and his son, 10-year-old Bill Cody, Jr., has a reasonable quota of action, the expected incidental romance, set against the usual western mountain background.

Cody's young son is an attractive and appealing youngster, who can ride with amazing skill and handle a rope equally well for his age, but unfortunately the lines prepared for him make him appear rather too precocious for his years. He has been permitted to "steal" the picture, becoming virtually the small hero of the film.

It may be sold especially for the youngsters, with young Cody appearing so prominently.

Cody, sheriff, kills an outlaw, and adopts his young son. Together they come upon a former silver boom town, now deserted except for an old storekeeper, former friend of Cody. Through his efforts they go to work for Ethel Jackson, ranch owner whose father has been killed by an outlaw band headed by Wolf Larsen, who is terrorizing, the ranch. Through an error Larsen and his men are hired. They plan to steal the stock while Cody is away. The boy overhears the plot, rides after Cody, assists through the use of "ghost" makeup in the demoralization and the general cleanup of the gang just before the sheriff arrives, and then, when Larsen escapes, rides after him, ropes and captures him, a sequence which is just a bit incongruous. Strong men are not captured by 10-year-old boys as a rule. Otherwise, ordinary western material.—AARONSON, New York.

Produced and distributed by Spectrum Pictures. A Ray Kirkwood production. Directed by Bob Hill. Story by Oliver Drake. Photographed by William Hyers. Release date, July 1, 1935. Running time, 58 minutes. General audience classification.

Two Boobs in a Balloon

(Vitaphone)

Amusing

There is amusement in this, featuring Edgar Bergen, the clever ventriloquist, and his famous dummy. In this the pair are engaged in an important balloon ascension, designed to gather new data on conditions in the stratosphere. The scene is the interior of the balloon from its start on the ground until its final landing, also on the ground—with a bump. The "conversation" between Bergen and the dummy provides the entertainment and amusement, especially for those who like this particular form of trickery.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Mexican Industry Expecting Relief

by JAMES LOCKHART

Mexico City Correspondent

The new cabinet which President Lazaro Cardenas promptly appointed to end a political crisis, is viewed with much favor by the entire motion picture industry of Mexico, Mexican elements as well as foreign. Film men expect early relief from various problems, especially those of a legislative and fiscal nature, that have been bothering them for a long time, as a result of changes that have been made in the chiefs of government departments which have direct supervision of the industry, as well as the appointment of a new mayor of the federal district, which includes Mexico City.

See Possible Subsidy

Mexico City Film Row is of the opinion that the new ministers of finance and interior, the principal departments that are concerned with films in this country, will give prompt and beneficial attention to such long mooted matters as imposts and duties, censorship and other forms of legislation, some of which film men would be very glad to see modified. Mexican producers and distributors look to the new cabinet to help them out, perhaps with a subsidy or at least to favorably respond to the petition, asking exemption from all taxes for five years, excepting the income levy, they addressed to the former minister of finance.

The industry regards the new ministers of finance and the interior as men who are fair, reasonable and farsighted.

A compromise agreement between striking employees and exhibitors in Mexico City has been reached under the supervision of the federal board of conciliation and arbitration to end the difficulties between the workers and four neighborhood theatres. The workers accepted a slight increase, rather than their original demand. The exhibitors, for their part, agreed to consider new collective labor contracts, which is construed as a major victory for the workers. The strike involving several other houses continues, but the board hopes shortly to effect a settlement. In an effort to prevent future disputes of the same nature, the board is planning a series of conferences among exhibitors, distributors and producers.

Seek to End Theatre Boycott

Federal authorities are attempting to settle the dispute in Monterey, which as a result of the dismissal of 22 theatre employees, has desulted in a boycott against theatres ordered by the National Federation of Cinematographic Industry Workers, and the virtual closing of practically all Monterey theatres.

Mexico was visited by the Far East's best and most enthusiastic amateur sound picture cameramen during the recent convention of Rotary International. He is H. R. H. Prince Purachatra, brother of the former King of Siam, who was delegate to the meeting from the Straits Settlement district. During his spare time he pictured places of interest in and about Mexico City, including a bull fight that was presented as entertainment for the Rotarians. He exhibited his pictures to Mexico City film men and government officials, who praised them highly.

THE LAST OUTPOST

Paramount

This is a story of British military valor, chivalry, romance and sacrifice which has the jungles and deserts of Africa for its locales. It is adapted from a published story by F. Britten Austen, whose dramatic, romantic historicals have been made familiar to many by their appearance in a popular weekly. Its character is emphasized by the fact that Philip MacDonald, author of "The Lost Patrol," collaborad in adaption with Arthur Phillips, who did the screen play on "Limehouse Blues." Direction is by Charles Barton, recently credited with "Car 99" and "The Vanishing Pioneer."

The main theme concerns three well known players, Cary Grant, Claude Rains and Gertrude Michael. Rains rescues Grant from an enemy band intent upon killing him. The wounded Grant falls in love with a nurse, Gertrude Michael, Rains' wife, from whom she has been separated for years, though she knows he still loves her. Parting from Grant, she is killed in an auto accident and her last words are for her lover. Swearing revenge, Rains would leave Grant in the desert to die following an enemy attack, but the eerie voice of his dead wife pleads with him to save his fallen comrade in arms and preserve the best traditions of British arms.

Listed among the supporting players are Kathleen Burke, seen in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer;" Colin Tapley, Billy Bevan, Georges Renevant and Jameson Thomas with, of course, hordes of native characters.

Emphasis should be centered upon the emotional, romantic, dramatic story in selling the picture, which, because of its nature, is certain to be full of adventurous action.

THE IRISH IN US

Warner

The battling trio of "Here Comes the Navy" and "Devil Dogs of the Air," James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh, go on to further entertainment and showmanship availability in this production. Lloyd Bacon, who directed them in those pictures, is again at the helm. The story, by Earl Baldwin, was written specifically for the trio and also to mark the first starring appearance of Olivia de Haviland, who was seen with Joe E. Brown in "Alibi Ike."

In theme, with plenty of topical background action, the story is a comedy romance. Taking its cue from the title, it concerns three battling Irish brothers. O'Brien is a cop, McHugh a fireman, and Cagney a manager of fourth-rate fighters. Romantic rivalry for the favor of Miss de Haviland provides the necessary spark to kindle the hectic action. Cagney's punch drunk pug, Allen Jenkins, suffers a dressing room kayo at the hands of the champ. Cagney, substituting, takes a walloping, until Miss de Haviland puts her oar in by telling O'Brien that the fighter being massacred is her ideal. In a spirit of brotherly love, he becomes Cagney's second, to tip him off as to just how to polish the champ off.

The inclusion of Cagney, O'Brien and McHugh, together with the idea of the story, which promises to be full of exciting action, cues its exploitation character. For saleable production assets there is the reproduction of the famous New York policeman's ball in Madison Square Garden, and the title fight in Yankee Stadium. While those features will account for spectacle, there is the comedy romantic angle in considering feminine interest.

PLANS STATE AMATEUR FILMS

Mrs. A. S. Tucker, head of the Louisiana Better Films Committee at New Orleans, and a group of her associates are to meet in the near future to plan a statewide organization of motion picture enthusiasts, using 16mm (new RCA Perfection) sound equipment to make amateur films. They will use famous spots in the state as locales and backgrounds for their picture, it was learned. The prime movers in other amateur cinema clubs here have been asked to attend the meeting and probably will aid in making the first sound pictures of their kind to be made in New Orleans.

GLITTER

(Tentative Title)

This picture is adapted from an original story with a theme of comedy and romance drama and surprising heart interest. It is a production in which there is potential entertainment and exploitation interest in star, supporting cast and story content as well as director. The story, which is told against swank and luxurious backgrounds, the locales being a Mediterranean island and smart New York, is by Abbie Carter Goodloe with screen play by Joseph Mankiewicz. Direction is by W. S. Van Dyke, whose "Naughty Marietta" is currently popular, and previously credited with "Forsaking All Others" and "The Thin Man."

It tells of an uptodate girl who tires of the sophisticated sham of social life. She goes on a cruise with her father, and on a romantic island, following a whirlwind courtship, she falls in love with a young archeologist. All the time she passes herself off as just a working girl. The man, madly in love, follows her to New York. He learns her true identity and resents the deception practiced. The methods by which the girl wins him back are packed with comedy suspense.

Joan Crawford is starred in the leading role. Opposite her is Brian Aherne, seen in "The Fountain" and "What Every Woman Knows" since his debut with Marlene Dietrich in "Song of Songs." Principal supporting roles are handled by Frank Morgan, now in "Escapade," and Aline MacMahon.

Among the others are Eric Blore, Fred Keating, Vince Barnett, Jessie Ralph, Frank Conroy, Frank Shields, Ed Brophy and Hilda Vaugh.

A peppy modern romantic love story from start to finish, with fast moving comedy coloring the theme, it calls for showmanship that emphasizes the story quality and cast.

THE DARK ANGEL

U.A.-Goldwyn

In content "The Dark Angel" is a dramatic romance, a story of a great love found in the welter of the Great War, lost in a series of conflicting human rectitudes, and blossoming in triumphant beauty. It has a triangle structure and deals in essentials that have demonstrated entertainment and commercial value.

The producion is from a British stage play of the same title, with adaptation by Lillian Hellman and Mordaunt Shairp. It is being directed by Sidney Franklin, maker of such outstanding pictures as "Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Smilin' Thru" and "Reunion in Vienna."

The major action centers about three persons, and their names as well as those of the chief supports have been connected with some of the most important recent pictures. It stars Fredric March, currently in "Les Miserables"; Merle Oberon, seen with Chevalier in "Folies Bergere"; and Herbert Marshall. In the supporting cast are Janet Beecher, John Halliday, Henrietta Crossman, George Breakston and Olaf Hytten. There are also Denis and Fay Chaldicott, Frieda Inescourt and Claude Allister.

The feature, which is being tastefully and authentically produced, is typically English in atmosphere. Since childhood, Miss Oberon, who loves March, is beloved by Marshall. Maturing, going to war, March suddenly discovers his love. A last night liaison is misinterpreted by Marshall. Sent out on patrol, March is reported missing, only to turn up blind. After the war, believed dead, he turns up as a writer of children's adventure stories under another name. An old medical officer (Halliday) tells Marshall who the writer really is. He brings Miss Oberon, who, not knowing of his affliction, feels that she is being scorned. Learning the truth, she rushes back to him for a happiness she has dreamed of since childhood.

Tax Board Allows Entertainment Expense

Ruling on the appeal of Ned Wayburn from a deficiency of $2,526 and a fraud penalty of $1,263 imposed by the commissioner of internal revenue on his 1930 income, the United States board of tax appeals in Washington recognized the necessity of entertainment expense by members of the theatrical profession by insisting accurate records of such expenditures be kept.

Mr. Wayburn claimed a deduction of $22,000 for which he had no record, and the board compromised by allowing $12,000 and adding the balance to his income. The board dismissed the charge of fraud, declaring the errors were those of omission and that no attempt to evade payment of tax had been proved.

FRENCH QUOTA GIVES AMERICANS OPPORTUNITY TO PLAN THE YEAR

Full Year Extension Removes Uncertainty of Other Years; French Industry, However, Regrets Reorganization Delay

by PIERRE AUTRE
Paris Correspondent

From this side of the Atlantic and from expressions in trade circles here, it is believed that the American industry is pleased at the decision extending for a full year the film quota regulations, until June 30, 1936, to be exact. This is the first time since 1932 that French regulations have not added new restrictions on the entry and release of foreign pictures in France.

This longer period should be a help to importers, for whom it previously was very difficult to plan a program of distribution as they could not know what the new regulations would be at the end of six months.

The text of the decree and the rules are the same as they have been since 1933. The one difference is that the new order sets the regulations for a full 12 months instead of half a year.

The decree was a surprise to everyone of the French industry, who first learned about it when the Journel Officiel came out on May 29 with the word that the regulations had been extended for one year starting July 1.

A Story of Changes

The history of the French quota has been one of frequent changes and resultant uncertainty to foreign companies.

In 1932 three unusual principles in Franco-American film relations were introduced into the film regulations:

1. Original versions of each foreign film might be rented to only 10 cinemas in all of France, five in Paris, five in the provinces.
2. The Government reserved the right to limit at any time the release of dubbed pictures.
3. The dubbing of foreign pictures, that is, the replacing of foreign original dialogue by French dialogue, had to be done in France.

The regulations of 1933 added five cinemas to the number in the provinces to which original versions of foreign films might be rented and substituted for the second clause a quota on foreign dubbed pictures. The number was fixed at 140 for the year in addition to 48 films at the Censorship office when the regulations went into effect, making a total of 188 dubbed pictures. All these regulations were announced as in effect for one year.

Largest Handicap in 1934

The regulations of 1934 were limited to six months ending December 31, and this limitation was one of the heaviest handicaps under which the foreign importers, and especially the American industry, had to labor, because the entire business of marketing films is planned for at least six months in advance and the complete operation of dubbing takes from two to three months. At the same time, duties on imported printed negatives of pictures were increased 100 per cent, from 2.5 francs to 5 francs a meter. This increase was not really of great significance, especially for American companies which never import their negatives into France. They generally use for the original versions positive films printed in New York or London, and for the dubbed versions duplicative print ("mauve" positive).

On Nov. 27, 1934, these last regulations were extended until June 30, 1935, still with 94 dubbed films allowed for these six months.

The American companies in Paris are glad to note that in a year when practically all countries on the Continent are increasing discriminations against foreign films (Italy, for instance, practically had stopped all importation of American films) France has not added any restrictions.

It is said that this arrangement was on an exchange basis for importation into the U. S. A. of some French goods at the signing of the new Franco-American trade agreement.

French producers and distributors were rather pleased with the early issuance of the regulations, one month before they were to go into effect. That averted all the argumentation of previous years, when the decree was published just a few days before, or even after, its date of effect.

This year, then, it is expected that there will be no quota disputes between foreign producers and importers on the one side and the French distributors on the other, no fight in the trade press, no dispute between the Chambre Syndicale and the Paris association of exhibitors. Everybody in the trade is grateful to the Trade Ministry's office. On the other hand, French producers and distributors are very sorry to see that once more the Government has delayed for one year the important matter of reorganization of the French cinema industry. For two years everyone had waited for a real code of the French trade. Such a code is urgently needed.

New French Quota Set for Full Year

It is known that now the quota really does not affect foreign importers. The 188 dubbed pictures allowed yearly are quite sufficient; the maximum is not even entirely reached. Foreign pictures shown in France in their original versions are not all suitable for dubbing and it is not so easy to find 188 foreign pictures a year suitable both for the French market and for the dubbing work.

The French trade wants a reorganization of its own business. A few plans have been proposed. The one most in favor at the present time is that of Maurice Petsche, deputy and chairman of the cinema subcommission of the finance commission. It is probable now that this plan will be considered by the interministerial film statutes commission for 1936. Mr. Petsche has included a recommendation for a national film fund to supply money to French producers, the money to be obtained from increased imports duties on foreign films and a special tax on royalties from sound equipment.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

TALENT WATCHING EXHIBITORS' B.O. REPORTS
NBC ARTIST BUREAU SIGNS MORE STARS
STUDIO CLUB NOW ACCOMMODATES 105 GIRLS
SIX PRODUCTIONS START, THREE ARE FINISHED

by VICTOR M. SHAPIRO
Hollywood Correspondent

THAT Hollywood, commonly accused by showmen of knowing little about film selling and caring less about exhibition, is perking up and giving ear and eye to the two factors which, with production, make up the business, is evidenced in the fact that in the last month inquiries on such matters have geen piling up in the Hollywood office of Quigley Publications.

Actors, writers, directors and producers have been querying about "Theatre Receipts", "What the Picture Did for Me", how the picture went over, particularly in their home towns.

While no specific motive has been made known for this sudden interest of the creative sector in the business end, one indication is that the activities of new chieftains seeking facts on which to judge creative talent are sending talent scurrying for box-office information also.

Radio and Screen

Closer harmony between radio and screen is indicated as the objective of the NBC Artist Bureau Hollywood office. Established more than a year ago, the office operates to serve radio artists on the screen, and film players who broadcast. Since April, the Roosevelt Hotel headquarters have been in charge of Miss Dema Harshbarger, one-time manager of Chautauqua talent and concert and lecture artists.

NBC inclines to the belief that radio entertainment is not active competition for films, is convinced the two mediums can work hand in glove to advantage.

NBC is handling Francis Langford, Nino Martini, Jack Benny, a few of the artists combining radio and screen work. Victor McLaglen is one of the screen artists to join the radio ranks.

Going Out-of-Doors

The motion picture is going out-of-doors in the new season in order to revive public interest that waned when producers turned to drawing room drama, in the opinion of Sol Lesser, veteran independent producer and showman. Mr. Lesser is backing up his judgment by producing two of Harold Bell Wright's popular stories this year, in addition to four George O'Brien adventure stories.

"Even the costume pictures, upon which the public's interest is being focused this season, are going into the great open spaces," the producer said. He cited "Crusades," "The Three Musketeers," "Captain Blood," "Charge of the Light Brigade," "LaFitte, the Pirate," and "The Last of the Mohicans."

The Studio Club

Showmen who receive requests for general information about Hollywood from their home town girls will be interested in news of The Studio Club to give those young women who cannot be deterred from seeking fame and fortune in the precarious field of motion pictures.

The Studio Club was formed 19 years ago by a group of Hollywood women. Its purpose is to supply a background of dignity and comfort at a minimum cost to girls working in pictures. Now it occupies an extensive building of its own, big enough to house 105 girls besides the staff of Miss Marjorie Williams, resident director. Charges range from $7 to $13 a week. This includes a room, usually shared with another girl, two meals a day, use of the four reception and recreation rooms, club entertainment and activities.

The charges are sufficient to maintain the service without profit to the club. Added funds, to carry girls over periods of unemployment or to pay their way home, are obtained each year through a committee which consists of Mrs. Ella King Adams, Mrs. W. F. Callander, Mrs. Cecil B. de Mille, Miss Louise Dresser, Miss Mary Forbes, Mrs. James Gleason, Mrs. Arthur W. Heineman, Mrs. Jason Joy, Mrs. Harold Landreth, Mrs. Willsie Martin, Miss Mary Pickford, Mrs. J. S. Sanders, Miss Cora L. Tatham and Miss Lois Wilson.

Among those who have availed themselves of The Studio Club's advantages and since have become famous are Dorothy Jordan, Zasu Pitts, Maureen O'Sullivan and Virginia Sale.

Six Start, Three Finished

As is usual, during a holiday period, last week's production activity sagged a bit. Six productions were started, only three were completed.

However, production schedules maintained their above-the-average figure with 46 pictures in work. New work will continue apace, insuring one of the best summers of recent years.

Universal started two pictures. In "King Solomon of Broadway" are Edmund Lowe, Dorothy Page, Pinky Tomlin and Edward Pawley, with Alan Crosland directing. Also in work, both on location and on the stages, is "Stormy," with Noah Berry, Jr., Jean Rogers, Fred Kohler, Raymond Hatton, J. Farrell MacDonald, Walter Miller and James Burtis. Louis Friedlander is directing.

Paramount started "Wanderers of the Wasteland," a Zane Grey story. Edward Ellis and Gail Patrick are in the lead roles, the support including Dean Jagger, Larry Crabbe, Monte Blue, Trixie Friganza, Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Pat O'Malley, Al St. John, Benny Baker, Tammany Young. Otto Lovering is directing.

At Warners', "Living Up to Lizzie" went into work. Ruth Donnelly, Anita Louise, Warren Hull and Margaret Lindsay are the principals. Arthur Collins is directing.

Fox started "Meal Ticket," which stars Jane Withers, supported by Rolfe Harold, Sidney Toler and Gloria Roy. Marshall Neilan is directing.

Last of the starting six is Mascot's "Tumbleweeds," with Joe Kane directing Gene Autry, George Cheseboro, George Barton, Jack Rockwell and Charles King.

Mascot completed "Harmony Lane." It presents Douglass Montgomery, Evelyn Venable, William Frawley, Adrienne Ames, Florence Roberts, Cora Sue Collins, Joseph Cawthorne, Lloyd Hughs, Ferdinand Munier, David Torrance, Clarence Muse and Cornelius Keefe. Joseph Santley directed.

Paramount finished "The Last Outpost," with Charles Barton directing Cary Grant, Gertrude Michael and Claude Rains. Support includes Kathleen Burke, Colin Tapley, Billy Bevan, Georges Renevant, Margaret Swope, Jameson Thomas, Nick Shaide and Harry Semels.

At Radio "Alice Adams" was completed. The cast includes Katharine Hepburn, Fred MacMurray, Fred Stone, Frank Albertson, Charles Grapewin, Ann Shoemaker and Grady Sutton. George Stevens directed.

J. C. JENKINS--HIS COLYUM

Creston, Iowa

Dear Herald:

They say that all men are gamblers, and "all men" includes us, but there is more or less horseradish about that "all stuff" for we are not in that class, but if we were we'd margin every cent we could scrape up, and sell wheat and oats on the board, if we were assured that the present crop would mature, for, in all of our experience in the middle west, we have never seen such a prospect for a record crop of wheat and oats as there is right now, and all of it will be ready for the harvester within a few days if present conditions keep favorable. The outlook for a record crop ought to stimulate business, and it will.

This town of Creston has something like nine thousand cornhuskers, besides a lot of other people, and at one time this place was considered the metropolis of southwest Iowa, but today part of 'em have turned Republican and part Democrat and the trains don't stop here any more to unload and feed cattle from the western ranges like they used to do.

They have two theatres here, both of them very nice ones. There are also two managers for them, and they are pretty nice boys, too. The Dickinson house is owned by the Dickinson circuit out of Lawrence, Kansas and the Strand belongs to another circuit and is managed by L. N. Hillard and the Dickinson is operated by P. Zeller. Both houses seem well operated except that they have got into a price war. Last night the Strand was playing a double feature program at 16 cents and 5 cents and the Dickinson had a double feature program with seats at 11 cents and 5 cents, and we saw a bill in front of the Dickinson advertising a coming show at 6 cents for adults and the manager had told us that on the 4th he was going to run his show absolutely free. This is not what we'd call good showmanship. It is like cutting off your nose to spite your face. It's pretty hard on the nose and don't help the face a darn bit, but then that's their business.

Both political parties are waiting to see what city will put up the most money for their 1936 convention. Gee whiz, if they want to see a good show, why don't they go and see Jane Withers, Shirley Temple, Wallace Beery or some more of 'em and they won't have to use cracked ice the next morning.

On Indebtedness

While the following don't have any connection with the picture business, yet we believe it is something you ought to know. Did you know that Nebraska doesn't have a dollar of indebtedness? Well, she don't.

Did you know that Nebraska can't, and never has, issued an interest bearing bond? That her state constitution forbids it? Well, it does. Did you know that she has just completed a fifteen million dollar capitol building and has it all paid for? Well, she has. Did you know that there has never been a charge of graft against a state officer for fifty years, except that she sent a defaulting state treasurer to the pen about forty years ago? Yep, that's correct. Did you know that she has the largest public school fund per capita of any state in the Union? Yes sir, she has. Did you know that she has over $1,500,000 in her general fund alone? That's correct. Did you know that her school fund runs pretty close to sixteen million dollars? And did you know that she has the smallest percentage of illiteracy of any state in the Union?

Antelope county, Nebraska, has no bonds. It has no indebtedness. It has a court house. Her warrants have always been cashable at par. And she has money on hand today amounting to $212,790.83. No charges of graft have ever been brought against any county officer.

Neligh is the county seat of Antelope county and she has all modern conveniences except a street railway, and that's because they don't keep the hogs penned up. She doesn't owe a nickel except a small balance on paving and water bonds and her levy amounts to 10.2 mills on the dollar. Can you imagine that kind of a condition when you remember that we used to be the mayor of that crossroads village? If you know of a state, county or town in any better financial condition we wish you would let us know about it.

Buxton at North Bend Star

M. D. Buxton has recently taken the management of the Star theatre at North Bend, Nebraska. He also sent us an order for the HERALD which proves that he knows what is necessary in the conduct of a theatre.

L. H. Ireland, who manages the Logan theatre at Logan, Iowa, is not only a swell chap but is a special friend of our old college chum, Bill Bowker of Dunlap. L. H. has a good theatre in a good town and he belongs to the HERALD family and that makes him all right.

A. R. Miller operates the Broadway theatre at Audubon, and when they try to put off a poor picture on him, which doesn't happen often, he makes a kick about it. That's why about everybody in Audubon county goes to the Broadway to see a good show.

If you will keep it quiet and not let it get noised around much we will call your attention to a town in western Iowa by the name of Anita, and should you ever go there (as most people do) you should call at the Rialto theatre and meet C. G. Bodd, who operates the place. Should he not be there you will find him just across the street editing the principal paper of western Iowa. The Rialto, Mr. Budd and his paper have a statewide reputation. While there, we met a gentleman by the name of John C. Jenkins, a man who has never bought a gold brick nor been in the penitentiary. Why should he, he comes from mighty good Welsh stock.

Over at Exira we found a man by the name of White operating Exira's popular playhouse, that is, he and Mrs. White both, and we had a dandy visit with them. They persuaded us to extend their subscription to the HERALD, which we were glad to do after being properly approached. They are listed in our catalogue as a couple of swell folks.

Recreation Parlor in Basement

C. N. Johnson of the Grand theatre at Red Oak, is a brother of Oscar Johnson at Falls City, Nebraska, and between the two of 'em they come from a mighty good family. C. N. was so afraid he might miss a number of the HERALD he had us renew his subscription, which, by the way, isn't out yet for three months. Somehow the boys all get anxious that way, and we are glad of it.

Then we met Mr. Good who operates the other house. He also operates a recreation parlor in the basement of his theatre. We had a delightful visit with him.

We think that C. V. Stewart of the Mayfair theatre at Shenandoah, is quite a chap, but maybe that's because he is related to our friend Karl Reese, who sells film out of Omaha, but then he's quite a chap outside of that.

Exhibit Shows Detail of "Midsummer Night's Dream"

A feature of the recent international convention of University Women held in Los Angeles was an exhibit, furnished by Warner, which indicated some of the production detail of that company's picturizing of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which was directed by Max Reinhardt, recently completed. The booth housing the Warner exhibit was 60 feet in length, with white grilled lattice for display panels. Original wash drawings and charcoal originals of sets were featured, as well as various of the masks and costumes worn by the principals in the cast.

Paramount Presents Film

Paramount Film Service has presented to the government of Australia a film recording the 25-year reign of King George of England and a film record of the recent visit to Australia of the King's fourth son, Prince Henry. A national film library has been established at the Australian capital.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 273 (one of a special group on sound).—(A) If an exciter lamp fails to light, is it necessarily an indication that the lamp is burned out? (B) What precautions should be observed in clamping the exciter lamp in the type of socket using a knurled screw? (C) Why is it advisable to operate an exciter lamp slightly below its rated current value? What effect will operation at higher than rated value have on the lamp? (D) Describe briefly the principle of operation of the photoelectric cell.

Answer to Question No. 267

Bluebook School Question No. 267 was: (A) Excessive and jerky takeup tensions are recognized causes of film damage and rapid sprocket wear. On what general type of film reproducer sets do these conditions also affect the sound, and how? (B) Why should an exciter lamp having a sagged filament never be used?

The engineers who prepared this question answer:

(A) Reproducer sets not equipped with hold-back sprockets. Flutter. Where there is no hold-back sprocket to produce a free loop between the takeup and sound sprocket, any irregularities or "jerkiness" in the takeup operation are transmitted through the film to the sound sprocket and sound aperture. They thus cause flutter in the reproduced sound.

(B) Not only is a sagged exciter lamp filament an indication of a weakened lamp, but also is often the cause of noise in reproduction. The sagged filament image is in curved form and may not completely cover the slit. Normal vibrations incident to the projector mechanism will often cause the filament image to "dance" on and off the edges of the slit, this causing a noise resembling mechanical vibration to be projected by the loudspeakers. If the filament is not sagged and is properly located, it will overlap the slit edges enough so that this will not occur.

"Students" who made acceptable answers are C. Rau and S. Evans; D. Danielson; C. Oldham; A. Sprafke; G. E. Doe; J. Wentworth; B. D. Vietti; M. and J. DeVoy; T. Van Vaulkenburg; L. D. Templeton; H. Edwards; D. Goldberg and L. Hutch; L. Biello and R. S. Conrad; J. T. Joyce; G. Bagby; B. W. Mathews; D. L. Sinklow; T. Turk and O. Davis; G. N. Bagby; H. Pitchkey and M. C. Mellinger; P. N. Farrell and D. H. Samuels; B. Diglah; D. U. Granger; S. L. Thompson and G. Thompson; C. D. Carmody; G. Wayne and D. Stellegos; P. M. Daniels; C. Semuels; O. Thum and I. D. Ackerly; J. M. Dillon; P. I find that several answered Section A very well indeed. More than 200 answers said the same thing, though in different words. Substantially they replied:

"Because it will or may be transmitted through the medium of the film to the sound, or 'constant speed' sprocket, the action of which will be affected, and therefore the action of the film at the sound head aperture."

Edwards says, "Excessive or jerky takeup tension will affect sound where there is no sprocket between the sound sprocket and takeup spindle. This is by reason of the fact that the takeup pull will, of course, be directly against the sound sprocket, and as the takeup pull is, in the nature of things never exactly even, such unevenness will affect the sound sprocket and therefore the sound itself."

Rau and Evans say, "Excessive or jerky takeup tension will affect the sound on such equipments as provide no sprocket between the sound sprocket and takeup, with slack film between the said sound and hold-back sprocket. Under such a condition, excessive or uneven takeup pull will, of course, be transmitted to the sound (constant speed) sprocket, hence the film it controls will not move steadily over the sound head aperture."

(B) T. Van Vaulkenburg says, "The exciter lamp is the basic source of energy for the photocell, and therefore for sound reproduction. If it is not in perfect condition, naturally the reproduced sound will not be either. Itemized, the reasons why its filament must be perfectly straight are:

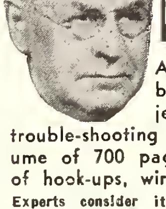
"1. The slit that illuminates the film sound band is perfectly straight. It is illuminated by the filament. Naturally the center of the filament, and therefore the filament image at the slit, is its most powerful point in the matter of illumination. Therefore its exact center must, for best results, be over the slit center, and that cannot possibly be the case if the filament itself is not perfectly straight. A sagged filament therefore means loss of power—of sound volume.

"2. Such a condition would, of course, mean uneven illumination of the slit and therefore of the sound band, which, unless my reasoning be at fault (I don't think it is.—F. H. R.) would induce distortion of the sound.

"3. A sagged filament indicates a failing lamp, and certainly that is not a good lamp to retain in use.

"4. A sagged filament is a weakened one and may fail entirely at any moment, therefore it should be replaced.

"5. I know a sagged filament creates noisy sound very often. Why this is so I have been unable to ascertain (See the engineers' answer. —F. H. R.)."



F. H. RICHARDSON'S NEW BLUE BOOK OF PROJECTION

A new edition of this famous book is now on the press. Projection, sound reproduction and trouble-shooting all in one compact, handy volume of 700 pages, including 153 illustrations of hook-ups, wiring diagrams and schematics.

Experts consider it the most up-to-date and practical projection manual on the market. Contains an extremely simple index system for instant use in emergency breakdowns. A book that should be part of every projection room in the country. Order early and get an original author's autographed copy.

Catholic Group Deplores "Indecent" Entertainment

Voicing support of the Legion of Decency, the Catholic Daughters of America, meeting last week in Seattle, launched an attack on socalled indecent entertainment. "We are going to have clean pictures and that is all there is to it," said Mrs. Mary F. Larkin, national editor, who continued, "this is a permanent movement and we intend following it up by doing everything possible to bring about the passage of measures now pending in Congress to prevent block booking." Mrs. Larkin urged replacement of the present crop of stars with others "who can act instead of merely parading indecency."

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Chesterfield

GHOST WALKS, THE: John Miljan, June Collyer—Good program picture that drew exceptionally well. Running time, 67 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SONS OF STEEL: Charles Starrett, Polly Ann Young, William Bakewell—Pretty good program picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Columbia

AGAINST THE LAW: John Mack Brown, Sally Blane—A good program picture. Running time, six reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

AGAINST THE LAW: John Mack Brown, Sally Blane—An average program picture which received fine audience response on a double bill.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

AIR HAWKS: Ralph Bellamy, Tala Birell—Good airplane picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

AVENGER, THE: Buck Jones—Fair, entertaining western; not quite as good as most of Jones westerns. However, Buck Jones is a good box office draw and it pulled 'em in. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 8.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

AWAKENING OF JIM BURKE: Florence Rice, Jack Holt—Good program picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

AWAKENING OF JIM BURKE: Jack Holt, Florence Rice—A good program picture that pleased well. I played this on Bank Night and everyone commented on it. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 20.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

BEHIND THE EVIDENCE: Norman Foster, Sheila Mannors—Good little program picture. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DESERT VENGEANCE: Buck Jones—This is one of the Jones reissues originally made in the days when they made westerns with a punch and this one has it. If your fans like westerns with a punch and plenty of gun play then don't pass this one up. It gets off to a slow start, but then the action starts and how! The story is different from the ordinary westerns and the recording is okay. Running time, 58 minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING SHADOWS: Tim McCoy, Geneva Mitchell—A real story of the North. Did tremendous business at the B. O. Everyone liked it. Trust Columbia to make pictures with the "it" in them. Running time, 63 minutes. Played June 21-22.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT: Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Walter Connolly—The drawing power of this film is nothing less than amazing. We booked the picture for a third run at our house after it played every theatre in the city and yet we stood them up.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

First National

FLIRTATION WALK: Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Pat O'Brien—This is the first Warner Bros. musical played in my show. For some reason or other I have never played a musical that payed. This one did not do average business. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 21-23.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

GO INTO YOUR DANCE: Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler—Another good Warner Bros. musical.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Adolphe Menjou, Gloria Stuart, Alice Brady—Another good Warner Bros. musical.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Gloria Stuart—I call it a wonderful big picture. Dick Powell big star for me. His song in this one is great. But in parts it seems they have got to pull a lot of nonsense. It seems like everything else; the world has gone nuts on foolishness. But such bunk stuff has killed lots of pictures. This is my way of thinking only.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

IN CALIENTE: Dolores Del Rio, Pat O'Brien—A wonderful show. Pleased everyone and did extra at B. O. Just the kind for this hot weather. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 9-11.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

LIVING ON VELVET: Kay Francis, George Brent, Warren William—Very good. Ladies will like this better than the men.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MARY JANE'S PA: Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee—Just fair. Stars not very good drawing cards.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RED HOT TIRES: Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor, Frankie Darro—Nothing but automobile thrills. Good for kids and hoodlums.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

WOMAN IN RED, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond—I want to say this picture is real nice and a pleasing program entertainment. Well played from start to finish. Runing time, 60 minutes.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

Fox

BABOONA: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Different from previous wild animal pictures but we have found our patrons do not find any of them sufficiently interesting to turn out. Played on a preview showing with fair results. Running time, 78 minutes. Played June 1.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BABOONA: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—It is sure a big, thrilling picture. Fine for Saturday night or any night. Running time, 72 minutes.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

BRIGHT EYES: Shirley Temple, James Dunn—A box office record we dream about and comes so seldom. This picture made dreams come true. And what a picture. Temple and Dunn are naturals. The customers raved about this picture. Some came to see it twice. Biggest hit since "Tugboat Annie." Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 7-9.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN PARIS: Warner Oland, Mary Brian—One of the best Chan pictures. Very good. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN PARIS: Warner Oland—Along the same line you expect from this actor. He never makes a change and when you see one of his pictures you should be satisfied not to want to see him again. (My way of thinking.)—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

COUNTY CHAIRMAN, THE: Will Rogers, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor—A good picture that did not draw so well. This did not make any money for us. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COWBOY MILLIONAIRE: George O'Brien—Pictures just don't come any better than the ones made by George O'Brien. This one tops them all.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DARING YOUNG MAN, THE: James Dunn, Mae Clarke—Fair.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DOUBTING THOMAS: Will Rogers—Poorest Rogers picture yet, but my people like Rogers. I wish Fox would make a Rogers picture like "Connecticut Yankee" or "Down to Earth."—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS: Alice Faye, James Dunn, George White—Good musical. Big improvement over last White's "Scandals."—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS: Alice Faye, James Dunn, Ned Sparks, Lyda Roberti, George White—This picture lacks something to put it over and the production certainly was no credit to Jimmy Dunn or Alice Faye, both of whom deserve better. Picture has a few high spots and is plain amateurish in others. Played to poor business and patrons' comments were few. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 23-24.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS: Alice Faye, James Dunn, Ned Sparks, Lyda Roberti, George White—A dandy musical film that was well liked by our patronage.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS: Alice Faye, James Dunn, Lyda Roberti, George White—It is big in the same old way, dancing, singing, music, fine scenery, etc. But it won't get publicity for second night showing because there is nothing to remember, nothing to impress anyone.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

HELLDORADO: Richard Arlen, Madge Evans, Ralph Bellamy—Good action program picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HELL IN THE HEAVENS: Warner Baxter, Conchita Montenegro—Only fair program picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LADIES LOVE DANGER: Gilbert Roland, Mona Barrie—Fair mystery story that did not draw for me. Better play this one on Family Night or Bank Night. Mona Barrie not liked here. Running time, seven reels. Played May 26-27.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—The best Rogers we've seen for a long time. Much better than "County Chairman" and "Judge Priest."—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—Our city is Will Rogers conscious, so we always expect and have good business when showing his pictures. "Life Begins at 40" is excellent entertainment.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—Will Rogers is a big man at my theatre. No matter if he played "The Lonesome Trail" they would come to see him.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

LITTLE COLONEL, THE: Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore, Bill Robinson—Played Saturday and Sunday to a pleased audience. Drew the best Sunday crowd we have had in 1935. Played June 22-23.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

LITTLE COLONEL, THE: Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore, Bill Robinson—I will, like all others, have to say this little brilliant star means a new life for us exhibitors. But without James Dunn she will never be at her best. Give us one more "Baby Take a Bow" with James Dunn before she grows too big.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

ONE MORE SPRING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—This one not as good as expected. Comments varied, some liked it, others didn't. I think Fox should give these two stars better material than this picture. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 6.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

ONE MORE SPRING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—I think the picture is fair. Gaynor and Baxter both have always been good at my theatre, but I do not think rugged looks and dressing in this picture added any stars to their crown.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

SPRING TONIC: Lew Ayres, Claire Trevor—Comedy offering of program class which clicked nicely on a preview showing. Running time, 58 minutes. Played June 22.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

$10 RAISE: Edward Everett Horton—Very good comedy drama.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

$10 RAISE: Edward Everett Horton, Karen Morley, Berton Churchill—Comedy offering of program caliber that pleased on a preview showing. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 8.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

$10 RAISE: Edward Everett Horton—We've seen Horton do this same kind of stuff several times before but he is so very good at it that it is always good for a laugh. Drew poorly.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

UNDER PRESSURE: Edmund Lowe, Victor McLaglen—Stars do not draw. This picture will be liked by the men. The ladies will not be interested.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

UNDER PRESSURE: Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe—A pleasing program picture that should do good on a weekend. Business okay on this one. Running time, 69 minutes. Played May 30.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN: George O'Brien—A nice action picture that pleased.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN: George O'Brien—If you are looking for bucking horses and ride 'em cowboy, see this one.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

GB Pictures

EVERGREEN: Jessie Matthews, Sonnie Hale—Very good musical. Miss Matthews a wonderful singer and clever dancer. The best English-made picture I've played.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE FRIEND: Nova Pilbeam. Matheson Lang Here is a picture that may be called great. Because it was great. There were many comments regarding this picture that it did not do well at the box office. I must say we had no trouble with that. We did very fine business and had full houses each performance and even in the afternoon. Due to the fact that this picture was the last one of the summer season we put all that we had into it. It showed results, as we planned a very careful advertising campaign. We got people behind it that were interested in that type of picture and acting, which was all English cast. Miss Pilbeam is a great little actress and may surpass Shirley Temple at our theatre soon if we play any more pictures with her. The audience just raved over her acting and splendid, clear diction. Play this picture if you can and if it is presented to your public in the right way it will go over. It would not go in a small town with many rural patrons. But for the larger towns it should do great business as it is a picture that is different from any other one. It has its own type. It weaves a beautiful story about a little English girl who is made unhappy by her father and mother quarreling. and the reaction on her. As I must say again, Miss Pilbeam can really act. Nine reels and a fine print. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 27-28.—Albert Hefferan. Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Mostly adult patronage.

LITTLE FRIEND: Nova Pilbeam, Matheson Lang—An extremely serious psychological study of the effect that the matrimonial troubles of a socially prominent British couple have on their 14-year-old daughter. Heavy. but good.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

MAN WHO KNEW TOO MUCH, THE: Peter Lorre. Nova Pilbeam—A good film. particularly distinguished because of the brilliant acting of the villain. Peter Lorre. The story is unusual and it is given excellent production. The more discriminating your patronage. the better this picture will go over. The audience response was satisfactory.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

Mascot

BEHIND THE GREEN LIGHTS: Norman Foster, Judith Allen—A fair program picture that will get by okay on Bargain Night. Pleased the majority of my patrons. Running time. 70 minutes. Played June 27—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

IN OLD SANTA FE: Ken Maynard. Evalyn Knapp—This one holds the house record for this year. Good title. good picture, first musical western I ever played. Made a mistake not running it on Sunday. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 7-8.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

MARINES ARE COMING, THE: William Haines, Esther Ralston, Conrad Nagel—Just fair. Will please the younger patrons.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MGM

BABY FACE HARRINGTON: Charles Butterworth—Good enough picture of program caliber, which we used on a preview showing with pleasing results. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 15.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BABY FACE HARRINGTON: Charles Butterworth, Una Merkel—A good program comedy which received satisfactory audience response. Personally, I prefer Butterworth as comedy relief in pictures instead of the lead, as his nit-wit type of humor loses much of its effectiveness when stretched to seven or more reels.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

CASINO MURDER CASE, THE: Paul Lukas—Fair, but Lukas does not take the Philo Vance part like William Powell can.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FLAME WITHIN, THE: Ann Harding, Herbert Marsball, Maureen O'Sullivan—A fine production wasted for the average audience because of too much dialogue.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery, Walter Huston, Madge Evans, Jimmy Durante—It was something actually different, exciting, with lots of action which seemed to suit our younger set. They came to see it so we liked it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MURDER IN THE FLEET: Jean Parker, Robert Taylor—Fair program picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald. Nelson Eddy, Frank Morgan—The absolute peak of perfection for musical pictures. Metro is to be congratulated on producing the Victor Herbert opus with such care that the finished product left nothing to be desired. The "Sweet Mystery of Life" number will have to go down in screen history as the finest bit of staging and recording to date. Did not draw as well as it justly deserved, but no fault of the picture. Too much local competition. Running time, 106 minutes. Played June 9-11.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

NO MORE LADIES: Joan Crawford, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone, Charlie Ruggles—This is a typical Joan Crawford vehicle with its sophisticated chatter, modernistic furniture, extreme clothes and Miss Crawford's terrible coiffure. The audience response was decidedly good, so I suppose that my disappointment in the picture was due to the fact that I wasn't in a sophisticated mood.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RECKLESS: Jean Harlow, William Powell, Franchot Tone, May Robson—Metro's Mammoth Musical Melodrama without Powell and Robson would have been Metro's Mammoth Musical Mistake. If Harlow can sing and dance, then I don't know my singing and dancing. Even Powell and Robson could not save this with all their splendid work. Business punk and the patrons totally unimpressed. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 2-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

RECKLESS: Jean Harlow, William Powell—Mammoth musical melodrama; two big stars, both favorites at my theatre.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

SEQUOIA: Jean Parker, Russell Hardie—Step out on this one and watch the payees come in. Should click in any situation and it will please as nearly 100 per cent as any picture you are likely to find. More favorable comments from our patrons than we have heard in a long time and the box office did nicely, too. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 21-22.—M. R. Harrington. Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SEQUOIA: Jean Parker, Russell Hardie—A beautiful and unusual film which meant little as a box office attraction.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

SOCIETY DOCTOR: Chester Morris, Virginia Bruce—Extra good program picture, I thought, but it did not draw expenses, due to lack of star name value, I think.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SOCIETY DOCTOR: Chester Morris, Virginia Bruce—This splendidly produced and well acted program picture more than pleased our patronage. Robert Taylor and Virginia Bruce are beginning to mean something at the box office. They make a fine team.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

VIVA VILLA: Wallace Beery, Fay Wray—A good show but too old. Didn't do business. Played it on a holiday. Everybody went to the big city. Opinion divided. Ladies didn't like it. Don't lose any sleep if you haven't played this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan—Good airplane picture. Very much like "Devil Dogs of the Air."—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young, Lewis Stone—Our patrons like air pictures and so this proved to be splendid entertainment which drew well and pleased generally. However, I do not believe it as well produced as Warner's "Devil Dogs" and the story is full of inconsistencies, but all in all it more than filled the bill for a weekend showing. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 7-8.—M. R.

Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young—A very fine production with the usual thrills and romance that pleases the customers and brings out the kids. Running time, 88 minutes. Played June 14-16.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

Monogram

FLIRTING WITH DANGER: Robert Armstrong, William Cagney—An average program picture which went over nicely on a double bill with "It Happened One Night."—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

GIRL 'O MY DREAMS: Mary Carlisle, Creighton Chaney, Eddie Nugent, Arthur Lake, Sterling Holloway—A good program picture. Pleased my patrons. Arthur Lake very good. So is Holloway. Running time, eight reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER, THE: Norman Foster, Charlotte Henry—O. K. for them as likes this sort of thing. But our patrons proved that they do not consider this type of picture their idea of entertainment. And what a licking the box office took. And why must the producers change the stories so much that even a Philadelphia lawyer cannot figure out the resemblance to the original classic. Business punk and audience reaction only mildly favorable. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HOOSIER SCHOOLMASTER, THE: Norman Foster, Charlotte Henry—A good picture that should please all classes. Well directed and well acted. My business wasn't quite good as expected but it was no fault of the picture. Date this one and get behind it with the proper advertising and I think it will get results at the box office. This is an excellent picture to tie in with the P. T. A., American Legion or what have you. Running time, 76 minutes. Played June 2-3.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

LOST IN THE STRATOSPHERE: June Collyer, William Cagney, Edward Nugent—Not as good as expected but still it's a pretty good programmer. Running time, seven reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

'NEATH ARIZONA SKIES: John Wayne, Sheila Terry—Only a fair western. The story was all right and so was John Wayne, but the production was cheap as could be. Drew poorly. Unless others prove better than this one we are going to be sorry we bought this group of westerns.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SING SING NIGHTS: Conway Tearle, Mary Doran—Only fair.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

TRAIL BEYOND, THE: John Wayne, Noah Beery, Jr.—After seeing some of the reports on this one, I was afraid of it. However, it drew very well and all of my western fans seemed pleased with it. When they walk out and tell you it was darned good picture, well, that's 'nuff said. Personally, I think the direction could have been better. Running time, 55 minutes. Played June 22.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

CAR 99: Fred MacMurray, Ann Sheridan—This is the kind of picture the small town needs more of. Good action melodrama, well acted and well put on. Drew good Friday-Saturday business and gave excellent satisfaction.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West—The first time this star has held forth in this town. Picture neither pulled nor pleased as anticipated and the comments from patrons were a darned sight better than the feature. Personally, I thought this the best since "She Done Him Wrong," but even so it cannot come up to that sensation. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 16-17.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West, Paul Cavanagh—A very smart and attractive piece of entertainment which did a remarkable increase at B. O. Everyone liked Mae in this one. Running time, 71 minutes. Played June 23-25.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

MISSISSIPPI: Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Joan Bennett—Bing draws at my theatre, but he is still playing the same old role over and over. His songs are slow and draggie. Fields in this one is sure the best character actor in the bunch. He gets the laughs. All in all I give it a big hand because it is old Mississippi. Running time. 90 minutes.—Geo. W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

ONCE IN A BLUE MOON: Jimmy Savo—The poorest thing on the screen. If I ever get one of those Hecht and MacArthur brainstorms that is worth a continental dam, I am going to celebrate. Pass it up or you will wish you had. These kind of things is just why we have a hard time keeping people interested in motion pictures. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 19.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIVATE WORLDS: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett, Joel McCrea—A splendid novel, deftly transferred to the screen and losing nothing in the process, rather gaining a great deal, due to splendid casting and direction. You can promise your patrons something different and deliver it. While the background of a psychopathic hospital may not be their idea of entertainment, so sympathetically is this done that it cannot fail to please. Business fine and audience reaction great. Running time, 82 minutes. Played June 12-13.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SHE DONE HIM WRONG: Mae West—We spot booked this one. Many came to see her again. We gave the first hundred men her autographed picture. Our farmer friends were pleased. It's still her best picture. Even if it is old it seemed to improve with age.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

STOLEN HARMONY: George Raft, Ben Bernie, Grace Bradley—A concoction of melody and gangsters that pleased the weekend faithful; well-directed and produced. Better than average business. Running time, 75 minutes. Played June 20-22.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

WAGON WHEELS: Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick Not as good as most Paramount westerns.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

WINGS IN THE DARK: Myrna Loy, Cary Grant—One of the best Friday-Saturday pictures we've had in a long time. Good business. Use it and boost it.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BACHELOR BAIT: Stuart Erwin, Rochelle Hudson, Pert Kelton—This program comedy pleased on a double bill.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

DOG OF FLANDERS, A: Frankie Thomas, O. P. Heggie, Helen Parrish—A very good program picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DOG OF FLANDERS: Frankie Thomas, Helen Parrish—This is just the picture for small towns. The acting is great, the story is well known and the cast no great stars but just good clean entertainment. Did above average business. Running time, 67 minutes. Played June 17-18.—Harry Newman, Liberty Theatre, Lynden, Wash. Small town patronage.

LADDIE: John Beal, Gloria Stuart—Very good work by the leads. Credit should be given to Virginia Weidler.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

LADDIE: John Beal, Gloria Stuart, Virginia Weidler—This picture is almost on a par with "Little Women." If "Little Women" clicked for you, this will, too. Personally, I can't praise it enough. My folks liked it and it held up nicely for three days. Virginia Weidler captured everybody's heart and already I'm being asked "When will you have 'Little Sister' again?"—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

LADDIE: John Beal, Gloria Stuart—Personally I think this is Gene Stratton Porter's best story. The picture is well acted and is down to earth entertainment. It should please anywhere. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 16-17.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE MINISTER, THE: Katharine Hepburn, John Beal—The opinions on this film were divided. Some patrons thought it splendid, while others regarded it as slow and dull. It is well produced.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

ROBERTA: Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Good musical, but not as good as "The Gay Divorcee."—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROBERTA: Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Randolph Scott—Excellent. Everyone in the cast is wonderful. One of the best musicals made so far. Irene Dunne's singing very good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ROBERTA: Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—It has got the publicity already and now all you have to do is play it and put the cash in your bank. 'Nuf said.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

ROMANCE IN MANHATTAN: Francis Lederer, Ginger Rogers—We did not like the picture. Ran it one night and sent it back. I am expressing my way of thinking. Maybe you may think different when it comes your time to play it.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: William Powell, Ginger Rogers—This one drew fairly well and pleased. I don't think an exhibitor will make a mistake in playing this one. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 23-24.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

WE'RE RICH AGAIN: Marian Nixon, Joan Marsh, Edna May Oliver, Reginald Denny—Played on a double bill to good audience response. An average program picture.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

WEST OF THE PECOS: Richard Dix, Martha Sleeper—Seemed like a good western to me but didn't make expenses on it. Dix is all washed up here for some reason. Played June 18-19.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

WEST OF THE PECOS: Richard Dix, Martha Sleeper—An unusually good Zane Grey western, but business was way below average. Running time, 59 minutes. Played June 15.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

State Rights

LAW OF THE WEST: Bob Steele—A good western. Sound good. Picture bright on screen. Bob Steele is always liked here. Running time, five and a half reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERN JUSTICE: Bob Steele—A western with a good bit of action, but not much story attached to it. However, my western fans seemed to be pleased and after all that is what counts. Running time, 58 minutes. Played May 24.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

CARDINAL RICHELIEU: George Arliss, Edward Arnold, Maureen O'Sullivan—A wonderful production for the classes. Arliss is great in role of Richelieu.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CLIVE OF INDIA: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—Very good drama. Perfect acting by everyone.—Leon C. Balduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FOLIES BERGERE: Maurice Chevalier, Ann Sothern, Merle Oberon—Good music! Good acting! Good production!—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

KID MILLIONS: Eddie Cantor, Ann Sothern, Ethel Merman, Block and Sully—Very good comedy that did well at the box office.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LES MISERABLES: Fredric March. Charles Laughton—The title and author meant very little to our patrons and they thought it just another costume picture. Drew better than anticipated, but comments were varied. Personally, I believe this one of the finest of the season's productions, but not for small town showing. Running time, 100 minutes. Played June 14-15.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LES MISERABLES: Fredric March, Charles Laughton, Rochelle Hudson—Perfection itself. It is absolutely impossible to find a single flaw in this production. Real entertainment, but heavy.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

LET 'EM HAVE IT: Richard Arlen, Virginia Bruce, Alice Brady—Good picture of its kind. Running time, 95 minutes.—J. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MIGHTY BARNUM, THE: Wallace Beery, Adolphe Menjou, Janet Beecher, Virginia Bruce—A good picture that didn't draw.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SCARLET PIMPERNEL, THE: Leslie Howard, Merle Oberon—A wonderful production which pleased everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WEDDING NIGHT, THE: Anna Sten, Gary Cooper—A very fine picture. but no drawing card.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WE LIVE AGAIN: Gary Cooper, Anna Sten—Good program picture, but too heavy for these small towns. Did not go over very well. Running time, 83 minutes.—P. G. Held. New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

CRIMSON TRAIL, THE: Buck Jones—Fair Buck Jones picture. His pictures seem to be getting poorer.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Rochelle Hudson, Louise Beavers—A wonderful picture that almost fell flat at box office.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED IN NEW YORK: Lyle Talbot, Gertrude Michael, Heather Angel—Fine little program picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

IT HAPPENED IN NEW YORK: Lyle Talbot, Heather Angel—Better than expected. Okay.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

MYSTERY OF EDWIN DROOD: Claude Rains, Douglass Montgomery—A very good picture. Really worth showing anywhere, any time. Running time, nine reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town and rural patronage.

NOTORIOUS GENTLEMAN, A: Charles Bickford, Helen Vinson—Just another program picture which created no excitement and is already forgotten. Fair entertainment to satisfactory audience response on a double bill.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

ONE EXCITING ADVENTURE: Binnie Barnes, Neil Hamilton, Paul Cavanagh—This is what I call entertainment. A real picture. Played June 20.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

PRINCESS O'HARA: Jean Parker, Chester Morris—Pretty good program picture.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

STONE OF SILVER CREEK: Buck Jones, Noel Francis—They like Buck in our town. So do we because they turn out to see him. A very good western picture for western fans.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Warner

DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—Very good. Will please the younger element more than the older folks.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DINKY: Jackie Cooper, Mary Astor—A grand little picture. Did 10 times the average child business and a great increase in adult admissions. Everyone liked it very much. Running time, 65 minutes. Played June 14-15.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

NIGHT AT THE RITZ, A: William Gargan, Patricia Ellis—Not so hot. Good business first night, terrible flop second night. Cheap, chattery and non-interesting. Running time, 62 minutes. Played June 12-13.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

OIL FOR THE LAMPS OF CHINA: Pat O'Brien, Josephine Hutchinson, Jean Muir—Warner Bros. have done themselves proud in this one. A strong B. O. attraction which pleases. The word-of-mouth on this one is great. Running time, 105 minutes. Played June 16-18.—E. J. McClurg, Grand Theatre, Preston, Idaho. Rural and small town patronage.

PUBLIC ENEMY: Jean Harlow, James Cagney—A splendid picture which Warners have widely reissued. It went over big with our patronage and benefited from good advance word-of-mouth by people who saw it when it was first released.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

RIGHT TO LIVE, THE: George Brent, Josephine Hutchinson, Colin Clive, Peggy Wood—Very good drama. The ladies will like it. Wonderful acting by whole cast.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RIGHT TO LIVE, THE: George Brent, Josephine Hutchinson, Colin Clive—It is full of interest; a tear drop, dramatic, love picture. Running time, 66 minutes.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

SMART MONEY: Edward G. Robinson—Another good reissue which our patrons enjoyed. Racy and well acted. The only complaint against the picture is the fact that the women's styles are out of date, but this defect is not glaring enough to seriously detract from the entertaining qualities of the film.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

ST. LOUIS KID, THE: James Cagney, Patricia Ellis, Allen Jenkins—All I can say, just bosh. Take your medicine, Mr. Exhibitor, and call it another make-believe picture, which means nothing at the box office. When you play this one, put on two shorts and call it a day. Running time, 67 minutes.—George W. Odom & Sons, Dixie Theatre, Durant, Miss. General patronage.

Short Features

Celebrity

ALADDIN AND HIS LAMP: Comi-Color Cartoon Series—Pretty good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

JACK FROST: Comi-Color Cartoon—Good little comedy.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Columbia

GRADUATION EXERCISES: Scrappy Cartoon—Very good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

I'M A FATHER: Broadway Comedies—This one kept my audience in a continuous roar. Enuff said. Running time, 20 minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

KRAZY KAT KARTOONS: No. 7—Pretty good cartoon.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAKE BELIEVE REVUE, THE: Color Rhapsodies—I have played several of these color cartoons and they are not as good as the black and white cartoons. All color and no laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

RESTLESS KNIGHTS: Broadway Comedies—This one not as good as previous comedies by this trio. Running time, 17 minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 1—Not much to this one. It seems as if these snapshots do not go over very well.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SPICE OF LIFE: These one-reel subjects are a good filler and bring a few laughs. Running time, 10 minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

Educational

AN EAR FOR MUSIC: Coronet Comedies—Tom Howard decides to quit house painting to compose music. So he "composes" a tune strangely reminiscent of "Swanee River" and tries to sell it to a radio program. This is a really clever and fairly funny comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

FIRST SNOW, THE: Terry-Toon—Good little cartoon.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HAIL BROTHER: Musical Comedies—Very poor musical. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

JACK'S SHACK: Terry-Toon—Good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MAD HOUSE, A: Terry-Toons—A very well done cartoon. Pleased everybody. Running time, six minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Mostly adult patronage.

OLD DOG TRAY: Terry-Toons—This is an average cartoon. Running time, six minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

ONE-RUN ELMER: Star Personality Comedies—Hooray for Keaton. Here is a comedy that is a comedy. Play this and give your audience a real treat. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TARS AND STRIPES: Buster Keaton—The swell shots of the naval training station make this one worth while, although the comedy is below Buster's previous two-reelers. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

WAY DOWN YONDER: Song Hit Stories—Very good. Singing by Negro children enjoyed very much.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Fox

ADVENTURES OF THE NEWSREEL CAMERAMAN: We have yet to play one of these that didn't please everyone. They have everything.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FOX NEWS: No. 73.—It seems that the Fox News gets better and better each time we play one. It is far the best newsreel on the market. Everybody likes it that goes to the Owl Theatre. Running time, 11 minutes.—Albert Hefferan, Owl Theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich. Mostly adult patronage.

FOX NEWS: We get our News too old. Don't like it. Too many interviews. Pictures bore this restless generation when they have to listen to speeches. Hope Fox gets to realize this.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MGM

DISCONTENTED CANARY, THE: Happy Harmonies—Color cartoon that pleased. Running time, eight minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

FINE FEATHERS: Oddities—This shows beautiful birds in their natural colors and it is extremely interesting. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

GOOFY MOVIES: No excuse for this sort of thing. Our patrons have actually registered complaints and asked that we show no more of them. That has never happened before—so you know they must be pretty punk fare. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MAMA'S LITTLE PIRATE: Our Gang—The poorest Our Gang that we've had this year. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT PATROL: Laurel and Hardy—They always take, but this picture wasn't up to their standard. But still had plenty of laughs.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre. Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MIKE FRIGHT: Our Gang—Greatest laugh getter we have run in many a blue moon. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SOMETHING SIMPLE: Charley Chase—Average comedy. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SOMETHING SIMPLE: Charley Chase—Just fairly good. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SPECTACLE MAKER, THE: Musical Revues—Technicolor musical that failed to click with our patrons. Running time, 20 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

TIT FOR TAT: Laurel and Hardy—Not a good laugh in the whole two reels. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

TREASURE BLUES: Todd-Kelly—Below the average for this pair of mirthmakers, although there are numerous laughs in this one. Running time, two reels.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

TULIP TIME IN HOLLAND: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Colored travel which caused much favorable comment. Running time, 10 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WILLIE WHOPPER CARTOONS: Worst I ever saw or played.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOU SAID A HATFUL. Charley Chase—Not the best or the worst this star has made. Running time, 18 minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

BEWARE OF BARNACLE BILL: Popeye the Sailor—Extra good Popeye. Running time, six minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 10—An outstanding number in this series with scenes aboard a transatlantic liner and showing lilies in their natural color. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SHORTY ON THE FARM: Paramount Varieties—Our folks like these reels showing the clever antics of a monkey. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

EVERYTHING'S DUCKY: Clark and McCullough—A fair comedy that brought a few laughs. Running time, 21 minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERYTHING'S DUCKY: Clark & McCullough Series—It's a disgrace to call this atrocity a comedy. Even children will give this the raspberry.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

HORSE HEIR: Chick Chandler Comedy—Good slapstick comedy.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

JAPANESE LANTERN: Rainbow Parade Cartoon—Good color cartoon.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LION TAMER, THE: Amos 'n' Andy Cartoons—A good cartoon featuring Amos and Andy. Running time, nine minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

PATHE TOPICS: Only fair. I used this one as a filler with a two-reel comedy. Running time, one reel.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

SENTINEL LOUIE: Little King Series—Terrible. The animation is poor and it has no novelty.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

SPIRIT OF 1976: Walter King, Betty Grable—Very good two-reel musical. Very clever.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THIS BAND AGE: Headliner Series—This is one of the best musical two-reelers I have run. Features Tel Fio Rito and Orchestra and there is plenty of comedy and music in this one. Several stayed and saw it twice. Running time, 21 minutes.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

CHINA SHOP, THE: Silly Symphony Series—I consider this only a fair cartoon comedy. Not worth rental asked for it. Running time, eight minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NIGHT BEFORE CHRISTMAS, THE: Silly Symphony—These Silly Symphonies are okay, but not worth difference in rental United Artists asks for them.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TORTOISE AND THE HARE, THE: Silly Symphonies—Clever cartoon of the Silly Symphony series which deserves to be ranked with "Three Little Pigs." Running time, nine minutes.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Universal

DEMI TASSE: Doane Musical No. 1—One of the best two-reel musicals we have played. If the rest of them are as good as this, I think we'll play all of them.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HILL BILLY: Oswald Cartoon—A good cartoon comedy.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

UNIVERSAL MENTONES: We like these Mentone two-reelers. They seem to take well in our situations.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Vitaphone

BROADWAY BREVITIES: Warners sure know their musicals. Like them as well as some features. Never miss playing them.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Serial

Universal

TAILSPIN TOMMY: Maurice Murphy, Noah Beery, Jr.—I have played through the eleventh chapter and I can say that this chapter play has held up and kept the interest better than any serial I have ever run. The kids are wild about it and the grown-ups like it, too.—Chas. Nelson, Fay Theatre, Jasper, Fla. Small town and rural patronage.

Cullman Confers with RFC Officials on Loan

Howard S. Cullman, trustee of the Roxy theatre in New York, is to confer in Washington this week with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in connection with the application of the Roxy Theatres Corporation for a loan of $750,000 to reorganize the corporation. The RFC has been studying the application for several weeks and it is understood a decision will be reached within the next two weeks.

Smith, Ayer Acquire Play

Robinson Smith and Frederick W. Ayer have acquired Robert Raynold's play, "The Ugly Runts," for Broadway production next season. It will be the second on their program. Announcement of the first production will be made when the two leading parts have been cast.

Rubenfeld Eastward on Honeymoon

Mac M. Rubenfeld, Seattle sales representative for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will leave for New York over the weekend after his marriage to Miss E. Blatt, office manager of the same Metro office.

RKO Theatres Cuts Loss

Keith Memorial Theatre Corporation, Boston, RKO subsidiary, has reported net loss of $149,392 for the year 1934. The loss compares with a loss of $209,225 for 1933.

Commonwealth Takes Interest in Kansas House

The Commonwealth Theatres Corporation has acquired an interest in the Dreamland theatre, at Herington, Kan., operated by C. L. McVey. Clarence Schultz of Kansas City is president of Commonwealth, which operates houses in Kansas, Missouri and Iowa. Mr. McVey sold film, as a salesman for Vitagraph, to Mr. Schultz in 1914, when the latter was an exhibitor in Minnesota. Mr. McVey will continue to manage the theatre. The house is being remodeled, a cooling plant being included.

Groups Discussing Writer-Producer Code

Committees from the Writers' Branch and the Producers' Branch of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in Hollywood are meeting to revise and extend the Academy Writer-Producer Code. It was decided initially that no statements would be issued until a joint report is prepared by both committees.

Colin Here for Pirandello

Saul C. Colin, fiction writer and authority on D. H. Lawrence and Pirandello, winner of the 1934 Nobel Prize, has arrived in New York on the Normandie to negotiate pending deals for the Italian dramatist, who is due in this country later this month.

Prior to becoming Pirandello's manager, translator and collaborator, Mr. Colin was prominent in the French motion picture field. He was co-owner of "Raspail 216," a class theatre in Paris and was associated with RKO in France as assistant general manager and later with Paramount's Joinville studio as scenario and casting executive.

Lynch to Europe

S. A. Lynch, pioneer theatre circuit operator in the south, and for the past two years chairman of the Paramount trustees' advisory committee for the reorganization of subsidiaries of the former bankrupt, sailed for Europe last week.

When he returns, in about two weeks, it is expected that his new duties and title as a Paramount executive will be determined. John E. Otterson, president, has asked Mr. Lynch to remain with the company.

Stevenson Lecture Course

Edward F. Stevenson, who has been lecturing on publicity and public relations, chiefly on the motion picture business, will conduct a summer course in the extension divisions of both Stevens Institute and New York University in the evening periods beginning the week of July 15.

To File Stock Holdings

Stockholders of the Jenkins Television Corporation have been notified from Wilmington, Del., to file proof of their stock ownership, properly verified, with Clifton Edwards and John Biggs, Jr., receivers, on or before August 15. Stock certificates must accompany proof of claim.

Cook, Silent Star, Dies

Al Cook, star of the silent motion picture, died in Santa Monica, Cal., last week after an illness of one year. He was 53.

WABASH AVENUE

CHICAGO

TO all who wisecrack about Cicero, Illinois, as the shootin'est town on earth, Walter Babitz, who owns the Grand theatre there and returned this week from a vacation in Denver and thereabouts is telling the story of his sidetrip to Cody, Wyoming, where he spent an average lifetime on Independence Day. Into the hotel dining room trooped some seventy cowboys and cowgals with six-shooters blazing and bottles flowing. Bullets flicked plaster into the soup, lighting fixtures did target duty, the Old West rode again, and not a camera on the set. Asked what it was all about, the hotel keeper informed that among those present and firing were all the town officials and their ladies, and that on the morrow they'd come in and pay off and that would be that until the next Fourth of July or similarly suitable occasion. Babitz escaped without a scratch.

Plunkett in Group To Operate Astor

The Astor theatre on Broadway, for a long period a two-a-day theatre for MGM, and more recently operated by Walter Reade, was taken over last week by a syndicate composed of Joseph Plunkett, former vice-president and general manager of the RKO circuit; Sherman S. Krellberg, president of Amusement Securities Corporation, and Myron Robinson, former treasurer of Keith-Albee-Orpheum.

The syndicate plans the Astor as the first of a group of first runs to be acquired later. They will reopen the Astor, August 1, with a two-a-day policy and an admission top of $2.

Krellberg and Fitzsimons, attorneys, represented the syndicate, and Saypol and Kotler represented the receivers for the Astor, who are John J. Dietz and William B. F. Drew.

Plan Calls for Center as Extended Run Film House

Under a plan instigated by Radio City, the Center theatre, sister, and smaller house to the Music Hall on Sixth avenue in New York, would begin a policy of extended run motion pictures on September 1. Bookings would be selected from the product bought by the Music Hall. It is understood Sidney Kent, Fox president, is fostering present consideration of the plan. It is believed he refused to close a deal for Fox product at the Music Hall next season without some assurance the product would be played, and suggested the Center theatre idea in consequence.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

LEARNING FAST

Two things stand out in the winning by John Armstrong of the Quigley Silver Plaque for June: One is that the advertising director of Paramount's London Theatres is the first foreign showman to be voted a Quigley Award; the second, even more significant, is that his campaign on "Bengal Lancer" compares favorably with the best efforts on this side—over here where exploitation was born.

Armstrong's entry might well be used as a measure to indicate the progress made by overseas theatremen in mastering the art of profitable box office bally.

WHY SCUTTLE THE SHIP?

It happens in the same way every year when with the first real siege of hot weather, a lot of exhibitors who really should know better begin the annual business of strangling their managers by cutting down to the bone on ad budgets. These old ears already are weary with tales of bewildered theatremen who tell of being ordered to chop down to a bare minimum, mailing lists, newspapers, art work and posting over the summer.

Heavens alive, gentlemen, let's be reasonable about this thing. Say, if you wish, that all advertising in the world won't get the folks in when cool beaches and woods beckon, when all outdoors offers refuge from the heat.

Okay. We agree, but only up to a certain point. True enough the summer opposition is no pushover. But don't forget this—the resort and outdoors amusement people are advertising hard and heavy, day in and day out with every conceivable weapon. They spend dough to get their share of the grosses and more where easily frightened exhibitors sit on the bankroll and refuse to give battle.

Yes, we know that every manager isn't the best judge of how much to spend for what and when. And we also know there are smart operators who may be justified in halting advertising expenditures in spots for one reason or another. But these findings are not the complete answers to all situations.

Heat or blizzard, folks go to picture shows and beaches in profitable numbers because they are continuously being sold on these entertainments through effective publicity devices. When the advertising stops, so does business.

Trimming sail around the theatre to meet the disturbances of weather conditions is of course to be expected, but ruthless slashing of advertising budgets in the hope of saving a few dollars is too much like scuttling a ship to save wharfage charges.

JUST A DREAM

Finally got around to see "Les Miserables" and that night had a terrible dream. It seems we were on the galley ship and recognized hundreds and hundreds of Round Tablers, in chains, who were trying to row and take pictures, at the same time, of Fred March and Charley Laughton for the local papers.

Approaching a guard we inquired of what awful crime the boys were guilty. He paled and leaned close as with bated breath he whispered:

"Convicted of asking for a day off each week and vacations with pay."

Suddenly the hardened wretches began to chant: "a day off each week, a vacation with pay." The guards flew amongst them belaboring the convicts amid heartrending shrieks and howls.

Imagine our horror. We turned to run. We ran madly, tripped over a bonus drive—and fell out of bed.

OFF THE RECORD STUFF

To That Supervisor
Who Was Bawling Out
The Manager—And How

Beg yoh pahdon, sir, but we really could not help overhearing. You did raise your voice and what you told that poor manager was sinful, no less. And for what? Because he endeavored to show some initiative by putting over, without consulting you, a gag that required immediate action.

Supposing the stunt was not so hot. The boy was only guilty of trying and you can't shoot a man for that. Why turn down the lad's dauber and kill his pep by such loudspeaker castigation. That pays no dividends, kind sir.

Speak softly. Live and let live, friend. You'd probably be surprised to know how many theatre executives get excellent results by being considerate of their managers. Try it sometime.

Newhall Puts Over Baby Popularity Contest

With leading photographer in town tying in, Allen B. Newhall, Babcock Theatre, Wellsville, N. Y., recently put over a successful baby popularity contest. Photographer took pictures of entries and prepared display for lobby, offering large photo of winner as one of the prizes. Furniture store donated newest type baby carriage, another store a crib, and fourth prize was engraved silver baby cup donated by jeweler.

Contest ran three weeks, and Newhall used special trailer in which participating merchants were credited. Standing of contestants was posted daily and each admission entitled holder to one vote.

THE following eight pages are devoted to the nationwide activities of Warner Brothers' Theatres, the second group to appear in the series of Round Table Special Guest Sections. Among the features are articles by Joseph Bernhard, Mort Blumenstock, photos of zone managers and zone publicists, the latter also contributing details of recent outstanding campaigns put over in their respective sectors. The exploitation accomplishments of the Warnerites are regularly reported in these pages and the material presented herewith, selected by Mort Blumenstock, is in keeping with the high standard of the Guest Sections, effectively inaugurated by Loew's Theatres, in the June 29 issue. Another Guest Section will follow shortly.

BILL ROBINSON

Black's Tap Dancer Lobby Stunt

Hoofers on Lobby Stage Plug "Hooray for Love"

With that very spacious lobby at Loew's Poli, New Haven, Harry Black has room to spread himself on various advance gags, latest of which had to do with "Hooray for Love." Bill Robinson, the ace tapper, does his stuff in that picture, so Harry tied in with a local colored team (see photo) to give some animation to the buildup.

On a specially erected stage, which serves for different displays, one of the boys tapped a la Robinson while the other played and sang. Phonograph records of the hit tunes alternated with the dancer, and entire lobby was used to plug the date.

Same setting with a different background was used for a lobby fashion show on "No More Ladies," tieup made with local store for models who wore swim suits and other appropriate summer togs. Gals paraded to music from concealed phonograph.

Eddie offers guest tickets to those cutting out the theatre's ads from daily and pasting correct titles next to playdates most artistically in spaces provided.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"

Ross Chain - Letters Patrons on "Bill"

Taking advantage of the chain letter craze, Jack Ross, Orpheum, Lansing, Mich., on "Broadway Bill" distributed "guaranteed amusement club" letters to school, department stores, etc., with picture plug asking each recipient to join the club and mail copies of the letter to five friends.

Jack also tied up with current horse show with announcement over their loudspeaker "if you like horses, don't miss," etc., etc.

ARMSTRONG, SHANNON VOTED JUNE HONORS

British Theatreman Awarded Quigley Silver Plaque; Pittsburgh Manager Wins Bronze

by A-MIKE VOGEL

For the first time in the history of the Quigley Awards, the votes of the judges send a Quigley Plaque overseas. John Armstrong, Paramount London Theatres advertising director, wins the June Silver for his masterly campaign on "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" at the Carlton Theatre.

Finishing right behind Armstrong, and finishing strongly, too, Manager Chuck Shannon, of Warner Brothers' Hollywood Theatre, Pittsburgh, of Harry Kalmine's zone, in the district supervised by C. J. Latta, is awarded the June Bronze for his excellent exploitation on "Marietta."

Another overseas Round Tabler also lands in the winning column for June, with Manager Rene Lebreton, Paramount Theatre, France, taking down a well-deserved First Mention on "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Other showmen who also were awarded this classification are: Ed Hart, City Manager, Reade Theatres, Plainfield, N. J., on "Goin' to Town," at the Oxford, and Manager George Nealeans, Alabama, Birmingham, Ala., who did a bangup job on the short "The Band Concert." Nealeans' entry puts him in the Mention column for the first time. Hart is a 1934 plaque winner.

Honorable Mentions for June go to 11 entrants, including those new to the Awards competitions, those who have not before landed and others who previously have taken down Quigley recognitions. Charley Bassin, George Baker and Adolfo Caruso are first-timers, with the rest having cracked at one time or another for Mentions.

Armstrong Determined

The success of John Armstrong might be stressed as a lesson in determination. Previously, this theatreman had won Honorable Mentions in January and February and a First Mention in December, 1934, but evidently not satisfied with these honors, John kept at it until he clicked in June for the Big Prize. He now is the first showman in any other country but the United States to win a Quigley Plaque.

Chuck Shannon's recognition illustrates the flexibility of the Awards Competitions, which are open to every theatreman, everywhere, regardless of his situation. Shannon's house, a neighborhood, is open only on Fridays and Saturdays, but his campaign shows clearly that this handicap was no obstacle in gaining his prize.

A last moment switch in the judges found Irving Lesser, managing director, Roxy Theatre, New York, serving in the place of Louis Frisch, of the Randforce Circuit, New York, Mr. Frisch being unable to serve on the June Committee. He has requested appointment at another time. The other two judges, as announced, were A. W. Smith, Jr., vice-president, Warner Brothers Pictures, and A. P. Waxman, advertising director, Gaumont British.

First Mention

Ed Hart, City Manager, Oxford, Plainfield, N. J. "Goin' to Town"
Rene Lebreton, Manager, Paramount, Paris, France. "Bengal Lancer"
George Nealeans, Manager, Alabama, Birmingham, Ala. "Band Concert"

Honorable Mention

THE STUDIO INSPIRATION

by JOSEPH BERNHARD

General Manager, Warner Bros. Theatres

I believe that theatre advertising must take its inspiration from the studios where motion pictures are made.

Advertising in our business must forget the old traditions founded in the circus and carnival and meet the increasing sophistication of the present young generation. As for the current adult group, the inducements we offer to furnish entertainment must be colored in the language of today and expressed in the spirit of the times in the same way the studios are constantly reaching for new levels of intelligence in all departments of production.

JOSEPH BERNHARD

There never was a period in our business which saw more imagination and skill in motion picture making. We are at fault if we do not match the effort in every form of exhibition, chiefly expressing ourselves in skillful advertising.

To emphasize how far the intellectual barometer has gone up, we now have William Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" staged for the screen by Max Reinhardt. In this, Warner Brothers expressed the venturesome spirit typical of the times and gave a challenge to the advertising men of this business that their sales talk be as good as their merchandise.

We ask our men in the field to reject the flimsy and futile, and in the same cause we try to make attractive rewards for ingenuity and good judgment.

I am proud of our men who made it possible for the Warner Bros. theatre organization to affirm what I have said by winning such an outstanding number of Quigley awards in the past year.

Who's Who With the Warner Zone Heads

Harry L. Charnas, of the Warner Theatres operating chieftains pictured on these two pages, is Managing Director of the Broadway and Brooklyn Strand Theatres, and is credited with many innovations in deluxe showbusiness.

Herbert L. Copelan, youngest Zone Manager on the Warner circuit, is in charge of the Atlantic City boardwalk theatres and those in Pleasantville, New Jersey. Though young in years, Copelan has had lots of experience and is well known on the Jersey coast.

James E. Coston is Zone Manager for the Illinois and Milwaukee houses, with headquarters in Chicago and Milwaukee and a long-time operator in that section. Among his recent accomplishments is the opening of the new Beverly Theatre in Chicago, one of the most modern in the midwest city.

L. J. Halper, West Coast Zone Manager, oversees the operation of 12 western houses. With headquarters in Hollywood, Halper has the longest tour of duty of any of the Warnerites, taking in a 1600 mile radius from Los Angeles, Cal., to Walla Walla, Washington.

I. J. Hoffman is the Zone Manager of the 40 Warner theatres in the New England states, many of which "I. J." founded before these houses became part of the Warner Brothers national circuit.

Don Jacocks, Zone Manager for the State of New Jersey, operates 45 theatres with his headquarters in Newark. Jacocks is well known on both coasts, coming to Warners from an important executive position with the Fox West Coast circuit.

Harry Kalmine is Zone Manager of the 40 theatres in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, making his headquarters in Pittsburgh. Kalmine has served in various capacities for Warner Brothers' Theatres over a term of years.

Byron F. (Dinty) Moore is Zone Manager for the St. Louis houses and a well known showman in many parts of the United States. Dinty is also distinguished for being the one-time personal manager of Red Grange, the famous former Illinois football star.

John J. Payette, Zone Manager for the theatres in the Washington, D. C., sector, is in charge of 14 first run and neighborhood houses in the Capital City, the states of West Virginia and Maryland.

Ted Schlanger is the Circuit Head of all the theatres in the Philadelphia Zone, overseeing the operations of the many Warner theatres in that territory directly supervised by four zone managers. He makes his headquarters in Philadelphia.

Leonard Schlesinger is one of the Zone Managers in the Philadelphia territory, in charge of various key points and neighborhood theatres, under the supervision of Ted Schlanger.

LO, THE SNAKE CHARMER

by MORT BLUMENSTOCK

Assistant to Joseph Bernhard,
In Charge of Advertising and Publicity

I REALLY shouldn't be permitted to judge on the Quigley awards because my complete admiration for ballyhoo isn't in this country but in India: land of the snake charmer. There is too much exhaustive effort in the American style.

I would vote a Quigley award to the first and original Indian snake charmer. To me, he embodies all the copybook elements of superb showmanship. He is seemingly effortless; he puts on a good show, and he collects money. Well, look at it my way and you'll know why he deserves some sort of a prize: he sits all day, makes funny noises with a pipe, and gets paid for it!

MORT BLUMENSTOCK

Of course, in my years of press-agentry I've seen some swell sitters, also some boys who could make funny noises; but fellows who could do both and still put on a good show were very few. Artists should be recognized and encouraged even in what Hollywood sneeringly calls the commercial end of the business.

For a time the late lamented N.R.A. operated like New York State's Sullivan Act on Concealed Weapons, and it was all dandy for the "sitting type" of ballyhoo boy. The code was a welcome manacle on activity, until a sullen mutter started here and there from certain employers who asked their lads unpatriotic questions such as: "How do you guys spend your sleeping time?" Because it became very clear to those poor unfortunate employers that their boys spent their sleeping time in the office and their "awake time" (if you want to call it that) out in the open having fun.

This of course is not intended as a picture of the entire craft of which I happen to be a member. But in a review of this sort it seems there should be a little historical reference, and I merely touched on that as a heretofore unheard-of phase in our industry and a type of person who will never again be found on the rolls of our honored guild. So much has been said about the good boys I just had to take a slap at the bad boys, en passant.

Seriously, in the pages which follow you will read of the many activities of the men in my department. . . . Since it represents many hours and days and weeks of hard work and compiling, it became so serious a task for A-Mike Vogel, I decided that if my department could produce such a profound effect on a hardboiled exploitation editor, I was entitled to be gay.

I have no formulas to offer for advertising that haven't been written with sweat on the pages that follow.

Who's Who With the Warner Zone Heads

Moe Silver is Zone Manager of 25 operations in the Empire State, with zone headquarters in Albany. These houses include many of the original Mark Strand deluxe theatres, of which Silver was the original general manager.

Colonel Howard Waugh is Zone Manager of the theatres in the states of Tennessee and Kentucky. Waugh is one of the best known showmen down in Dixie having operated extensively in the South for Paramount as well as for Warners in various parts of the South.

Skip Weshner, one of the best known of the younger showmen, is the Zone Manager of the first-run theatres in Ted Schlanger's Philadelphia circuit of Warner houses. Skip has operated in the New York area and midwest territories.

A. J. Vanni, Zone Manager under Ted Schlanger, supervises the out-of-town theatres in the Philadelphia circuit. Vanni is also well known in the New England territory theatre circles.

Nat Wolf is Zone Manager of the Ohio Theatres with his headquarters in Cleveland. Wolf is quite familiar with midwest operation, having also been affiliated with Paramount and R. K. O., in Chicago and Minneapolis as well as other key spots.

Home Office to Field Men

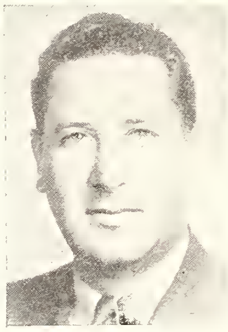
From Mort Blumenstock's office to the men in the field goes regularly a service of campaign portfolios, roughs of lad layouts and copy, galley proofs of publicity, mats of special New York ads, excerpts and blowups of reviews in trade paper and dailies.

Dealer tieup stills are also forwarded as are special seasonal photos, exploitation campaigns from the New York and other first run theatres. Monthly releases of feature stories, star interviews, shorts, human interest stories, gossip columns and news photos are other items included.

Recent Warnermen Exploitations

Amateur Hour Clicks In 35 Warner Houses

How 35 theatres lured extra business, boosted bread sales, discovered new talent, including a descendant of Alexander Hamilton, and found someone's long lost brother is described in the following history of the statewide radio amateur contest conducted in the New Jersey houses and detailed by Bob Paskow, zone ad manager.



BOB PASKOW

The first series ran for 15 weeks in the selected 35 houses, the object of the contest being to stimulate receipts, to build up Warner publicity and goodwill and discover talent.

A baking company with branches in various Warner towns sponsored the programs, contributing $10,000 to cover all expenses, the finals being broadcast from the stage of the Branford, in Newark.

Each theatre was furnished heralds, marquee valances, 40 by 60 lobby blowups, publicity stories, mats, slugs, cuts, and entry cards covering all rules and awards. Managers then followed through with local papers, herald distribution, etc., and enlisted cooperation of schools, factories and stores to sponsor contestants and attend tryouts.

Theatres Classified

Theatres were classified in three groups; preliminaries in 29, semi-finals in five county theatres and final, broadcast, in one first run house. Preliminaries started simultaneously in all theatres, each sending a winner and alternate for the semi-finals to compete in the semi-final theatre, which ran off their first contest one week after the start, providing a winner and alternate for the actual broadcast at the Branford.

Each week's winner at the Branford was selected by the audience with aid of electrically operated applause indicator. Preliminary and semi-final theatres judged their contests by applause without aid of machine.

Winning contestants received a week's booking, appearing each night as a guest star at a semi-final house. Preliminary houses also availed themselves of this talent. Contracts with Gus Edwards, well known producer, who handled the broadcast were also given winners to appear in his revue to make rounds of the theatres after close of contest. Special short to be made after revue was routined is also scheduled for showing at the Warner New Jersey houses.

Sponsors were pleased with results as their sales of bread jumped skyward, and added extra advertising with no cost to the theatres. During the contest, many stars such as Cantor, Jolson, Jessel, Dempsey and others made appearance.

Famous Name Enters

More than 2,400 acts participated, among them being a descendant of Alexander Hamilton who entered the contest on a dare. Publicity was also gained by a letter to the Warner offices asking for the address of an entrant believed by the sender who recognized his voice on the air to be her long lost brother. An investigation followed and a reconciliation effected.

Paskow reports a number of contracts landed by winners from sponsors of national radio programs. Other entrants also have benefited by contracts for appearances at various resort spots.

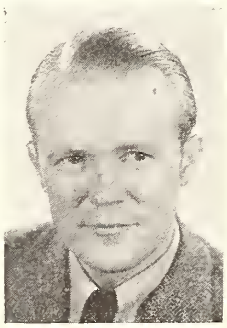
Girl Angles Build "Caliente" Opening

Colonel Bill Hendricks, of the Warner, Memphis, spread his exploitation lavishly in that good ole Southern manner on "Caliente" with such snappers as bottle openers promoted from brewery tied to imprinted tags in the form of an "opening" herald. Caliente beach revues at swimming pools, Caliente floor shows at night clubs, and Caliente Sweepstakes at dog track, with adequate buildup were other angles. Dancers, doing the special number from the picture, were supplied to lunch clubs and night spots.



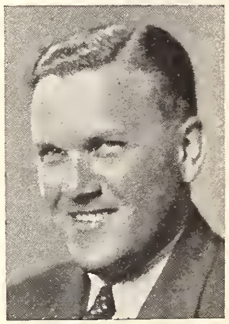
BILL HENDRICKS

Spanish front was featured by costumed girls on balcony (see photo) singing the hit numbers and playing guitars. Other girls carrying banners, and also in costume, met excursion boats, appeared at ball games and toured town on decorated float, equipped with p.a. system. Gal artist, costumed, in window, painted portrait of Del Rio, tieup copy on attached panels.

Bill gave his opening the Hollywood treatment with all the trimmins' and arranged for police escort in bringing film to theatre, further bally given by the Spanish girlies who went along for the ride.

They Stop in A. C. To See Peep-Show

The peep show is still around and for the date at the Stanley, Atlantic City, Sid Blumenstock, zone ad manager, collected an assortment which were planted in the lobby. Over the regular girlie shots, stills of West and typical gag lines were pasted, and the machines fixed to run continuously and automatically. Sid says the stunt went so well that some of the folks dropped nickels into the slot to take a look. Another lobby attractor was a full length cutout of West covered with stills and other colored display material of various kinds.



SID BLUMENSTOCK

Night clubs, numerous in A. C., distributed folders carrying press book Westicisms and some of these spots put on lucky dances for which Sid contributed some tickets as prizes. Copy directly tied to various groups conventioneering at the Shore was stressed, posters carrying full-length of West with such lines as "Howdy, Tall Cedars, come in and see me," were planted out front.

Beats Boardwalk Restriction

Wheel chairs being the only conveyances allowed on the boardwalk, a West double was planted in one of the chairs (see photo) with a plug for the title, further bally being restricted by ordinance.

Newspaper ads started with advance two-inch teasers with silhouette of the star and gag copy, running up to four inches on two column cartoon ads showing, for instance, two men running, with small balloons reading "Boy, hope I'm not late. Want to hear those wisecracks before they are relayed," followed by white on black slug with star, title and theatre and other pertinent buildup information.

Dannenberg's "Roberta" Lobby Flash

Dance Gag, Parking Tiein Plug 'Roberta'

SID DANNENBERG

They put on a "Roberta" fox trot contest in Cleveland with one of the papers to plug the date on that attraction at the Hippodrome, says Sid Dannenberg, Ohio zone ad manager, to publicity that ran for seven days and brought in a flock of free space.

Stunt open to amateur dancers only was put on in popular ballroom, with paper running entry blanks and otherwise beating on the drum. Ballroom was promoted, radio announcements made, contest boosted at theatre in lobby and on screen, and at popular night club which offered engagement as part of the first prize. Additional award to winners was round trip to New York, week's free stay at midtown hotel and attendance at leading metropolitan night club.

Second prize was cash, autographed dancing slippers autographed by Astaire and Rogers, and three-months pass to Hippodrome. Third and fourth prizes were cash and time passes.

Another tieup that started with "Roberta" and continues profitably was with a chain garage and parking lot company. Garage near the theatre was a flop, but through the tieup, charges were reduced to patrons at the Hipp. Garage began to play to turnaway business and theatre matinee grosses jumped. Theatre ticket stub was of course required and this was put over in exchange for one frame trailer.

In addition, the garage people, in each of their 20 places, now stamp every parking tag with current attraction at the Hipp, stamps made up by Danny at a weekly cost of $3.00. Other tieins were made, and the accompanying photo of lobby set piece shows how well the date was sold at the theatre. Note star cutouts on both sides.

Special Club Night Features "Folies" Date

DAN FINN

For the date at the Roger Sherman on "Folies Bergere," Dan Finn, New England zone ad manager arranged a number of tieins. Included were a number of two column ads placed by leading night spot to publicize a "Folies" night, and these were supplemented by cutouts displayed at the club of Chevalier, and broadcasts by the orchestra of the song hits with theatre announcements.

Department store also used cut of star and playdates in display ads on a tieup for a photo giveaway at the store, and more space was landed with shot of Ann Sothern in beauty salon ads. Picture still showing shapely legs was also planted in another store's newspaper displays to advertise silk stockings, with theatre credits of course also carried. Music tieups, broadcasts, straw hat tieins, announcements on menu cards, cigarette tieup and auto bumper strips were also used to plug the date.

Radio Tieups Stress "Ruggles" Showing

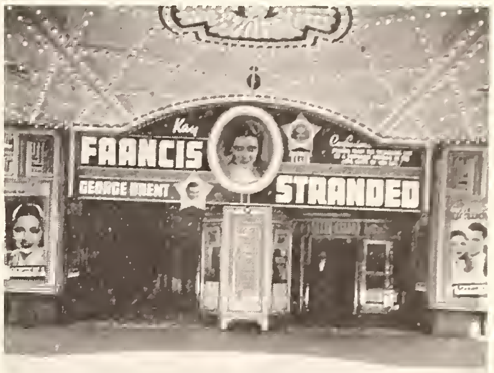
HOMER HARMON

Radio hookups to the number of 36 on "Ruggles" at the Shubert were reported as part of the Warner campaign by Homer H. Harmon, St. Louis zone ad manager, three stations announcing starting time of feature, star and theatre credit each day during the showing. In exchange, theatre ran lobby one sheet card calling attention to the stations' movie time table broadcasts.

The "know your star's voice" record was planted on yet another station, with tickets as awards for correct answers submitted by listeners-in.

Chain drug stores featured a "Ruggles" sundae, with pennants at every fountain together with one sheet flats showing pictures of Laughton and Zasu Pitts. Heralds were also distributed through tieup with dry cleaners and popular eatery nearby.

Besides other merchant tieups for windows, Harmon also promoted the placing of theatre cards on the inside of street cars, a first-time, he says for this advertising.



"Light" Front at New York Strand

Recent Highlights At New York Strand

IRVING WINDISCH

A resume of some recent exploitation highlights put over by the Warner crew at the New York Strand at the Broadway Strand is set down by exploitation manager Irv Windisch, and to be recalled are the following: The army mule gag in a Broadway parade on "Flirtation Walk," the bannered animule spotted up front and stealing a lot of the thunder. Dick Powell's birthday was another angle on this attraction, the celebration tied up to a special radio show cooperating with star's program.

On "Gold Diggers," a lobby radio contest was put across on opening day, entrants competing for station announcer job by talking about the picture as a voice test. Stunt was broadcast and built up in advance with auditions, etc.

Another lobby radio gag was in the form of an advance broadcast inviting those who thought they could qualify as movie reviewers to write in and those sending best reasons received "critics' passes" to see picture at first morning performance. After which the winners spoke on the picture over a broadcast from the lobby.

Florists were hooked into "Caliente" opening with specially named rose presented to every woman at night show by girls in Mexican costume. Florists' windows announced the giveaway and carried stills from the picture plus blowups of the stars.

The Strand front naturally is given lots of attention and the accompanying shot of "Stranded" shows good use of light bulbs to bally stars and title.

On recent President's Birthday Ball, theatre supplied heralds announcing party, advertising tying in with current attraction. Distribution of heralds was handled by committee's members through mailing lists.

"Black Fury" Shown To Pa. Legislators

JOE FELDMAN

Pittsburgh zone ad manager Joe Feldman reports the Warnerites' campaign on "Black Fury" at the Stanley, actually started with the shooting of the first scenes by director Curtiz on location a few miles from Pittsburgh, Joe having a flock of newspaper men on hand to witness the filming. This was followed by a blast from the author, locally resident, on what he had planned if the picture was subject to censoring, his interview carried by the local local papers, Associated and United Press wires.

The many-weeks' campaign was built up to a climax by planting for the first time a screening of the picture in the state legislature, and this was tied in to the drive to have passed the Coal and Iron Police Bill, a long-time Pennsylvania political issue.

Author Makes Appearance

The author, Judge Musmanno, made the opening remarks at the Capitol showing and brought forth asserted victims of police brutality who were transported to the Capitol to aid the bill's passage. The screening was front-page in many important state papers and also carried by the wires. The bill was passed later, with the picture credited for able assistance.

Foreign language groups and papers were also contacted, with special screenings for these group heads, labor leaders, etc., who personally urged members to attend. Pittsburgh being the center of a coal mine district, much extra publicity was thus obtained locally and in papers in the drawing area. Additional buildup was given through a visit to New York under Warner auspices of local picture critics who saw the picture there, in some instances breaking advance reviews, usually ruled against.

Lobby carried blowups, giant cutouts and letter from head of State Censor Board (see photo) that praised the picture. Shots of the author working in the mines to get material for the story were also used.

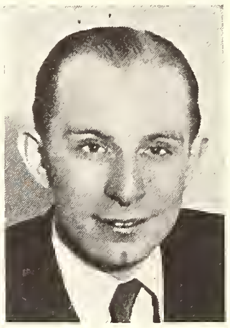
6-Week Contest For Naborhood Theatres



FRANK LA FALCE

Frank La Falce, Washington zone ad manager, reports a highly successful six-week institutional neighborhood campaign put on in the form of a cash prize and ticket contest entitled "Calling All Stars" hooked in with the Washington Times. $30 was given each week for first three prizes and $50 for the three grand award winners. Fifty pairs of guest tickets were given next best.

Paper agreed to devote a full page weekly to picture news and photos, material to be written and edited by La Falce, in keeping with daily's editorial policy. Paper also agreed to run promotion ads, truck posters, etc., in exchange for mention on screens of ten theatres involved and the $230 prize money and tickets put up by Warners. Saturday was selected as the best day to run the special pages, so that readers would have the week end to read the section, and theatres by this publicity could profit on Sunday.

Paper Runs Entry Blanks

Contest was an identification, with photos of eight stars appearing in pictures at the participating houses planted across the top of the page each week. Clues were run under each shot, and to enter, reader had only to list names on blank provided on page.

Card index of all entries was made up first week and a weekly check thereafter so that complete record of every entrant was available to choose grand prizes. Each contestant was asked to list nearest Warner Theatre with entry so that awarded passes could be given for that theatre.

Reports Many Entries

Each week, shot of different neighborhood theatre and manager was run with short history, description of equipment and sketch of managers' career. Feature stories and carefully selected pressbook material on current pictures at the 10 theatres was also included on the contest page, and La Falce says that over 20,000 entries were received and checked. Paper's reaction to the stunt was an immediate request for a repeater next fall to be done even bigger 'n better.

Jolson Honored In Citywide Ceremony

CHARLIE SMAKWITZ

Excitement was high in Albany, New York, when Charlie Smakwitz, zone ad manager announced the personal appearance at the Strand, of Al Jolson for the world premier of "Go Into Your Dance." And so impressed were the city fathers that a conference including newspaper editors, chamber of commerce president and the Mayor was called to formulate a program of municipal entertainment.

House staff carried chestbands with "welcome" copy three weeks ahead, one week before and during run, doormen and ushers were attired in full evening dress including top hats. Front was elaborately bannered and merchants also carried "welcome" copy in ads with title and date.

Star Met by Mayor

Jolson was met at the station by the Mayor, other city executives and Warner officials and a parade of bannered autos led by a band proceeded through the main streets to the Capitol where Governor Lehman held a reception. The wire services and newsreels covered the party and in the accompanying photo are shown left to right, Mayor Thatcher, Joe Bernhard, General Manager, Warner Theatres, the Governor, Moe Silver, New York State zone manager and Jolson. Testimonial dinner preceded Jolson's appearance at the theatre where a Hollywood opening was put on.

Smakwitz made a flock of other tieups, including telegrams from Warner stars displayed in windows, music store and department store windows, banners all over the city, classified hookins, and topped it all the day after Jolson's appearance with a front page story and photos of the star and local dignitaries who made him welcome.

Ace Exploitations Aid Theatre Opening

Preceded by a steady barrage of publicity and photos covering the ground-breaking, cornerstone laying and a weekly column detailing the theatre's construction, the opening of the new Warner Beverly, in Chicago, was put across by L. S. Stein, zone ad manager, with a number of effective exploitations.

LARRY STEIN

Contest three weeks ahead was put on with one of the dailies, cash and tickets given for best theatre slogan to fit the new house, with Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon and Skeets Gallagher, appearing locally at that time, aiding the publicity by acting as judges. All Chicago sheets carried stuff on the opening including shot of girl buying first ticket.

Three advertising wallops were put across with a four-page two-color section in a downtown Sunday edition, 16-page section in local weekly, and double truck in yet another. Thus thousands of dollars in space was secured the only cost being some $200 for engravings. Elaborate souvenir program was similarly obtained.

Unique trailer used at all Chicago Warner houses carried special shots of Paul Muni and Bette Davis speaking of the new theatre, and in the regular newsreel was shown another trailer shot of the theatre in course of construction.

Outstanding opening day stunt was a "Gala Community Day," a cooperative celebration by 55 neighborhood merchants including cards in all windows, inserts in all packages, decorating of the street on which theatre is located, and winding up with a parade of sound trucks and special float.

Drives At Doctors On "Private Worlds"

On the assumption that the repression angle was too highbrow and deciding that the title did not sell enough romantic lure, Harry Goldberg, Philadelphia zone ad head developed for "Private Worlds" at the Boyd further buildup in his ads by using such lines as—"what goes on behind the secret door of a woman's heart; what does she hide in her 'private world'". "No men allowed in the 'private world' of a woman's heart."

HARRY GOLDBERG

In addition to the widened appeal of the ads, previews were held for social workers, neuro-psychiatrists, and specialized letters to thousands of physicians and nurses. According to Goldberg, the letters brought the greatest attendance from these groups in history of the theatre.

INEXPENSIVE LOBBY DISPLAYS

Washington Warnerite Explains How Department Store Method Has Been Used to Cut Display Costs

by FRANK LA FALCE
Ad Director, Washington Zone

There is an idea among theatrical advertising men that undue expenditure on lobby displays is commensurate with throwing away money. It is argued that the presence of patrons in the theatre requires that they be sold on the coming production via the screen, and if the screen sells the patrons, there is no necessity in selling them again by means of a lobby display.

Opponents of this advertising theory argue in rebuttal that a good trailer plus a good lobby display clinches the selling argument on a picture.

Advertising theories have no sponsorship in this article, either pro or con. If a manager believes in lobby displays he is interested in cutting said display cost to a minimum.

Adopts Store Idea

This has been solved in the Washington de luxe houses by utilizing the department store method of unit displays. Once the complete set of units have been built the lobby display can be changed in direct ratio to the ingenuity of the advertising man and his poster artist. The various units are comparable to blocks, and one can achieve startling effects at little expense.

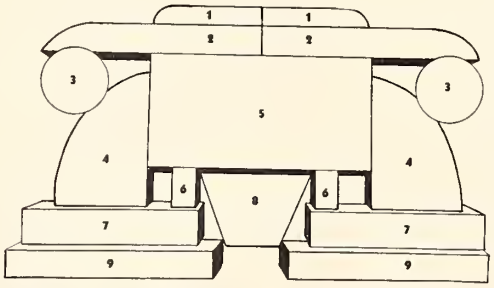
Study of the master display diagram below will give an idea of the number of units used for the display at the Earle, Washington. Note there are two units (similar in every respect) of every number from one to four; six and seven; and nine. Units number five and eight are singular. However, these also can be duplicated. The addition of two circular units (not shown in the diagram) will add to the impressiveness of the displays.

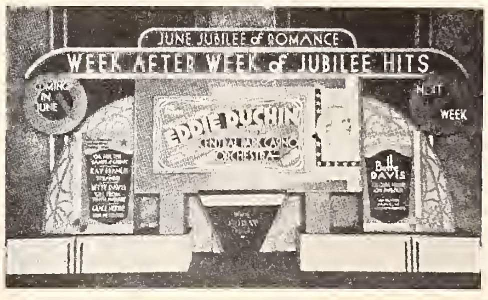
Our experience at the Earle shows that displays have cost as low as $6 once the original units have been built. The size of these units depends upon the size of the lobby. The Earle Theatre display was based on a 20-foot display. Where a theatre has a large lobby, and one has enough units, there will be little trouble in making displays for different parts of the large lobby.

A recent display used in advance of the date on "Stranded" had the addition of a circular unit not shown in the master setup. We added this to show how easily one can add to the unit system.

William C. Ewing of the Warner Bros. Washington advertising department, assisted the writer in the creation of these displays.

"Have You Contributed Lately?"





These two cuts above are reproductions of La Falce's master display diagram and one of his finished lobby set pieces in which the display follows out the unit method described in the article above on cost-cutting.

Kidnap Case Breaks With 'G Men' Opening

The Weyerhauser kidnap case, breaking at the time of the opening, gave Milwaukee Warnermen says Ben Katz, zone ad manager, an opportunity to tie in "G Men" as every newspaper used the title in headlines, one daily also going for a series of stories on the G Men and their operations through interviews with local agents.

BEN KATZ

Wisconsin being the locale of the late Dillinger's famed hideout, Ben used shots of the spot in the advance trailer together with action scenes from the picture. History of the late bandit was incorporated in a display of lobby "wanted" photos, obtained through police, and front page lobby panels of the Dillinger case were directly tied in with such copy as "torn from screaming headlines, the inside story, etc."

Further distribution was arranged with fan magazine distributor to stuff heralds in current issues and distribute back numbers carrying stickers of the coming date.

Newspaper campaign started with teaser slugs of the title followed with flash ads such as title displayed over headlines of the Weyerhaeuser case. Outstanding in the campaign was the hooking up of the date to current crimes, the Warnerites taking full advantage of the picture's timeliness to secure a lot of extra publicity.

"SMASH MUSICAL TOPS WITH SONG HITS, SWELL SWEETHEART TEAM AND GRAND ROMANCE THAT'S HEART-WARMING"

"Pop appeal is labeled all over it!

You showmen can't overplay it!

And you're a sucker if you don't give it a ride in your publicity!

Warners have come through with the sweetest b. o. honey in the musical-song-romance division delivered this year!

Dick Powell does the best work of his career, and puts over one song in particular in a way to make all the dames—old and young—swoon and like it!

Done with a delightfully original, intriguing romance that has genuine sincerity and a heart-warming quality rare in these sophisticated Hollywood pictures of the light entertainment variety!

We cannot recall any musical that has such a delightful romance with such a smart balancing of struggle, disappointments, eager youth fighting for success, menace, and well-knit suspense building to a gasp climax!

In a word—it gets you!"—Film Daily

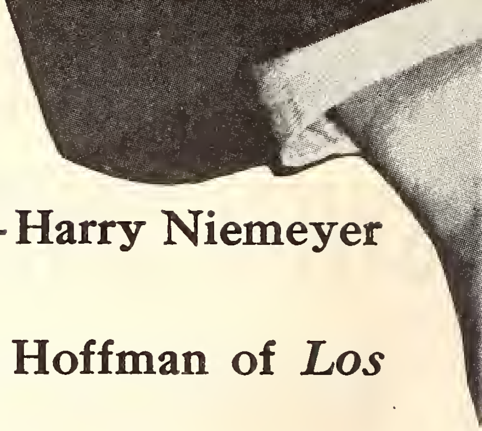
..But there's more in the swell lines here
—And still more in these other great previews..



"Best and most entertaining musical I have seen!"—Harry Niemeyer of St. Louis Post-Dispatch

"Grand picture and grand evening's fun!"—Jerry Hoffman of Los Angeles Examiner

"Swell idea! Will sing long lines at any box-office!"—Jimmy Starr of Los Angeles Herald-Express

"A great picture! First musical with a really fine story!"—Molly Merrick of North American Newspaper Alliance

"A winner! It should land in the important money!"—Variety Daily

"Gay and hilarious, tuneful and showy. Hot and bankable at the box-office!"—M. P. Daily

"One of the better Warner musicals!"—Douglas Churchill of Detroit Free Press

ALONG THE RIALTO with PHIL M. DALY

● ● ● IT SEEMS there can be such a thing as UNDERSTATEMENT in motion picture advertising......this enviable record has been achieved by Warners in their double spread trade ad ....the copy refers to it as "one of those show surprises that make picture business the most exciting game in the world"......after viewing this pix in the preview projection room showing......we are here to state that it is not only a Show Surprise......it is a Summer Smash......one of the Grandest Romances with pop appeal we have ever lamped......with a Sweetheart Team of Dick Powell and Joan Blondell that is immense......and that Sweetheart Song that Dick sings to Joan is alone enough to send it in..... with the way the Powell lad puts it over......

● ● ● AND A word about the most heartening thing of all in the eyes of a disillusioned reviewer......it brings the note of Sincerity and the Human Touch back into the field of light screen entertainment......which for too long has given us the brittle, smart, dazzling and sophisticated note in Hollywood productions of this type......

● ● ● WE BELIEVE that folks want the heart-warming touch in their films about everyday people......they want to see their own experiences reflected NATURALLY in motion pictures.... the trials, struggles, disappointments, little happinesses and surprises of everyday life......and that's exactly what the authors and the director have caught most impressively..................................it's above all a human document......and if the public doesn't go nuts over it we'll be surprised......

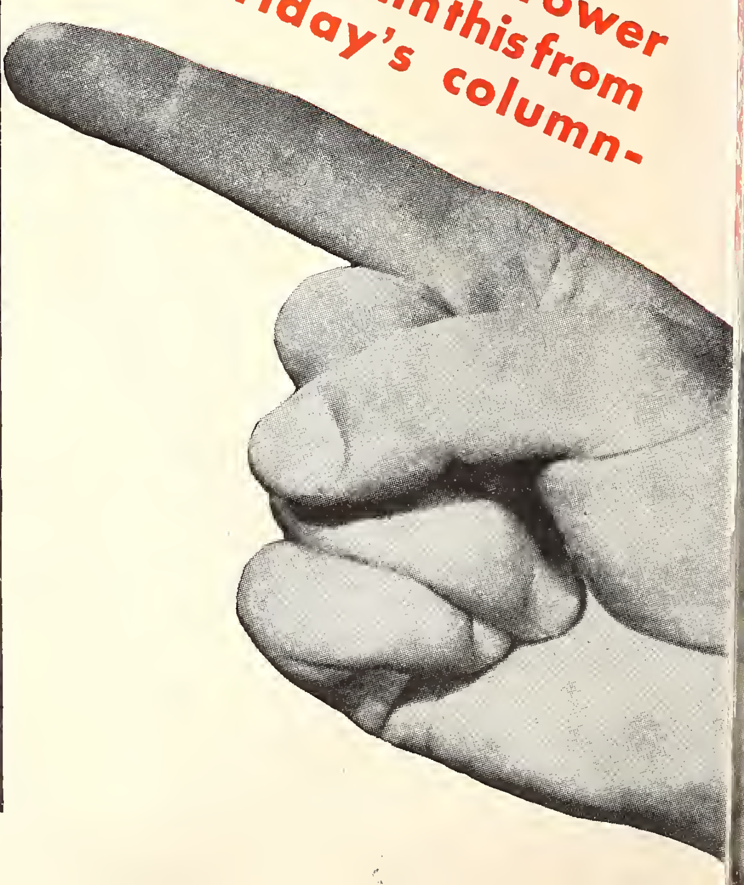
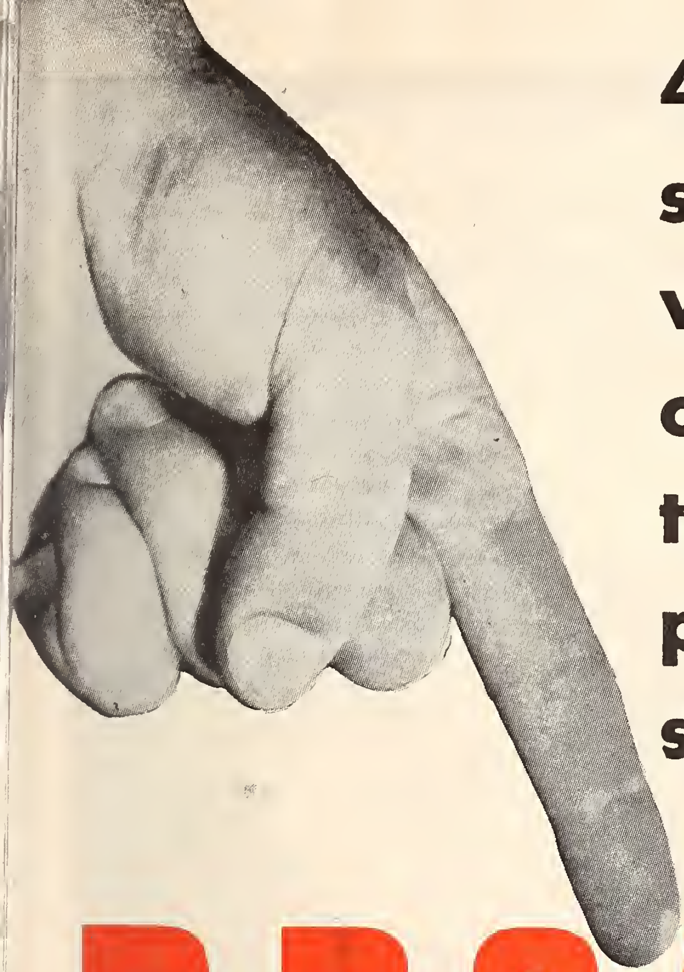
..And Jack Harrower clinches it with this from last Friday's column-





483 impartial, unbiased superlatives can't be wrong--and every one of them points unmistakably to this great picture as the biggest show surprise in months!

Vol. 120, No. 3 — July 20, 1935

TRAFFIC DOLLARS

THE motion picture is being revealed as an important component in the intricate fabric of general business and is now a factor in a cycle of influences that tend to change the map of retail businesses in metropolitan centers across the land.

A study now in progress by a national authority on advertising finds a decentralization taking place in many retail lines by reason of a rise of neighborhood theatres in competition with big downtown houses, aided and abetted unwittingly by the newspapers. The newspapers generally give a preferential directory rate to the neighborhood theatres. The increasing patronage of the neighborhood screens draws from the traffic flows of the downtown show streets and makes business for the neighborhood specialty shops in competition with the big downtown department stores. Neighborhood theatre advertising has shown an increase, while there has been, it is calculated, a considerable diminution of straight amusement rate space bought by the big theatres.

In Chicago an observer reports the situation is made conspicuous by a sharp reduction of the hours of window illumination of Loop department stores and other retail establishments, as result of diminished sidewalk traffic at night through the show hours.

Sharply pointed evidence of the influence of motion picture traffic was presented last week in the testimony of Mr. John D. Hertz, before the Securities and Exchange Commission, concerning the methods used in reducing some Paramount theatre rentals. "One way that usually brought results was to threaten to close the theatre, unless the rent was reduced. Most theatre buildings are occupied by stores, too, and if the theatre closed the stores would have to close, too, and it would result in a complete loss of income for the landlord."

Here is an interesting reversal of the process by which the motion picture theatres all originally sought to locate themselves on traffic streams, just as non-advertising chain stores have ever sought locations next door to a big advertiser. Now it seems that the motion picture, in some communities at least, is taking the traffic with it.

BIG WESTERN

MR. ARTHUR L. MAYER, that dynamic exhibitor who ever and insistently demands the action drama, now vacationing somewhere afar while the Rialto is being rebuilt, should be cheered up by a cable revealing the new movement in Hollywood to take the making of "westerns" really seriously.

Those who like to see a picture start somewhere and go thence to the conclusion, hell-for-leather all the while, and with "shootin' " in it, will be pleased when the boards announce RKO's "Powdersmoke Range," which has a cast of no less than ten (10), count 'em, players of star rank, including such exciting figures as Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey, Tom Tyler, Buffalo Bill, Jr., Wally Wales, Francis Ford, Art Mix, Franklyn Farnum and others.

It does seem too bad that there wasn't a spot somewhere for William S. Hart, too.

The western did great things for the movies—there's a debt to repay to an old and honored art form.

INFORMING TOMORROW

THE unborn students of the lore of the screen in the years to come need a bit of protection, because the story of the motion picture is tremendously confused, complex and obfuscated by clamoring claimants to inventions, "firsts" and all kinds of honors in originality and priority. All of them can not be right, but all of them are of record.

Not so many years ago pressures developed by the writer led to the purification of the exhibit of motion picture devices in the National Museum of the Smithsonian Institution, which had been considerably imposed upon.

Now comes the Museum of Modern Art Film Library in New York, with a most valuable array of old films, and pre-film exhibits, including, interestingly and properly enough, much of the work of the late Mr. Eadweard Muybridge, who pictured animals and men in locomotion and whose photographs considerably shook the art world of the late 1870's. However, it chances that the method, the machines and the first picture in the process were evolved by the late Mr. John D. Isaacs, a subsequently famous engineer, who invented the device and turned it over to be operated by Mr. Muybridge, who was a local photographer at the time. The Museum's publicity glorifies Mr. Muybridge and forgets Mr. Isaacs.

A Milwaukee brewery is now putting its lager on the market in tin cans and the departure is getting a furore of attention in the trade. It is our recollection that the customers initiated the process of putting beer in cans a great many years ago.

THE depression is about half over. The New York - New Canaan express now carries a club car again and the Wall Street contingent is playing poker, ten cent limit, as compared with the pre-depression car game at twenty-five cents. Conservative New Canaan in Connecticut is one of the few communities where sincere, forthright poker still stands against the effeminating invasion of bridge.

This Week

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

900 Shorts

Extended use of color, a searching for new types of novelty material, the rebirth of the serial, characterize the short subject product for the 1935-36 season. With some 900 scheduled, a figure comparing favorably with last and previous years, and a reasonably high level of quality expected to be maintained, the answer seems to be provided to the problem of the double feature, seen from time to time as ringing down the bell on the short subject. Also noted is the short subject's greatest weakness, the two-reel comedy, with stories found chiefly to blame. A study of the short subject for the new season, considering trends, quantity and quality, by Charles S. Aaronson, is to be found on page 13.

Sheehan Resigns

Resignation of Winfield Sheehan as vice-president and general manager of production for Fox Film Corporation, was announced Wednesday from Movietone City in Hollywood. Details on page 17.

Paramountain Erupts

Many a year ago W. W. Hodkinson, seeking a trademark and name for his newly formed distribution company, sat talking on the telephone to a lawyer and drawing designs on a blotter the while. He finally arrived at a picture of a smoking mountain, a volcano, and lettered over it the word Paramount, which he had seen on an apartment house builder's sign that morning in uptown New York.

This week the Paramountain erupted a sequence of merry controversies and an amazing line of dramatic revelations of the activities of the two years prior to its emergence from bankruptcy July 1. The excitements of the week embroiled lawyers, accountants, the press, United States Senators, minority holders, an independent government investigating committee, the federal court and even the corporation itself.

On one stage were John Hertz and other former officers of Paramount relating for the first time in public, before the Securities and Exchange Commission, the dramatic tale of the inside events that transpired on the eve of and subsequent to the bankruptcy. He told how he had ordered Adolph Zukor about and of the animosity created thereby, leading to his resignation as chairman of the finance committee when Mr. Zukor himself threatened to resign as president.

There was many an eyebrow lifted in the SEC audience as the witness, and others, told of the manipulations of the bankers and of the fight within the management itself.

Elsewhere there was being staged a bitter fight against the fees of $3,600,000 applied for by the lawyers, accountants and others who served during the reorganization proceedings. Charges of "milking" were heard from as far as the Capitol, where a Senatorial investigation was declared by Senator McAdoo to be a possibility. Details of the hearing and the arguments over claims are on page 39.

MPTOA's 10 Points

A ten-point program to serve as the basis for setting up a voluntary code and self-control was advanced to exhibitors this week by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Exhibitors were urged to submit recommendations on what should be done to improve the business, trade relations and what unfair trade practices should be regulated or abolished.

The program embraces the "irritating" problems of unfair cut-rate competition, double bills, giveaways and such, a uniform zoning plan, overbuying, elimination privileges, non-theatrical competition, score charges, music taxes, forcing short subjects with features and a standard contract for exhibition.

The MPTOA urged exhibitor units to proceed at once to negotiate trade practice regulations with distributors locally, believing this procedure more effective and speedier than national efforts. Large circuits are reported incorporating the contract rider banning dual featuring and reduced admissions, as recommended by Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA. The story is on page 52.

Dollar Devotion

Drawing from the announcement that the government intends to make FERA funds available for stage productions and roadshows the hope that "the living theatre" will be revived in its onetime glory, Professor Walter Prichard Eaton of the drama department of Yale University this week predicted that despite the federal millions the venture would fail unless the motion picture industry gave it active support.

Professor Eaton sees the need for cooperation on the part of film companies as an essential to the preservation of the artistic prestige of both forms of dramatic expression. The stage nourishes the screen's demand for creative talent, he recalls, and the screen supplies the financial sustenance.

Also Burns Mantle, dean of New York's dramatic critics, pointed out in the Sunday News this week the interdependence of stage and screen and took occasion to scoff at reports the film companies are playing angel to Broadway drama in execution of a gigantic scheme to discredit the stage. On page 35.

Promising "Faust"

Grand opera will be brought to the screen by Music Guild Productions, Inc., under the plan of a group of New York and eastern music enthusiasts and social lights who have subscribed more than $100,000 toward the project. "Faust" probably will be the first production, with professional operatic talent but few Hollywood names. Distribution is being discussed with a major company, and exhibition is planned on a grand scale, probably on a roadshow basis.

An imposing production staff includes G. W. Pabst, director; Fritz Reiner, symphony conductor; Manuel Komroff, who has prepared the script, and George Antheil, composer. See page 70.

Celler Again

A new bill on blind and block booking, differing in a number of aspects from the measure he introduced earlier in the session, has been submitted to the House of Representatives by Congressman Celler of New York.

Mr. Celler explained the changes in the measure are largely technical and deal with matters of procedure. He said they were written to bring the bill into conformity with court decisions and, inferentially, the views of the Federal Trade Commission.

Unless the session is unduly prolonged, no effort will be made to press the bill this year, but Mr. Celler will ask for hearings early next session.

Code -- Sometime?

There won't be a voluntary code, after all, at least not this season, say responsible industry observers in New York as they vision millions in losses resulting from disrupted film contracts, which, they maintain, would happen if a new standard exhibition contract were adopted. It seems that under Federal Trade Commission procedure of drafting fair practice agreements, the rules would be effectuated through contracts.

That, and the legal hazards, make a code for the motion picture industry remote, and, as informed New York observers evaluate the situation, the earliest one could be put in effect is the fall of 1936.

Meanwhile the Federal Trade Commission went blithely on its way of promulgating code drafting procedure, and the Code Authority of the Motion Picture Industry, winding up its affairs, was returning $7,000 in assessments from exhibitors, most of which arrived after the supreme court shot the Blue Eagle. All the developments of the week are on page 51.

Quits Star Ratings

Circuit first run theatres and the Kansas City Journal-Post are smoking the pipe of peace signalizing the end of a fight of almost a year in which the paper's refusal to revise advertising rates to what exhibitors deemed an equitable level was answered by withdrawal of national copy and curtailment of local advertising to an almost irreducible minimum. The paper granted a rate reduction of 40 per cent, which immediately was followed by reinstatement of former lineage.

The fight was marked by rancor on both sides, and on the part of the Journal-Post and its critic an attitude highly resented by the theatres, one or two of which requested that he absent himself from reviewers' showings.

As part of the new deal, the paper discarded the star system of film rating, reinstated publicity, and the attractions are getting more favorable reviews. See page 61.

Fox Testifies

Under grilling by George Richards, counsel for Fox Theatres Corporation, William Fox, former film magnate, testified in examination in Nassau County, N. Y., supreme court that the records of his personal financial transactions from 1925 to 1929 had disappeared. He said they were left in the office of the theatre company when he retired.

He testified from memory, however, to numerous transactions involving stock issues and employees' salaries and other things which stockholders of the theatre company want aired. The examination is before trial in suits brought by Fox Theatres and Fox Films, Inc., charging extravagance. Mr. Fox has pending a counter suit for $2,000,000 in connection with various stock transactions.

Press and public were barred from the Mineola court room on Wednesday on order of Elvin Edwards, official referee. Story is on page 49.

Deft Spice

The first anniversary of the Production Code finds the entertainment quality of motion pictures as a whole improved, writes Douglas Churchill from the Coast after observations of conditions and attitudes and after boiling down the opinions of producers themselves.

The more torrid players, despite the early fears and alarms, have retained their ratings, and where some have fallen off in popularity the change has been attributed to weak vehicles rather than to sugaring of stories for Code purposes.

Instead of crude, double-meaning lines plumped into scripts, with the protests they invoked, has come deftly written spice in good taste, with no reactions.

Finally, producers unite in the thought that the Production Code is a permanent element of the motion picture, according to Mr. Churchill, and, with that conviction, are cooperating more and more with the Code Administration. The story appears on page 16.

Australian Fox

Hoyts Theatres in New South Wales is considering a proposal to embark upon production in association with Fox Film Corporation, writes Cliff Holt, HERALD correspondent at Sydney.

Fox would send players for production as well as personal appearances, and Hoyts also would import directors and technicians with the hope of making its product of sufficiently high caliber to warrant inclusion in the Fox program in the United States as well as England.

This move would bring Hoyts into direct competition with Greater Union Theatres and Cinesound, in the field of production. It is understood that the plan is entirely divorced from General Theatres Corporation.

Back of it all is an effort to solve the problems raised by the New South Wales quota law. Cinesound had made known that it could supply the 20 pictures necessary for quota requirements. Independents at that time protested that Cinesound was trying to smother them. Page 66.

RKO Looks Up

Evidence that the Radio-Keith-Orpheum system is moving swiftly toward complete stabilization of its operating structure, out of which will come a reorganization from bankruptcy, was presented this week to the United States district court by Irving Trust Company, as trustee.

Earnings of both theatre and film companies are well ahead of last year, there is $2,000,000 more cash on hand, expenses have been reduced all along the line, unprofitable houses eliminated from the exhibition consolidation and claims of creditors, running into millions, substantially pared.

Much of the trustee's report, a document of optimism for the future of the company, is published on page 54, giving a present-day analysis of the corporation's operating and financial status.

Television Protest

Despite opposition expressed at a hearing before the Federal Communications Commission in Washington on the application of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company for permission to construct a coaxial cable between New York and Philadelphia, the Commission indicated the authority soon would be granted. Film and radio broadcasting interests argued against the application on the ground of competition, since it is generally known that eventually it will be used for transmission of television.

Ralph Vatner, New York attorney, representing, he said, independent producers, exhibitors and sound equipment manufacturers, fought strenuously what he termed a monopoly on the part of AT&T, through Erpi. Other interests seemed satisfied when Dr. Frank B. Jewett, company official, explained the cable would be experimental for a year at least. Page 38.

British Checkers

British distributors are keeping a close tab on the exhibitor, both at the box office and in the counting house, writes Bruce Allan, London correspondent, in an analysis of the Kinematograph Renters Society report on the year's activities.

Credit control was demonstrated in 2,313 cases in one month, while approximately $27,000 was collected in the year for erroneous reports of theatre receipts.

The proposals that came out of the convention of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association at Cardiff are still very much alive. Simon Rowson and Sir Gordon Craig are busy puncturing each other's suggestions for quota picture improvement. The story is on page 74.

This Week in Pictures

CONGRATULATIONS. From General Sales Manager Edward Golden as Republic's first feature, "Forbidden Heaven," is completed. Shown are Charles Farrell, Charlotte Henry, Mr. Golden, Beryl Mercer, Director Barker, Fred Walton.

WELL SUITED. (Right) Of platinum cellophane and rubber. In it: Jean Harlow.

BOTH IN PICTURES NOW. Three years ago Jean Muir, Warner featured player, was Anita Kerry's understudy in the stage play, "Bird in the Hand." They meet again as Miss Kerry begins her first screen role in Warner's "We're in the Money."

WINNER. As Ted Schlanger, Warner Theatres Philadelphia chief, rewarded Jay King, business drive winner. Also present: Messrs. Costello, Flynn, Weshner, Latimer, Davidoff, Schlesinger, Goldberg, Charles, Israel, Krieger, Einstein, Shipman.

INVENTIVE GENIUS. Old and new. Bridging many a magic year, this handclasp came recently in Paris as Walt Disney, creator of United Artists' "Mickey Mouse" and "Silly Symphony" cartoons, met Louis Lumiere, pioneer worker in the photography of motion.

TO PLAY IN BRITISH FILM. Jean Parker, MGM featured player, arriving at Newark Airport from the Coast on her way to London, where she will appear in a picture under the supervision of Alexander Korda.

NAMED OFFICIAL. (Below) E. E. Shumaker, who has been chosen vice-president of Electrical Research Products, Inc. He was selected from among members of the Erpi organization.

SIGNED. (Below) Niela Goodelle, radio singer, who has been given Educational's first star contract of the new season. She will be in "Rodeo Days."

COOL THOUGHTS. For a July day, suggested by a pensive moment with Genevieve Tobin as she pauses while a-gathering of flowers on her new Montecito estate. She recently completed "The Goose and the Gander" for Warners.

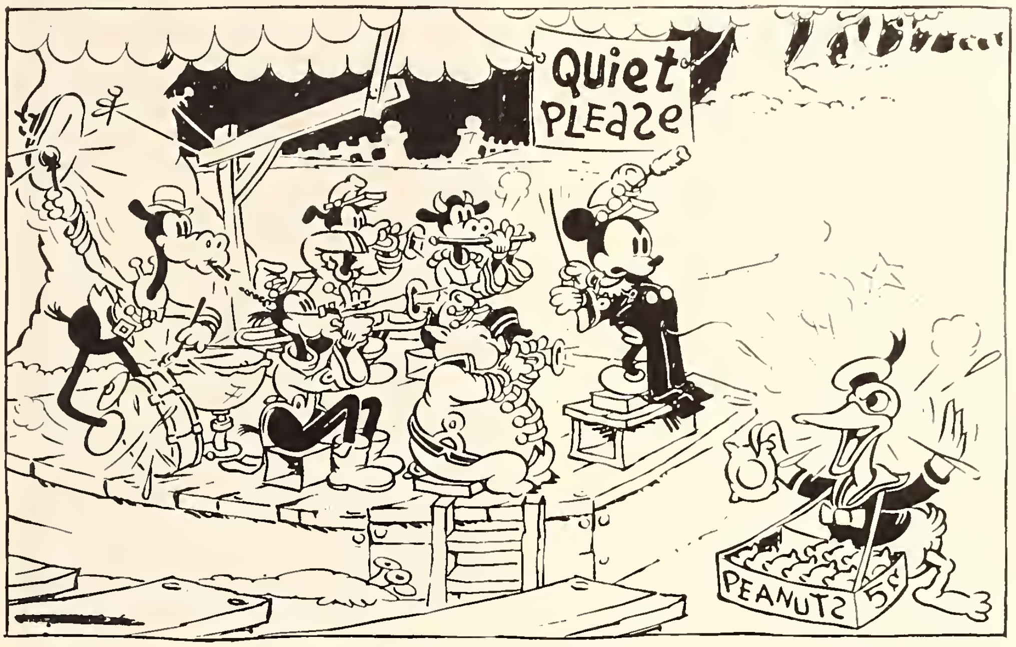
COLLEGE DAYS RECALLED. When James A. Ten Eyck, Syracuse University crew coach, visited Harry Joe Brown, Warner associate producer and Syracuse graduate, at Burbank. And over from Paramount came Ralf F. Murphy (left), also a Syracuse man, and now a director. Ten Eyck accompanied his crew to the Long Beach races.

AT LONDON PREMIERE. Greenroom chatter at the Empire in the British capital engaging Robert Montgomery, on hand for personal appearances; Gertrude Lawrence, and Sam Eckman, Jr., MGM manager in Great Britain, on the occasion of the initial performance in London of the MGM production, "No More Ladies."

COLOR LEADS THE WAY IN 900 SHORT SUBJECTS

Producers Seeking Novel Material; Volume Holds Up Despite Double Billing; Two-Reel Comedy Weakness Laid to Stories

by CHARLES S. AARONSON



Given a new power and impetus through the development of finer, more effective use of color, to breast the tidal wave of double featuring which has swept a nationwide theatre front, the short subject carries on its mostly lightsome way, with producers, for the new season, recording on their pre-season rosters a total which compares favorably, numerically, with last and previous years, and perhaps a bit more than favorably in quality.

Short product of the past year, and as projected for the 1935-36 season, is characterized by a search for new material, with novelty a prime factor in that search, the result of lively competition and recognition of the fact that the short is an important phase of the motion picture. Timeliness of subject matter, as in the feature, emphasis on the value of names and personalities, chiefly as developed via the radio, are vital elements, looking to the possibility of the exhibitor capitalizing on those names in his selling, in the bolstering of his program.

Color, which may be said to have had its short subject start with the cartoon, is spreading more and more rapidly to the travel, musical and other types of subject which are adaptable to that new, more expensive, but apparently worthwhile medium.

The public, it may be said, wants its short subjects, as indicated by the fact that the total, and the quality of shorts production maintains its high level, despite the widespread use of the double feature, generally considered to ring the death knell of the short.

Serials in Favor

Serials continue to meet with renewed favor, experiencing something in the nature of a re-birth, and returning dividends to producer and exhibitor alike. Ten are scheduled thus far for the new season.

The weak spot of the short subject continues to lie in the two-reel comedy, a weakness only in slight degree caused by player caliber and almost wholly due to inadequate story material.

With eight major companies planning release of a total of 765 short subjects, as compared with a total of 717 from those same eight companies planned prior to the last season, it is clearly indicated that there is no intention on the part of the producers to let down in short subject production, and this despite dual bills. It is perhaps a sound estimate to consider that various miscellaneous independent companies, including those distributing a few foreign short subjects in this country, will actually release 100 to 150 subjects, making a grand total of 900 available to the exhibitor for the 1935-36 season. This may be taken as a more accurate figure than the generally used round number of 1,000 short subjects released each season.

A breakdown among the eight larger companies, indicating the total each plans to release during the new season, shows a range of 80 to 130, exclusive, of course, of the newsreels, issued by five companies, Fox, MGM, Paramount, RKO (Pathe) and Universal, each twice a week, and each totaling 104 issues annually. The production schedule for the eight companies using complete totals only, is as follows:

Fox-Educational	110
Paramount	107
RKO Radio	107
United Artists	18
Universal	79
Warner (Vitaphone)	130

The 100 to 150 independently produced subjects will come from such companies as Celebrity, Master Art Products, DuWorld, First Division, Principal, John Auer and a few others distributing entirely on the state rights market.

Continuing the statistical aspect of the discussion, pointing out to the exhibitor just what he may expect during the coming season in the way of types of short subjects, following is a division by series within each of the eight major companies, with an indication of the total planned in each series, where that is available at this writing.

Among the independent companies, Celebrity plans a new series of six ComiColor cartoons, done in color, and using for the most part adaptations of childhood fairy tales.

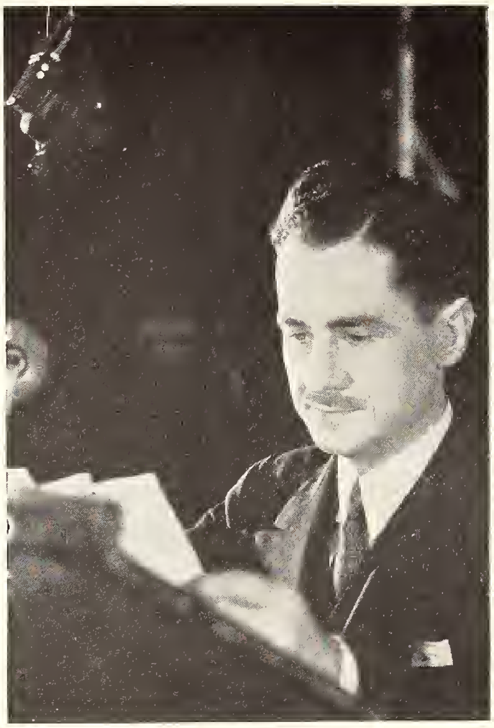
John Auer has scheduled a series of 26 subjects, featuring Major Edward Bowes, New Yrok Capital theatre managing director, and conductor of an amateur program on the radio. The amateurs are to be a part of the series. Master Art Products is understood to be ready with at least one series featuring the amateur idea, Principal is expected to have several subjects, and state rights companies will account for the rest of the total.

Audio Productions, Electrical Research Products subsidiary, which in its series, "Musical Moods," attempted a radical departure in having scenic material the accompaniment for famous musical scores, played by symphony orchestras, and designed for use as "quieting" elements in a theatre program, plans several for the new season. In this series was employed what was claimed to have been the first use, out-of-doors, of the newly developed three-color Technicolor, and the results were little short of amazing in their excellence of tone and quality. Distribution on this group, as well as on the "Thrilling Journeys" travel series, which last year was effected through First Division, is at the moment in negotiation.

Significant Trends

A brief analysis of the series planned by the major companies reveals significant trends in the development of the short subject.

Fox-Educational indicates a continuation of the policy of making comedies predominate in its program, again with musical material featured. In the Fox series the large success of the Cameraman Adventures group finds it continuing, while the Magic Carpet, also utilizing the vast services of the Fox Movietone News staff under the direction of Truman Talley, brings excellent pictorial material, with the somewhat unusual elimination of almost all explanatory dialogue.



LOWELL THOMAS
radio personality, commentator for Fox News and narrator for a Universal travel series

MGM continues to have a large part of its product supplied by Hal Roach, the dean of comedy producers, with his Chase, Our Gang and Thelma Todd-Patsy Kelly series. James A. FitzPatrick will produce a series of Travel Talks, again with the extremely effective use of color which made this series one of the outstanding in its field during the closing months of the past season. Color will find its way into the Happy Harmonies cartoons produced by Harmon and Ising, as well as into the Musical Revues. Pete Smith, whose glib and facile tongue provoked audiences' risibilities during the past season, will voice his comment concerning sports and in the Miniatures, novelties. The "Crime Doesn't Pay" group, continued from last year, is indicative of a grasping of the "timeliness" value in shorts, hitting in tune with the anti-crime drive which is at the moment a strong element in the feature production schedules and in the headlines.

New Tieup on Science Subjects

Paramount strikes a new note in its Popular Science series, tying in with the widely read magazine of that name in what should be an interesting and widely appealing group of subjects, if they are fashioned in such a manner as to be intriguing to the layman and non-technical. In color, they should be especially effective. Popeye, the Sailor, of the comic strip, who probably has done more to increase the infantile consumption of the much-maligned spinach than any single factor of the generation, will appear again. His popularity last season was matched only by the Disney subjects. A special, in color, featuring the indomitable Popeye, in two reels, should be something to pre-sell.

RKO, though drawing heavily upon Van Beuren for its shorts schedule, has, as perhaps its outstanding series, the March of Time reel, the world distribution of which it recently took over. Coincidentally, word comes of the intention on the part of Time to make its radio broadcast a nightly affair, from Monday to Friday, instead of once each week, which obviously opens the way for bigger and better tieups for the exhibitor showing the reel. It may be taken as not at all unlikely that one or another of the producers will attempt to follow suit in a dramatized reporting of the news in something of the March of Time style, though there is no indication at this writing. Unique, clever, having shown rapid improvement in its short development, it holds vast possibilities. Van Beuren will produce for RKO the Dumbbell Letters, which have had varied success; Easy Aces, Rainbow Parade Cartoons, in color; the World on Parade, new travel series, Sports with Bill Corum of the New York Evening Journal, following the trend to hitch a name to sport reels. Woodard Brothers, whose interesting and clever work with microscope, camera and infinite patience brought to Educational last season an Academy Award, will make the "Struggle to Live" series for RKO, which has the earmarks of school tieup material for the exhibitor.

The Color Trend

Walt Disney, the pioneer and the acknowledged ace of cartoon producers, will enlarge his program to make 18 for United Artists release, nine Silly Symphonies and nine with Mickey Mouse and, again indicative of a trend, all in color.

With Lowell Thomas handling the narrative on one series, and James Wallington of the radio doing likewise on another, Universal too, is hitching its wagon to radio names. Universal seems to be virtually alone in the absence of color in short subjects.

Warner, through its short subject unit, Vitaphone, plans 130, the largest schedule of them all. Last year's material is being continued, with the exception of substitution of "Our United States," produced by E. M. Newman, for "See America First," from the same producer, and "Big Time Vaudeville Acts," a type of diversified novelty subject, featuring vaudeville turns, with which Universal found unquestioned success last season. The Broadway Brevities group will contain musicals, revues, names and color, found successful last year.

Rebirth of the Serial

With the added scope brought about by the ability of the talking apparatus to go places and do things in active fashion, there has come what may well be termed a rebirth of the serial, that tried and true form of episodic short subject, which in years agone, each Saturday left the brave but sore beset heroine hanging perilously from the edge of the cliff by one or two fingers while the villain still pursued her, and a hundred children stood up in their seats and yelled for more. "Them days," it may be said, are here again.

The serial, with leaps and bounds, is coming back into its own, that dominant place it held in the theatre's scheme of things, and the exhibitors' box office receipts, when the motion picture was much younger. It is made primarily for the child element of the patronage, and as such, made clean, hard and fast moving, it should continue to do the business it deserves.

As right inevitably triumphs over might, even though it takes 12 episodes and 12 Saturdays to do it, as it forces red blood to leap through the veins of the younger generation of patrons, which will never do it any harm, it has a real place in the theatre. Besides, it is a business getter for the weekend in the smaller situations.

Universal heads the list of serial producers,

TWO-REEL COMEDY STILL WEAK SPOT

and is the only major company which produces serials. On its schedule for the new season are "The Roarin' West," with the popular and hard riding Buck Jones; "The Adventures of Frank Merriwell," from the ever-read books by Burt L. Standish; "The New Exploits of Tailspin Tommy," being a new edition of a successful serial of last season, and taken from a newspaper comic strip, and "Flash Gordon," likewise from a newspaper strip, which factor should mean ready buildup. Each will run 12 episodes except the Jones, which will be 15.

Mascot will offer "Adventures of Rex and Rinty," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., the dog, and Rex, the horse; "Fighting Marine" starring Tom Mix; "Phantom Empire," with Gene Autry, and "The Miracle Rider," also starring Tom Mix, and in 15 episodes, while the others will be the conventional 12 chapters in length.

Completing the serial lineup as it stands at the moment are Principal, with "Chandu on the Magic Island," featuring Bela Lugosi, and the new Burrough-Tarzan Enterprises, which will offer Herman Brix, famed athlete, in "New Adventures of Tarzan."

Double Features and Shorts

The double feature situation has been fought in industry circles up and down—and across—the land these many years, and perhaps at no time more seriously than within the past year. The general conception has always been that the short subject, step-child of the motion picture, is the poor and defenseless object which suffers the most severe buffetting from the tide of the dual bill. It is said that with two features on the bill there is no room for the short subject. Dual billing is widespread. Why, then, does the output of shorts production maintain its level numerically, and in certain phases rise above its level in quality?

The answer must be obvious. The public, which somehow manages to pay the bills, and pay an industry to be an industry, wants short subjects. If it did not, however much there might be of forced selling of short subjects and like devices, the quality would largely fade, the quantity inevitably would drop. Such, however, is not the case.

That the short subjects surrounding a feature may make or break a program on the theatre's bill is not necessarily true. But that good shorts, well diversified, may make a good program decidedly better, and considerably enhance audience enjoyment, there can be no question.

Wealth of Diversity

Especially is this true today, with the new season's product. The showman has a wealth of diversity to draw upon. Color, new ideas and novelties of one sort or other are scattered throughout the short subject program in the aggregate. There are weak spots, but in general the level may be considered fairly high. Certainly it is as high as other years, and is likely enough to prove itself higher. There are several factors which may be taken to account for that improvement, and which also may be taken to indicate that the short subject is perhaps more of a definite and important aspect of the show than it ever was.

There is a continuous effort on the part of all producers to seek out new ideas, new material for the short subject. Witness the trip last week of Lou Diamond, head of Paramount's short subject department, for studio conferences in Hollywood, and in search of likely short subject material. The company is interested, it is reported, in looking at any single reel subjects with a view to adding them to its shorts program for the 1935-36 season. The effort to find new material is partly bred of healthful competition, partly the result of a realization that the short is important.

The increased use and more importantly the improved quality of color have been vital factors in improvement of the short subject. Its use first came with the cartoon, and Walt Disney made a large and significant "most" of that opportunity. With the increased effectiveness of the Disney subjects came notable advances in the cartoon material of other companies. They suddenly had something new to shoot at, a new high mark, and several of them have come amazingly close to hitting the mark.

Color went naturally, and inevitably, to those other short subjects which lent themselves, with respect to subject matter, to the use of color. Travel subjects have improved vastly, notably the FitzPatrick group, with the use of natural color, a mark which was set to a large extent by Audio Productions' "Musical Moods." It is expensive, but apparently it is also worthwhile. That others will follow the leaders in bringing color to the travel subject is unquestioned.

Musicals were another group to which color became increasingly adaptable. Warner, with its Vitaphone Technicolor musical subjects, made in Hollywood, with the major studio's facilities there available, turned out several musicals which were vastly superior to the run-of-the-mill black and white subjects of the type.

There is a continuous striving for new novelties, such as Pete Smith's ramblingly ridiculous but successful comments which accompany several groups of MGM subjects. His Goofy Movies of last year has been eliminated on the new season's schedule. The reason, it would appear, lies in the fact that they were not nearly so funny as they were silly. There is a considerable difference, and the public makes its opinion felt.

The March of Time, produced as an offshoot of a phenomenally successful magazine style, a new type of reporting of the news, found the short subject an ideal medium for doing visually, and incidentally vocally, what had been so well done on the printed page.

The Woodard Brothers took the camera and the microscope to the insect world, and came back with revelations of life and activity there, activity which makes for amazing drama in the short subject.

Vaudeville Brought Back

Universal, in a sense, brought vaudeville back, by using a group of totally unrelated acts, pinned together via a master of ceremonies, in almost any type of setting, making them into a short subject, and finding success with it. So, too, with its Stranger than Fiction, wherein are picked up and pictured oddities the world over, a type of material of real and wide appeal.

The short subject producer has come to make full use of the value of pre-sold, popular names, taken chiefly from the field of radio, and likewise has turned his lenses on the events of the day which in timeliness, for one reason or another, have the public fancy, and strike a note which brings results.

But in one particular, taken by and large, the short subject seems to be at its weakest. There is a large improvement in other phases, but in that type which may be said to have been once the very backbone of the short product, the level of other types is not maintained, the two-reel straight comedy. That there will be a real effort in the new season by short subject producers to improve the straight comedy with the material available there can be no question. That they will succeed in materially improving the general level of that type of subject is open to question.

The reason for the weakness is simple, the solution of the problem more difficult. The reason lies largely in the story. Players are a part of the problem, but a comparatively minor phase. There are good players, good comedians among the short comedy casts. When their comedies fall down, in a vast majority of the cases the story is at fault. Such comedians as Charley Chase, Henry Armetta, Leon Errol, Buster Keaton, Ernest Truex, Thelma Todd, Patsy Kelly, the Our Gang youngsters, Joe Cook, Edgar Kennedy, Tom Howard, the Three Stooges, Shemp Howard and numerous others, devoting a large part of their screen time to the short comedy, have appeared in comedies which have failed to amuse, failed even mildly to entertain, despite the hard work of the player.

Invariably when this is true the story has been weak, its situations have substituted noise and slapstick for cleverness, its dialogue has had silliness or triteness in place of laugh-provoking lines. There are exceptions, of course, and it is somewhat unfortunate that they are such notable exceptions. Star names have been and will be used next season, but they must have good stories to make good comedies.

PRODUCTION CODE vs. THE UNBELIEVERS

Entertainment Quality Found Improved; Popularity of the More Torrid Players Still Holds

by DOUGLAS W. CHURCHILL

Written in Hollywood

The first year is over and the theatres and studios are still open. Last July when purity reared its ugly head and frightened the industry half to death, there were those who honestly believed that the end was at hand. Acute is the memory of the panic and predictions. Bewildered, resentful, unbelieving, those who opposed the reform were loud as they talked of the black future of the screen.

Some of the prognostications are still vividly in mind:

> The screen was to become wishy-washy.
> It being impossible to give an honest picture of life, the customers would quickly tire of "fallacious drama" and would quit art's temples.
> It was not only impractical but impossible to substitute a diet of sugar and water for the customary blood and raw meat.
> Were it not for the fact that the clean-up was a passing fad to be quickly forgotten, Hollywood was doomed.

There were a hundred others, all equally alarming. But today, should fact be matched with each prediction, a deadly parallel of considerable import would result.

Still Unbelievers

There are still unbelievers in Hollywood. There are still those who are afraid to discuss openly the problems and accomplishments of the first year. For one, I didn't know this until I began preparation of this ponderous tome. Six simple, factual questions were asked of the major lots; three replied with alacrity, two refused point-blank and one was evasive. In a business ridden with suspicion and to a reporter who prefers to put the worst interpretation on everything, this attitude after a year of reasonably smooth working reform indicated that all is not just what we supposed.

But in spite of this sudden and surprising revelation, the past year was rather a pretty one. Its history can be recounted with considerable relish. If there are those who still resent and fear the code, they are in the minority and so firmly has the system apparently been affixed to the industry that they affect the picture as a whole very little.

It might not be amiss to sketch familiar history in order that this may be a reasonably comprehensive record. When resentment and protests by the public reached a high point during the first half of 1934, as an act of self-preservation a branch of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors (the Hays office) was created, known as the Production Code Administration. Two-fisted, leather-lunged Joseph I. Breen was placed in charge and his voice began to boom and his fist pound desks on July 15th.

Those first weeks were critical weeks. In the majority of spots his efforts were met with active opposition. Mr. Breen alone can tell the inside story of those fights. From bits that were gathered as he lashed through the wall they attempted to build in front of him, it is known that stupidity, arrogance and open hostility greeted him in many quarters. Most producers were in accord with the new order but even in studios that had pledged themselves to his support he found individuals who were only subdued by force.

It was a delicate job during July and August. Pictures had been completed that were unsatisfactory, but had he demanded their complete purification, the financial burden on studios would have been terrific and the flow of films to the theatre impeded. So he compromised on many, cleaned them up as best he could and took a chance that the improvement they showed would satisfy those who had demanded reform. The changed tone of the films was so noticeable to outsiders that they met his efforts with understanding and had faith that in the end all conditions would be remedied.

Never Let Him Down

Threats were leveled at Mr. Breen. Producers with hundreds of thousands invested in completed pictures, and who thought the whole idea pretty silly anyway, attempted to go over his head. First they tried to bluff him, however. When this failed they took their problems up with the Hays board in New York and it must be recorded to the credit of those gentlemen that, while they were as heavily interested financially in the celluloid as were the studios, they never once let him down.

Bit by bit the resistance of the opposition was broken down. One producer who called Mr. Breen early in the fight to tell him that he was retiring from business and allowing Breen to make all of the pictures (to which Joe replied that if he couldn't do a better job than was being done, he'd get out of the business, too) ten months later went to the Code executive's office and thanked him for being so ruthless and improving his studio's product. Producers who thought they could yell as loudly as Breen, and discovered they couldn't, gradually saw the light as reports began coming in from the box-office. Eventually most of these gentlemen joined those who had seen the value of a rejuvenated screen at the outset and a surface tranquillity prevailed, marred only by occasional and inconsequential disturbances.

But that is history. The results are the engaging matter of the moment. A summary of conditions and attitudes gathered by observation during every day of the past year are here united with opinions of those affected—the producers—voiced a year after reform began.

On the whole, the entertainment quality of films has been improved during the past year. Those in accord with the clean-up regard the code as responsible; those who oppose it say that the screen would have advanced anyway. Perhaps the splendid pictures that have reached the theatres or are in the offing would have been made had reform never set in but this seems doubtful.

Winfield Sheehan at Fox and Fred S. Meyer of Universal were both emphatic in attributing better films to the code demands.

A. M. Botsford, executive assistant to Henry Herzbrun of Paramount, declared: "While some special dramatic material has had to be sacrificed because of the Production Code, in general the entertainment quality of films has improved because the Code has done away with many censorable pictures made in bad taste without the additional merit of having any dramatic value."

Eliminated Censorable Stories

In answering the quesion, "Has the Code directed producers' attention to better and finer stories?" Botsford continued, "Necessarily the producer has had to eliminate stories of definite dramatic value but censorable, and this has made him pay more particular attention and conduct a more exhaustive search for stories which has been beneficial." Both Meyer and Sheehan were in accord with this.

When the Code was first applied, it was believed that many of the more torrid performers would suffer. Their popularity had been built on rather flashy and daring stories. But a check on them today indicates that they still hold the same rating and those who have sagged have done so solely because of poor vehicles. There seems to be no specific instance in which popularity has waned because of the sweetened flavor of yarns.

One thing that interested most of Hollywood a year ago was whether the whole business was a passing phase and whether the public would forget and the studios would begin creeping in with their old stuff. On that score the three executives who would discuss the matter at all declared:

Mr. Sheehan—"If the screen is to survive, the change must be permanent. The clean-up was a gold strike for Hollywood. Pictures can't go back."

Mr. Meyer—"The screen will never return to its former habits."

Mr. Botsford—"I do not think the code can be regarded as a passing phase. The improvement will naturally continue."

These same three men—and I sense the same attitude among a substantial number of executives on other lots—believe that were the matter put to a vote today the leading production factors would endorse retention of the code.

Code conformance seems to be a matter of

WINFIELD SHEEHAN RESIGNS AS HEAD OF FOX FILM PRODUCTION

Resignation Becomes Effective on Completion of 'Way Down East'; In Executive Posts with Company for Over 20 Years

by TERRY RAMSAYE

There were three around the desk in Movietone City at Westwood Wednesday afternoon, Sidney Kent, president of Fox Film Corporation, and Joseph Schenck, newly arrived chairman of the board, and Winfield Sheehan.

Outside the pepper trees drooped in California's tropic July sun. There was a certain pulsing tension over the lot that was all but visible through the shimmering heat. All the studio folk who passed that way cast curious, and furtive, glances at that certain office. Only a poker-faced Japanese gardener, pecking at imaginary weeds under the office window, seemed indifferent. The word was out that the "big bosses" were in final session. There had been talk, rather cautious talk, for weeks, ever since the wires from New York brought the tidings that Mr. Schenck and Darryl Zanuck, his producer at Twentieth Century, had arrived at coalition arrangements with Mr. Kent.

At two o'clock of the afternoon the president and the chairman of the board emerged and there was presently a statement to the press: Winfield Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of production, announced his resignation, effective with the completion of "Way Down East," his major production now in work.

In that instantaneous way that the tidings run in Hollywood the story was out and about at every place from the Brown Derbys to Leveys and all the way down to Palm Springs, Agua Caliente and way stations. When there is a change at the top where contracts and stars are made, there is a tremor through all of movieland.

Three Proposals Before Him

Meanwhile Mr. Sheehan gave it out that he would complete "Way Down East," which has been in the making now a month, and that after that he would take a rest and make up his mind about something else or what next. It is understood that there are before him some three proposals pertaining to pictures, to be considered.

This development of Wednesday concludes a career of more than twenty years of Mr. Sheehan's connection with Fox Film Corporation, all spent in executive posts. Concerned exclusively with studio operation since 1927, he has produced an imposing array of pictures, sound and silent.

His latest pictures, beside "Way Down East," which is now in work, are "Curly Top," starring Shirley Temple, and "The Farmer Takes a Wife," starring Janet Gaynor.

WINFIELD SHEEHAN

Other talking pictures produced by Mr. Sheehan since 1927 include: "In Old Arizona," "Movietone Follies," "They Had to See Paris," "Sunny Side Up," "Cock-Eyed World," "Daddy Long Legs," "East Lynne," "Behind That Curtain," "Carolina," "The Man Who Came Back," "State Fair," "The Sky Hawk," "Common Clay," "Merely Mary Ann," "Over the Hill," "Dance Team," "David Harum," "Bad Girl," "Street Angel," "Paddy the Next Best Thing," "Cavalcade."

Among the silent films produced by Mr. Sheehan were: "Seventh Heaven," "What Price Glory," "Sunrise," "Mother Knows Best," "Red Dance," "Mother Machree," "Carmen."

Mr. Sheehan came to New York from Buffalo in 1902 to be a reporter on the New York Morning World. He was not yet quite twenty but he had had a touch of the Spanish-American war, a dash of reporting on the Buffalo Courier and a spell at Canisius College. Already it was to be observed that he moved about. In New York he quickly discovered the who's who and became executive secretary to Rhinelander Waldo, ex-fire commissioner, and moved to the same post with Mr. Waldo when he became Mayor Gaynor's police commissioner.

In the business of knowing who was who he came to know Big Tim Sullivan of Tammany Hall and Fourteenth street. And Fourteenth street brings us almost immediately to William Fox, exhibitor, and in some of his theatre projects a partner of Mr. Sullivan.

Was Field Marshal for William Fox in Fight with Patents Company in 1912-14; Brought Out Daring 'Vamp', Theda Bara

Now it came to pass in the period of 1912-14 that Mr. Fox, with his Greater New York Film Rental Company, had a deal of controversy with the Motion Picture Patents Company, which supplied the product he distributed—under injunction order. Mr. Fox was the only "independent" who fought the Patents Company using its own pictures. The fighting was not all in the courts and the strenuous Mr. Sheehan was the field marshal of the war. When in 1914 the dawn of the feature era made it apparent that, win or lose, the Patents Company producers would not continue to be important sources of product, Mr. Fox organized the Box Office Attractions Company, to make pictures, and Mr. Sheehan was its general manager.

Was William Fox's Spokesman

From thence down the years Mr. Sheehan was the right hand of William Fox in executive capacities and his spokesman to the industry, and the world.

The first signal impression of this diligent Mr. Sheehan upon the amusement world was the presentation of that world famous vampire role actress Theda Bara—who was, of course, a fiction created out of the personality of a lady known to the stage as Miss De Coppett, and known to herself as Theodosia Goodman. She entered in a fanfare of Sheehan publicity as the star of "A Fool There Was" and flourished exceedingly for several years.

Swift Reaction to Sound

Mr. Sheehan's swift reaction to the coming of sound to the screen and the building of Movietone City marked one of the most significant phases of his career with the Fox organization. Under his administration the Fox organization met the tide of sound and the revolution of the industry with the enthusiasm of participants.

When, as a part of the great financial complex of the nation, difficulties came upon the Fox Film Corporation, differences arose between Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Fox. When Mr. Fox left the company, Mr. Sheehan remained, continuing with production through the Harley Clarke administration of Fox affairs, and the sequel administration of Edward R. Tinker, representing the Chase National Bank interests, thence onward into the Sidney Kent administration.

It was in 1915 that Mr. Sheehan began the organization of the West Coast Studios. Then, something more than a decade ago, he developed the Fox Newsreel, and about eight years ago, he transferred his activities from the distribution of pictures to the studio, there to devote his entire time to problems peculiar to production.

Mr. Sheehan has these many years been one of Hollywood's most highly paid production executives—the most successful reporter who ever broke into the movies.

Dent Talk Report Denied by Hanson

Oscar F. Hanson, president of Empire Films, Ltd., of Toronto, Canadian distributors for British International pictures, in a communication to MOTION PICTURE HERALD denies a statement attributed to Arthur Dent, sales manager of British International, carried in a Toronto dispatch in last week's issue. The Canadian dispatch credited Mr. Dent as saying that "Canadians could not expect the British Isles to buy wheat and other Dominion products when Canadians refused to accept British motion pictures."

The dispatch referred to the annual sales convention of Empire Films which Mr. Dent was invited to address. It reported that Mr. Dent's remarks to the effect that the British industry did not propose to stand any longer for the "entirely dissatisfactory grosses" accruing to British producers from the release of their pictures in Canada so disturbed the gathering that adjournment in disorder on seven occasions was threatened. Mr. Hanson states, "Our meeting was in no disorder at any time.

"I can say definitely to you," continues Mr. Hanson, "that the relationship existing between B. I. P. and Empire Films Limited is the most pleasant, and further we value this relationship because it is definitely an asset to our Company."

Seeks Antitrust Suit on Doubles

Charles H. Olive, president of Allied Theatre Owners of the District of Columbia, has conferred with Russell Hardy of the Department of Justice at Washington relative to the double feature situation, with the possibility of bringing suit against four major distributors.

The action is looked upon as the first step taken to ascertain the legality of double featuring, despite contractual clauses banning them under certain circumstances. MGM, Paramount, Warner and United Artists would be named in the proposed action as in violation of the Clayton and Sherman antitrust laws, although the focal point of the case would be Clause K in the MGM contract, which prohibits double featuring and provides for certain penalties, such as loss of protection, additional delay from national release date and the like. Paul Williams is engaged in a study of documents furnished by Mr. Olive and Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board of the national Allied organization.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, meeting this week in special session, approved a new double featuring agreement, to replace that which expired on July 8. The plan calls for unrestricted dualling of films which have not played downtown first runs. It was said 50 theatres had signed, the full 82 being necessary to make the agreement binding. A committee was named to draft a code of fair practice for the Cleveland area, proposing the elimination of premiums and the like.

FILM "PRODUCERS" SENTENCED TO JAIL

Four self-styled motion picture promoters from Hollywood, in San Francisco on a "casting" mission to sign potential child film stars for an alleged $100,000 all-children picture, were each sentenced to five days in jail by Municipal Judge Sylvan Lazarus.

"You are chiseling racketeers of the meanest type," said the judge, "because you prey upon the love of mothers for their children, and the natural desire of parents to see their children succeed. I find you all guilty of vagrancy, and sentence you to pay a fine of $25 each, or five days in jail." Unable to pay the fine, they went to jail. They gave the names of Paul B. Mahoney, general manager of "All Star Productions", Jack Rochelle, Theodore O'Day and Leroy Arends. The four were arrested as the result of an investigation carried on by the San Francisco Better Business Bureau and the local police department.

Astor Action in Chicago Settled

A settlement out of court has been reached in the suits of the Astor theatre in Chicago against distributors and competing theatres. The actions charged the distributors conspired with each other and with competing exhibitors to withhold service because of a 10-cent admission policy at the Astor and sought an injunction against the continued refusal to service contracts without the 10-cent admission clause. Counsel announced the settlement in Justice Woodward's United States court, and the actions were dismissed.

Under the terms of the settlement all major product is available to the Astor in the 26th week after first run for exhibition at 10 cents until 6:30 o'clock and at 15 cents thereafter. The settlement also involved a cash payment to the plaintiff in the amount reported to be $10,000, collected among the several defendants. The settlement is seen as a precedent.

Federal Judge George Moore in St. Louis last week reached a definite decision to postpone the government's antitrust suit against Warner, Paramount and RKO until the fall, when the trial will be docketed in the September term, opening September 16. It is considered possible that before Judge Moore leaves on his vacation, about August 1, he will hand down decisions on a motion for a demurrer entered on behalf of RKO Distributing Corporation and its president, Ned Depinet, and on a request for a bill of particulars made by counsel for the defendants.

Merritt Lane, counsel for major distributors in the antitrust suit against them by the Ledkirk Amusement Company, and Louis Nizer, associate counsel, conferred in Newark, N. J., last week on the case, which is not expected to be reached for trial until the fall.

Production Code Vs. Unbelievers

serious concern on all lots. Whether individuals are still recalcitrant or not matters little. They know that the Code is working and that there is no escape from it. Months of losing battles have proven it. So they, along with those who are enthusiastic about the new order, are lending every bit of cooperation possible.

Most lots have men who administer the code in the studio. These people act as go-betweens with the Breen office. They are abused by their own officials and they journey to the Hays office and are blamed for whatever is wrong by the Code administrators. They don't seem to mind so much anymore, however, for fate was kind and fairly affable gentlemen were entrusted with the work.

Deft Dialogue Now

Where at first quite crude double-meaning lines were injected in scripts in the hope that they would get by, now subtlety rules. And there seems to be no reaction against nicely written, spicy dialogue. Probably the greatest objection to the films of a year ago was that they were crudely done. Certainly the lines of "No More Ladies" contained as much meaning as any that have been written, yet they were not in the least offensive. At least, Metro received no complaints. And the Code executive has indicated no resentment over deft dialogue done in good taste.

There was considerable alarm expressed, even by those who welcomed the reform a year ago, that the forces that had demanded the change would not be satisfied with normal entertainment and having frightened this huge industry, would press on and restrict the scope of the cinema. This failed to materialize. True, many saccharine films have been made but for the most part, as in the case of the Gene Stratton-Porter yarns, they have been vigorous in a fashion and have been entertaining.

No Namby-Pamby Results

I do not believe it can be said that any actual namby-pamby pictures have resulted from the reform. In contrast, there have been some pretty sturdy offerings. Certainly nothing more stalwart than "The Informer" or "G-Men" or "Black Fury" or the current "Barbary Coast" could have come from an unrestricted screen. Without the Code, these might have carried a more liberal conception of life but they obviously haven't suffered because of the demand for good taste. Nor were such pictures as "No More Ladies," "The Thin Man" and "Star of Midnight" less entertaining because they were well written.

As with a bird on a rock, there is never any way of knowing how Hollywood will jump. But looking at results, talking to the studios that are frank about their feelings, viewing box-office receipts and the increased interest throughout the land in motion pictures, it is a pretty safe prediction to say that Hollywood believes that reform was needed and now that it is here, it will be well to cling to it.

The first year wasn't as horrible as the town was sure it would be.

Gable, Harlow And Garnett The Tops

"CHINA SEAS"
(MGM)

Associate Producer..........Albert Lewin
Direction ....Tay Garnett
Novel ....Crosbie Garstin
Screen Play: Jules Furthman, James Kevin McGuinness.
Photography ....Ray June

Cast: Clark Gable, Jean Harlow, Wallace Beery, Lewis Stone, Rosalind Russell, Dudley Digges, C. Aubrey Smith, Robert Benchley, William Henry, Live deMaigret, Lilian Bond, Edward Brophy, Soo Young, Carol Ann Beery, Akim Tamiroff, Ivan Lebedeff.

"China Seas" is one of the best straight movies produced in many a day. It has everything that any audience could want and is chock full of the stuff that shoved the picture business to the top of all amusement enterprises.

Any picture that offers the combined talents of Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Wallace Beery is destined for great box-office success, but place these three in a story that has all the thrills, chills and entertaining values of "China Seas," and you have an important picture and one that will bring out the old fans and create a lot of new ones.

Jules Furthman and James K. McGuinness have taken what was an idea by Crosbie Garstin and shaped it into a story with at least a half dozen plots, all taking place on a boat sailing the China seas, mastered by Clark Gable. On this boat are passengers from all walks of life, with entirely different destinations, plus a cargo of gold that is the bait for Wallace Beery and his conniving pirates. During the voyage you are treated to a typhoon, a great drunk by Robert Benchley, and Harlow's greatest characterization as a lady of easy virtue in love with Gable.

The yarn is packed with suspense and moves at lightning speed, with the main characters backed by as fine a cast as has ever been thrown together for any one picture, all under the masterful direction of Tay Garnett. There is never a dull moment in the picture, nor is there a moment for the audience to relax, for if it's not sitting on the edge of its seat thrilled by the plot's intrigue, it is laughing at the antics of Benchley and others or enraptured by the romance indulged in by Harlow in her winning battle for Gable.

Clark Gable plays the captain of the ship with ease and assurance that will win him many new admirers (as though he needed any new fans). The captain is a natural for Gable, a kindly fellow who hides his warm heart with gruffness. It is a grand piece of casting.

Jean Harlow takes another step forward as a dramatic actress. It is unquestionably the finest portrayal she has ever given, one that offers a wide emotional range.

Wallace Beery is swell as the undercover leader of the pirates. His work is minus any of his usual mannerisms and he plays a straight menace. Lewis Stone, too, has a greater opportunity than has fallen to his lot for some time. Rosalind Russell is again impressive. She is going far. Robert Benchley does the best drunk the screen has ever seen.

Among the others of the perfect cast, there are particularly outstanding moments by William Henry, an up and coming juvenile, Dudley Digges, C. Aubrey Smith, Akim Tamiroff, Lilian Bond, Ivan Lebedeff and Edward Brophy.

Production is ace high in every department, and the photography of Ray June tops even his usual high standard. Several of his shots, the lighting on the bridge for instance, should be framed. The storm sequence is a technical wonder. Herbert Stothart's musical score also deserves your attention.

"China Seas" is sure to ring a merry tune on every cash register. It has everything.

Direction	Clarence Brown
Original Story	Leo Tolstoy
Screen Play	Clemence Dane and Salka Viertel
Dialogue Adaptation	S. N. Behrman
Photography	William Daniels

Cast: Greta Garbo, Fredric March, Freddie Bartholomew, Maureen O'Sullivan, May Robson, Basil Rathbone, Reginald Owen, Phoebe Foster, Reginald Denny, Gyles Isham, Joan Marsh, Ethel Griffies, Harry Beresford, Sarah Padden, Cora Sue Collins, Mary Forbes, Guy D'Emery, Buster Phelps, Sidney Bracy, Harry Allen, Ella Ethridge.

A glorious, vital Garbo . . . A Garbo who is not only allure personified but with a new grace and charm, a vivacity that will send her fan following soaring to new heights. It's a classic love story told magnificently pictorially, that is thrilling in its production qualities, that is a triumph for Clarence Brown and that has a glorious music score by Herbert Stothart.

Perhaps this is still further argument for re-makes. At any rate, it is proof that practice makes perfect, and this well known story lives once more on the screen and is faithful to the tragedy of unhallowed love. Anna dies once more in her tragic flight to love from a cold, cruel husband. A love for which she gives up her child and a love which must eventually desert her.

Garbo's pedestal is not only restored, but is made to look unbreakable in this picture. Her moods are varied and sincere. There is a minimum of close-ups devoted solely to her beauty. She is a woman to love and to be loved. Frederic March, as the lover, is necessarily over-shadowed by both the character and portrayal of Garbo, but his work is good and there's plenty of reason to believe that a woman would leave home for him.

Freddie Bartholomew snatches scenes away from people before they know it. He is a remarkable actor and literally stops the picture twice with his genius. Basil Rathbone is magnificently irritating as the convention-bound, petty government official who is the husband of Anna. Reginald Owen, Maureen O'Sullivan, Phoebe Foster, Reginald Denny and Gyles Isham, score in their parts, and the others in the large cast give generously to make that cast good.

Clarence Brown, definitely, should always direct Garbo. He seems to be the one who can bring out all the facets in the brilliantly fashioned Garbo, and he has an especial talent for making the familiar bright and new.

A very special bow must go to Adrian for his costuming. It's an awkward era to which he brings grace, and Garbo has never looked lovelier. And another very special bow to Daniels for his photography. Particularly for the train scenes. And still another bow to Herbert Stothart for the music.

No offense to the writers for putting them last . . . the others so seldom get a break. Their work is good . . . it's sincere . . . and beards do not grow on their words. Not to forget the Chester Hale Mazurka and the Wallman ballets.

From a production standpoint, even MGM has rarely if ever achieved such a triumph. Cedric Gibbons and his competent staff of art directors have simply outdone themselves with the sets and their dressings—never gaudy, but always luxurious. It is one of the finest jobs we have seen for many a day.

"Karenina" is destined to be a terrific money maker. It will renew that big box-office interest in Garbo, will send early patrons out talking and bringing to the theater others who have, for too long, been sitting at home.

Showmen should and must get behind this attraction, build it for one of their greatest openings. The rest will take care of itself.

China Seas

Here's a holiday in Dixie for theatre operators. Few pictures come along that will stand the limit in exploitation then live up to the bally. 'China Seas' not only lends itself to exploitation, but is crammed with selling angles. It should pay the interest on many a theatre's mortgage.

Ably produced by Irving Thalberg and supervised by Al Lewin, have stinted nothing to make it top notch entertainment. Picture is eyefilling from start to finish. Jules Furthman and James McGuinness have compiled a yarn of piracy on the China coast that is almost perfect picture material. Tay Garnett's robust direction of the story gives the fans all they want in the line of romance, thrills and s.a. To top this, the Beery-Gable-Harlow trio contribute performances that are standouts.

Gable is the skipper of a tramp in the China coast trade. He is mixed up with Jean Harlow, the Orient's number one trollop. Beery heads a gang of Chinese pirates. Gable sails for Singapore with the three on board plus Rosalind Russell, his old sweetheart in England. The two girls fail to hit if off when Miss Harlow decides she is getting the air for the English girl. Boat is carrying several million pounds in bullion which Gable is out to get.

Typhoon comes up, almost sinks the ship. With better weather, Beery enlists the aid of the jealous Harlow to steal the guns from the ship's arsenal. Pirates headed by Ivan Lebedeff board the ship, kill half the crew, torture Gable but find no money. Gable suspects Beery and the girl, questions them and she spills the beans. However, she had tried to warn Gable of the impending holdup only to be thrown out of his cabin. Before much can be done Beery committs suicide and Gable realizes he loves Miss Harlow after all. In the end he decided to make her an honest woman.

With a good story to start with Garnett has given the picture everything. He has not missed a single opportunity in giving the picture suspense, dramatic tension and smoothness. Dialog is near perfect for this type of picture. It's no easy job to make a flock of renegades tough through dialog. In most cases, screen tough guys express themselves like pansies. In this case they're tough and there's no mistake.

Gable, Harlow and Beery turn in performances that should bring raves from their fans. Rosalind Russell makes her portrayal of the cultured English girl, a direct contrast to Miss Harlow, one of the picture's standouts. Robert Benchley, as a drunk, gets a load of laughs with swell dialog. William Henry, the juve, is pleasing as a young officer though his scenes during the typhoon could be cut considerably. C. Aubrey Smith is excellent as the owner of the steamship line. Dudley Digges, as the chief officer, handles his assignment neatly. Lewis Stone, though his assignment is small, makes it count. Lillian Bond, Eddie Brophy and Akim Tamiroff, in small assignments are very good Charles Irwin and Pat Flaherty as officers on the ship also keep up the standard of good performances.

Ray June's photography is class throughout. Art direction, particularly the scenes of the Hong Kong docks, is excellent.

SMALL TOWN GIRL

CHAPTER 1

THE Weare is a meandering and gracious river curving in wide reaches through the lowlands to the sea; and it rises, as any New Hampshire man will tell you, in Carvel, down back of Cap'n Somes's barn The Captain, after his last voyage—he was in the China trade—turned his back on the ocean and came a hundred miles inland to make himself a home, and the big brick-ended house he built, with the famous barn behind, stands about a mile south of Carvel village, in the angle where White River flow together to form the Weare

The Captain brought his bride to Carvel, and his daughter was born there. After he died, his daughter wedded Will Brannan; and Will came to live with his wife and her mother When Emily and Kay Brannan were babies, Grandmother Somes died, and the name died with her; but the house was still "Cap'n Somes's place" to Carvel and the countryside around

Emily and Kay grew older, and Emily went to Wellesley, and on a certain fine morning in mid-June, Kay Brannan walked uptown to get the mail. Will had a box in the Post Office, and usually brought the mail when he came home to lunch, but today he was indisposed and would stay abed. George Hastings would have sent the mail with their grocery order if he had been asked to do so; but his truck would not deliver till late in the forenoon, and this was Monday, so that there was apt to be a letter from Emily. Kay was always eager for Emily's letters, so she came to town

She walked; for she was used to walking, and this day was warm, with a soft wind full of pleasant whisperings. Leaves were unfolding, like butterflies trying their wings. The new grass was springing from the sod, confidently expecting to grow tall and lush, as ignorant of lawnmowers as a college senior of the discipline of the world. There was some late shad bush in bloom along the river, and flowers in garden beds along the way.

Where such a girl as Kay is concerned, dimensions are of no importance; but for the sake of the record, Kay was small, only a fraction over five feet. She was bareheaded today, and against her mother's prudent advice she wore neither sweater nor coat. She walked as though she enjoyed doing so, with shoulders straight and snug, and head high, and her heels clipped briskly. She seemed not to hurry, so easily she moved; yet for a person whose utmost comfortable stride was only a little more than two feet, she covered ground at a surprising speed

Her eyes were alert, and she missed nothing along the way. Small matters may assume a large importance in Carvel, remote from the passing world, isolate and self-contained. There is a railroad through Newfield, some eight miles to the north, at the foot of the Lake, and another at Dexter, seven miles to the south; but Carvel itself lies midway between the two lines, untouched by them Even the main motor routes to the mountains pass to one side or the other; so that the town sees little of the transient stream of summer folk There are a few cottages on Coos Pond, three or four miles toward Newfield; but these are for the most part owned by Carvel people, who use them as summer homes or as resorts for week-end vacations, or for winter outings when the snow lies deep on the ice across the pond

The Post Office is diagonally opposite the entrance to the Power Company's offices, on the village square A few stores and a filling station cluster near, and so far as the business section of Carvel is concerned, that is all But along Main Street there are pleasant homes, on well-spaced lawns, the houses fresh with clean white paint, thrifty and self-contained

As Kay came to town today, folk went out of their way to meet her face to face for the pleasure of her bright "Good morning." In front of Chuck Webster's filling station, she overtook Lillian Radford, a few years older than herself, and slipped her arm through that of the other girl The gesture was affectionate

"Soon be vacation now, Lillian!" she said smilingly Lillian taught in the Carvel school.

"I'll be glad of it," the older girl wearily agreed. "The children don't do any real work after the weather gets warm. There's really no sense in keeping them in." They entered the Post Office and approached the wicket togther, and Sue Clemons—Ed Clemons was Postmaster—handed Kay two letters and a paper

"Nothing for you Lillian," she said.

Kay, looking at her mail, cried. "Here's one from Emily!" as happily as though this were not expected

"Oh, I've been meaning to tell you!" Lillian exclaimed. "Miss Farmer is resigning after this year I'm sure Emily can get her place. You know, she teaches the fourth grade Miss Farmer hasn't told anyone but me, so if Emily applies right away she'll have the best chance."

"I'll tell her," Kay promised "I'll write to her tonight."

"I had to wait a year after I graduated before there was an opening," Lillian explained almost jealously "Emily's lucky to find something right away."

"She certainly is," Kay agreed "And thank you for telling me She'll be so grateful to you "

Something exploded outside the Post Office, and a motorcycle stopped at the door and Elmer Radford alighted and came in, clanging in climbing spurs, an array of pliers and wrenches hanging from the heavy belt strapped around his overalls, a leather loop hooked to the belt. He saw his sister and Kay, and his ears burned red

"H'lo, Lil," he said "H'lo, Kay! Got the mail, did you, Lil? Thought you'd be at school by now"

"Your spurs are diggin

"Check," he assured her "But we've got to get everything in shape for the new boss He's due the end of this week"

The imminent arrival of a new superintendent at the Power Plant was the big news of the day in Carvel "Oh, who is he?" Kay asked. Her father, as one of the older men in the organization, had held some vain ambitions, when the office became vacant a month before She knew his grievous disappointment when word came that the place would be filled from outside.

"Ned Pastor from Manchester," Elmer told her "He graduated from Tech last year His old man's director in the Company"

"H'lo, Kay," he remarked "Something today?"

"Two heads of lettuce, Kay told him. "And have you good tomatoes?"

George said he had, he volunteered to deliver the things, but Kay shook her head "I can carry them, well as not," she decided "I'm going right home, and it will save your truck a trip."

"Hear anything from Emily?" George asked slowly, intent upon the business in hand A friendly amusement showed for a moment in Kay's eyes

George nodded and he said diffidently

"I kind of figured I might be in Boston about that time, might go out and see her, if she weren't too busy Wrote and told her so" He added doubtfully 'But she didn't say anything"

"She'd be glad to see you, I know," Kay assured him You're her oldest friend, George Emily's very fond of you'

George grinned with pleasure, and he presented the parcel "That all?" he asked; and Kay nodded and took it and turned away

"I heard tell young Pastor is coming to run the Power Plant" George

"Kay, Kay, what do you think it's all settled, I'm going to Holyoke in the fall. I got word today, and I'm going, I'm going, I'm so excited I can hardly stand, Kay, I don't see how you've stood it, to wait so long, if I had to wait two years I'd die I think you're marvelous but I

"No need for you to wait There's only one of you," Kay reminded her, smiling Nancy never used periods. She talked until she was interrupted, took a quick breath while anyone else was speaking, and burst into words again at the first lull

"I should think you'd just hate Emily!" the girl cried, as Kay paused "Having to wait for her to get through "

"I don't," Kay assured her "I feel as if I'd helped, some, by waiting We're awfully proud of Emily you know She's done so wonderfully. And of course Father couldn't afford to have us both in Wellesley at once Really I haven't minded at all."

"But, darling!" Nancy protested "To just sit and twiddle your thumbs, when you're all ready and everything, I just couldn't bear it I don't know how I'm going to wait even till fall, just think Kay we'll be in college together, at the same time I mean, even if we are in different colleges, I'll certainly be glad to get out of this town!"

Kay smiled in faint amusement "Will you? I like Carvel," she declared

"So do I, of course, Nancy virtuously insisted "In a way, but you can get tired of a place, don't you think, I'm never coming back here, I promise you, even if I have to just slave, or wash dishes or anything, never, never "

"Not even for vacations?" Kay asked, her eyes twinkling

"Oh, of course, vacations, Nancy assented, "and new clothes, and going to parties, and being important, but I mean to really live, you know what I mean, don't be absurd, Kay, I'll bet you never come back either, I don't believe Emily will stay here after she's graduated you wait and see "

"Of course, she will," Kay insisted. Lillian Radford told me this morning that Miss Farmer is resigning after this year I expect Emily will try to get her job"

EATON OF YALE ASKS FILM SUPPORT NATIONAL CHAIN OF STAGE THEATRES

Calls Motion Picture and Legitimate Each Dependent upon Other; Says Circuit Would Train Talent for Screen

Active support by the motion picture industry of a circuit of legitimate theatres in the key cities, "merely as a sound business investment" through assurance of the flow of creative talent that goes into films, was urged this weekend by Walter Prichard Eaton, veteran authority on the drama and associate professor of playwrighting at Yale University. At the same time, he agreed with Burns Mantle, dramatic critic of the New York Daily News that the interdependence of the stage and screen demands that cooperation supplant hostility, for preservation of the two.

Mr. Eaton hailed the announcement from Washington that funds of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration will be made available for legitimate production in every city and town with the hope that "the living drama" thus will be restored to affluence and glory. But in the same breath he predicted failure unless the film companies take an active interest.

Finding that the screen and stage are in agreement in only one fundamental—both are mediums of dramatic expression—Mr. Eaton saw in the several basic differences between them the elements that make cooperation essential. The stage, he said, develops the artistic sources without which the screen cannot maintain its high standards, and the screen supplies the financial sustenance for creative talent and has popularized superior drama.

Simultaneously this week, Mr. Mantle scouted the belief he said is held by Broadway circles that "the master minds of filmdom," in financing stage productions, are hatching a plot to strangle the legitimate for the benefit of their motion picture houses. He also suggested that "the screen men are coming to realize that the salvation for both forms of entertainment is in a sane and intelligently considered cooperation."

While Mr. Mantle maintained that "nothing on earth can kill the living theatre," on the other hand Mr. Eaton found solace in the fact that "the movies have killed the market for inferior plays and players at superior prices."

Calls Fears "Silly"

In his column in the Sunday News, Mr. Mantle said:

"Reading that the Brothers Warner are going to continue in the play-producing business because they made money with their two ventures, 'Three Men on a Horse' and 'Ceiling Zero,' and further that the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer interests will next season back both Max Gordon and Sam Harris in their Broadway enterprises, some of my friends are gravely worried for the future of the theatre, seeing danger in this newest tieup between the theatre and the screen.

"It means, they solemnly declare, that probably 70 per cent of next season's Broadway productions will be financed by motion picture capital. Brother Darryl Zanuck will be interested, and Brother Joe Schenck. Paramount will take a hand, as it did once before, and all the little imitative followers of the big bosses will trail after.

"This indicates, my friends fear, a gigantic but fairly subtle scheme by which the motion picture interests hope eventually to degrade and cheapen the theatre by controlling the character and quality of its offerings, and thus, by craftily forcing contrasts as between bad plays and good pictures, turn a slipping trade back into the motion picture houses.

"Which is a little silly to me. I am not at all impressed by the argument, though its reasoning is understandable. The picture magnate mind works that way and its master no doubt would, if he could, control and dictate the play output of the world. He will do anything, too, that he believes will work to his commercial advantage, just as in the past he has worked to freeze the drama out of hundreds of smaller towns by leasing their opera houses and refusing to open them to such traveling attractions as applied for time.

New Group Would Arise

"It is conceivable, too, that the master minds of filmdom might attempt to control the theatre to the theatre's disadvantage. But it would mean so quick and costly a failure that it hardly seems credible. A season or less of that sort of thing and there would arise so completely new a group of play producers that the competition would have to be bought all over again.

"Nothing on earth can kill the living theatre nor arrest its progress for long. Because nothing on earth can crush the ambition of playwrights and play actors to achieve and be applauded by their fellows as a reward of achievement. So long as these two unconquerable human ambitions exist the theatre will exist, not as a canned and mechanical art, but, at its source, as a pulsing, normal expression of human art.

"I believe, with Brock Pemberton, who will also operate to some extent next season with picture capital, that the screen men are coming to realize that the salvation for both forms of entertainment is in a sane and intelligently considered co-operation.

"The stage can struggle through with a new set of players each season, but not comfortably nor with satisfaction. It needs frequent touch with its better and its more experienced actors. The screen has been hiring these away as fast as they develop and holding them for periods of years. This has worked harm to the theatre, to the actor, and to both industries.

"Lewis Stone may have been happy as a screen actor all the years he has been in California, but Lewis Stone has lost a great deal in losing those opportunities the creation of new characters in the living theatre would have brought him. The theatre has lost by not having Stone, and the pictures have lost the better actor that periodical contact with the stage would have made of Stone.

Urges Interchange of Talent

"The same is true of the Barrymores and of every other good and potentially fine actor who has deserted the stage for the screen for any length of time. It is quite possible the picture producers, who have recently been forced to improve the grade of their output in order to meet competition with foreign films in foreign fields, have sufficient vision to see that this is true. By working with the theatre they can bring about an interchange of actors that will greatly benefit them and the theatre as well.

"The time has come when the greater the cooperation between the stage and the screen, the better the results for both. The theatre must continue to be a principal source of supply for the screen. Financially, the picture producers are sure to continue in a position to buy actors and playwrights, directors and composers away from the theatre.

"But they learn with experience that if they buy them and hold them, overwork and overexploit them, they soon crush both the talent and the life out of them. Not only will five or six years, with three or four pictures a year, prove disastrous to the popularity of the most gifted, but a new talent grabbed from the theatre before it is at least partially developed and established can be wiped out in pictures within a year."

Mr. Eaton, discussing the stage-screen situation, in the New York Times Magazine of last Sunday, saw a heartening note for unemployed players in FERA support but warned that "if this FERA project is to be, as seems probable, on a 'self-liquidating' basis, and the companies sent out on the road are to be composed largely of unemployed actors, somebody is in for a big disappointment."

He said Helen Hayes' tour in "Mary of Scotland" last winter showed audiences exist for fine plays and famous performers but "these audiences not only no longer exist for inferior plays and players; they do not exist even for good plays and good players lacking a reputation."

Says Films Killed Inferior Market

"The movies, of course, have killed the market for inferior plays and players at superior prices," Mr. Eaton declared. "When every crossroad can see the best Hollywood can produce, and see it often as soon as New York, it will not go back to the living theatre, at higher prices, without a definite lure, without some assurance that it is going to see something it cannot get in the movies. A well-known star, a much-discussed play, is such an assurance.

"The stars, then, must be persuaded to go trouping as well as the unemployed, and the successful plays, perhaps with several companies simultaneously, must be sent out, instead of, as now, sold to Hollywood at the end of the Broadway run.

"I doubt whether even the Federal Government can accomplish this, without the cooperation of the motion-picture companies. Yet I thoroughly believe that it should be accomplished for the good of all, the screen no less than the stage, the actors no less than the public.

"The similarities and the differences between stage and screen, it seems to me, should be clearly understood before there can be wise cooperation, and before any well-reasoned campaign to 'restore the Road' can be undertaken. We must know where, and why, either art should survive, and what its functions should be in a well-ordered cultural program. Otherwise the government millions will go the way of other unplanned expenditures.

SAYS FILM WOULD DIE WITHOUT STAGE

Fundamental Likeness

"There is, of course, one fundamental correspondence between stage and film play which has been the more emphasized since the invention of synchronized speech on the screen.

"Direct and vivid, drama has always been the liveliest art, and the cheapness and easy transportation of pictures has resulted in their inevitable and phenomenal spread. So far as, in the large and simplest sense, the pictures are drama, liveliest of the arts, they are performing the function of the stage, cheaper and more generally, and there would appear to be a duplication of function when the two compete. Should there, accordingly, be any effort to maintain the more costly form? Must it not inevitably disappear?

"Although both forms are drama, based on motion directly apprehended by the spectator without the intervention of a narrator, without the indirect process of supplying images to word symbols, there are certain basic differences in the methods of apprehension and hence in the methods of technique on stage or screen which widely separate the two arts. . . .

"Now the older silent movies were, of course, entirely pantomime, and it was admitted they could not infringe greatly on developed drama. But the addition of speech seemed to make the screen a direct rival of the stage. Examine any movie closely, however, and you will discover, first, that it never runs to the length of a play, generally not much more than half the length; second, that it is composed of scores upon scores of little separate scenes, and third, that the actual number of words spoken is scarcely a quarter the number of those spoken in the average play. Owen Davis says 5,000 words is the limit.

"An average play will run to 20,000 words. This must mean one of two things: either the plays of Ibsen, Galsworthy, Chekhov, Shakespeare, Howard, are twice too long and four times too wordy, or else they are doing something the screen cannot do. We may fairly assume, so far as the good dramatists are concerned, that the latter is the case.

"There is a profound psychological difference between watching photographs perform and watching living people. The eye, focused upon the whole stage, takes in the scene as a constant unit, the imagination makes you a part of the living scene yourself, and you gladly concentrate on sustained passages of dialogue which go far beyond pantomime into the realms of character analysis and social criticism. You accept a whole play in one setting, a sixty-minute act with only three characters, etc.

Called Impossible on Screen

"Experience has proved this not only impractical but almost impossible on the screen. The appeal of the moving photograph must be far more to the eye, hence far more pantomimic. As a result, what may be called the intellectual range of pictures, as well as their verbal richness, is far more restricted than that of the stage. This includes character analysis, debate, social criticism, and the intricate world of emotions connected with them. The screen must be broad and simple in its depiction of character, and its emotional range is confined to the more elemental situations which can be made clear pantomimically. It is a fact that the screen has produced no dramatist whom we can place in the category with Ibsen, O'Neill, Shaw and their like. It has even failed pitifully when it has tried to reproduce the work of such men, though it is improving.

"On the other hand, what can be best presented pantomimically, what gains by rapid sequence of scenes appealing to the eye, what in drama counts primarily for its motion pattern, the screen not only can handle but in many cases can handle more interestingly than the stage. The stage could not possibly have treated so effectively the satire of mass production found in René Clair's 'A Nous La Liberté.' The stage could never achieve the splendor and space and moving masses found in many spectacular productions, or in, say, 'All Quiet on the Western Front.' In the case of such a work as 'Cavalcade,' the simplicity of theme and emotion can be handled by the screen; the war visions are better done on the screen; the dignity of speech is lowered. There is both gain and loss. We may say here is a borderline work adapted to either medium.

"It should be obvious, on reflection, that each medium has functions which the other cannot perform so well, or even cannot perform at all, and that both should operate freely to give us of their most characteristic product. It is unthinkable that we should deliberately fail to foster an institution which has given us Shakespeare, Molière, Shaw, O'Neill, when the supplanting institution has demonstrated itself psychologically incapable of doing what these artists do. But it is equally absurd to assume that because the screen cannot do these things, it has nothing but cheap entertainment value, and cannot bring to its far-flung millions at the world's crossroads anything but piffle (which is, alas, the "highbrow" assumption). Actually, the world's art can and should be richer for the two mediums.

"The movie player acts without an audience, with no check on his practice. The writer can hardly practice at all, for the cost of movie-making prohibits. He must demonstrate ability in advance. He must learn to handle dialogue in the theatre. Now, a theatre can be anywhere that a few people are gathered together, and the great plays of the theatre are always available to reproduce, to study, to learn from. It is no doubt true that the fine movie writer must have a pictorial quality of imagination not essential to the stage, but he must assuredly also have skill in the use of dialogue and construction, and to gain that he must have practice.

Proposes Films Support Stage Chain

"The art of the screen will be seriously jeopardized if the stage perishes. And the more widely the stage can be preserved (not merely confined to New York), the more numerous will be the sources of artistic life to flow into the motion pictures. Merely as a sound business investment, it would pay the screen to support a chain of living theatres in the key cities of the country, and to encourage the practice of drama in colleges. This is not because the screen would thus secure more plays to turn into films. What is most characteristic of the stage cannot be turned into good films, and should not be attempted. It is solely to train authors and actors in the use of speech, and authors in the tight logic of construction, so that the great traditions and highest craftsmanship of dramatic art (to which stage and screen alike belong) may be preserved. If they are not preserved, the films will ultimately sink to a permanently low level, and see half their audiences vanish, or certainly the more discriminating minority.

"We now come to a final difference between stage and screen which, to me, contributes the most important reason for keeping the stage alive. The spectator of a play takes an active part. His response, or lack of response, his laughter, tears, applause, all count. Even if the play is being given for the thousandth time, yet it has to start all over anew, and he is a creative participant. The movie was completely made months ago in Hollywood, and his response can have no effect whatsoever. Though he may not know it, or feel the lack, he is not sharing in a creative process and experiencing the satisfaction that it brings.

"This lack of creative participation by the recipient is inherent in all mechanically reproduced art, even in the radio. By a kind of Emersonian law of compensation, the advantages of mass production and wide dissemination are counterbalanced by the lack of personal participation. You are always entirely a consumer, never in the mildest degree a maker. I believe that in a nation completely composed of consumers the sources of artistic inspiration, even of ambition, will dry up.

Sees Mechanical Barrier

"This is not to say, of course, that art does not get into the motion pictures, that artists of a high order are not required for their proper production. It is to say that the mechanical barrier interposed between these artists and the public who finally receive their art acts as a bar to the creative satisfactions, and hence the emulations and inspirations which come to a people from direct participation."

"On the other side, the second and third rate professional theatre has been rendered permanently obsolete by the movies. Why should people pay to see inferior actors in inferior plays when at smaller cost they can see first-rate actors in the best entertainment the screen can provide? Here it is the theatre's task not to express hostility, but to acknowledge freely that the screen, in the small towns especially, has freed it of its ancient load of mediocrity and enabled it to concentrate on what it can do best in the best possible manner. The screen, too, offers large rewards to a host of artists, who can go to it if they wish from the theatre, and has definitely expanded the opportunities for the dramatically gifted in America.

"Considered as two branches of the art of the drama, then, it would seem that artistically and socially stage and screen each has its definite place; that the extinction of the older branch would mean a definite impoverishment of the younger, and that cooperation between them, not hostility, is not only desirable but actually the logical thing.

"Ultimately, all that matters is the preservation of dramatic art at its highest possible level and its fullest possible dissemination among the people. To maintain the level a sound, healthy theatre in our larger centres is essential. The drive should be made on the larger centres because then sufficient support will exist to make it successful. For wide dissemination of drama the movies are incomparable. Each, therefore, should be vitally concerned in the welfare of the other."

GROUP FIGHT SANCTION FOR TELEVISION CABLE

Vatner, of Society for Protection of Theatre, Foresees Monopoly Ruining Film Business

Apprehensive that construction between New York and Philadelphia of a coaxial cable, over which telephone messages, telegraph and television could be transmitted simultaneously, would adversely affect their interests, representatives of broadcasting, communication systems and minority groups of the motion picture business this week opposed the application for authority by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company at a hearing before the Federal Communications Commission in Washington.

While the telephone company has not divulged the purposes to which the long-distance cable would be put, other than it will be used for television service, it is generally known that its installation is in connection with the television transmitting station which the Radio Corporation of America plans to construct within the next year.

The film interests in opposition to the application for permission to construct the cable were represented at the hearing by Ralph Vatner, general counsel for the American Society for the Protection of the Motion Picture Theatre, appearing, he said, for a number of independent producers, exhibitors and equipment manufacturers. Mr. Vatner argued the transmission of motion pictures direct to American homes is not an activity within the scope of the telephone company's business, which is that of communication.

Wire Companies Drop Protest

Opposition was withdrawn abruptly by Western Union Telegraph Company and Postal Telegraph and Cable Company, after Dr. Frank B. Jewett, vice-president of the AT&T and president of the Bell Telephone Laboratories, had informed the Commission that the cable was intended for experimental purposes for at least one year after it was laid.

The Commission indicated that the license would be granted soon, and all but Mr. Vatner of the many persons who had listened to a tale of amazing progress seemed satisfied. James W. Baldwin, representing the National Association of Broadcasters, at first objected to transmission of images by television. He later said the broadcasters did not want to stand in the way of progress, but asked the Commission to consider carefully the question of competition when a commercial application was received.

2,400 Simultaneous Messages

It was predicted that all television broadcasting companies could lease the cable. A total of 2,400 simultaneous telegraph messages could be sent over it and 240 telephone messages.

Dr. Jewett and A. J. McBean, attorney for AT&T, told the Commission the present view of the company was that it would offer to television broadcasting companies the use of the new cable on a lease basis. Mr. McBean said the company's idea of its position in the television field was analogous to the service it rendered in the broadcasting field by renting facilities to broadcasters.

"Television is a thing 'way in the future," Dr. Jewett remarked, while he observed that the cable, at present with a frequency capacity of 1,000,000 cycles, was the first means to transmit visual images of good definition by wire. The Bell Laboratories president emphasized that no monopoly in television would be established and that all proven television concerns would receive opportunities to utilize the cable with no restrictions on manufacture of transmitting and receiving equipment other than meeting the tests of operating conditions. Dr. Jewett denied that the cable would be used to bring television programs direct to the homes of telephone subscribers.

Vatner Sees Monopoly Danger

Mr. Vatner charged that through this cable a monopoly in television would be created which would "destroy" the film industry. He charged that the AT&T, through Electrical Research Products, Inc., had a virtual monopoly in the sound picture field. He asked the Commission to refuse installation of the cable on the ground that its use would be in fields unrelated to telephony and that its cost would be borne by telephone subscribers in their rates.

H. S. Osborn, transmission engineer for the company, portrayed the projected cable as an avenue to lower toll rates on long distance telephone calls. He said the annual carrying charges, plus the terminal equipment, would be one-third the cost of carrying charges on present equipment of similar capacity.

Stipulations Signed In RCA License Suit

Stipulations have been filed in Chancery court, Wilmington, Del., under which the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company agrees to pay Radio Corporation of America royalties on the basis set forth in Philadelphia's injunction suit. Counsel for both sides signed the stipulations. Philadelphia recently filed a bill to enjoin RCA from revoking a license agreement under which it is licensed to use the company's patents for manufacture of radio equipment.

The stipulations will remain in effect until final settlement of the action. If it is found that the basis of royalties is in error, the defendant is to refund to the plaintiff the difference between the amount paid and the amount determined as due.

Banquet for Michaelson

Harry Michaelson, former eastern central district manager for RKO Distributing Corporation, and recently promoted to short subject sales manager, will be tendered a banquet this week at the Hotel Schenley, Pittsburgh, by friends.

Sabath May Study Fox Film, Theatres

I. Alfred Levy, counsel to the Sabath Congressional committee investigating real estate reorganizations, indicated last week the possibility that the committee may extend its investigation to Fox Film Corporation and Fox Theatres, if the present inquiry into the reorganization of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses reveals interrelations between the companies. The committee is continuing its hearings in New York on the Fox Metropolitan reorganization behind closed doors. The inquiry is expected to require about one month.

Alleged fraud and illegal practices uncovered by investigators examining the liquidation of defaulted real estate bonds in New England, some of which involved theatre property in Boston, will be placed before the Sabath committee at a public hearing to be held soon, according to Murray Garson, executive assistant to Chairman Sabath of the committee. Nine investigators have been working in Boston for the past month, said Mr. Garson.

Ohio Censor Without Funds, May Violate Law

Films passed by the Ohio censor board in the future may not carry the five-foot leaders certifying passage by the board, as required by state law, as a result of a budget slash by Governor Davey. The law requires that the state supply the leaders, thus forcing the board to violate the law. The state supreme court declared unconstitutional Governor Davey's plan to redistribute the budget to provide funds for departments left without money as a result of the slash in the budget. A special session of the legislature to enact new legislation is seen as the only solution.

Universal Sues Texas Operator for $15,150

Universal last week filed suit in the New York supreme court against William G. Underwood, operator of a Texas theatre circuit, for $15,150.22. The suit charges breach of contract and contends Mr. Underwood is responsible personally. No date for hearing has been set. Mr. Underwood was served with a summons recently while in New York, thus moving the action from Texas to New York.

The seven Texas theatres involved are the New, Marshall; New, Port Arthur; New, Nacogdoches; New, Jacksonville; Dixie, Bryan; New, Sequin; New, Conroe.

RFC Denies Refusing Loan to Howard Cullman

Reconstruction Finance Corporation officials at Washington last week denied that the application of Howard S. Cullman, trustee for the Roxy theatre in New York, for a loan of $750,000 for the theatre corporation had been refused. It was said no formal application had ever been filed.

Officials indicated, however, that the RFC is unlikely to view such a loan favorably, since, it was explained, it has never gone into the theatre business and does not believe it should do so.

FIGHT PARAMOUNT CLAIMS IN COURT

HERTZ IS STAR OF SEC'S HEARING

Minority Stockholders Charge Exorbitant Demands in Calls for Fees Totaling $3,600,000; Senate Inquiry Threatened

The United States district court chambers in New York of Judge Alfred C. Coxe were bulging Thursday morning with adversaries contemplating a bitter fight over the $3,600,000 fees and allowances claimed by lawyers, accountants, receivers and others from Paramount for services rendered to the company and creditor groups in its equity receivership, bankruptcy and reorganization.

Minority stockholders charge the claims are exorbitant, and the New York "American" took up the fight upon learning, it was said, that protests against the "great $3,650,000 Paramount-Publix bankruptcy melon swelled into a rising tide of indignation."

Reverberations of the protests against the applications for "exorbitant" fees were heard at Washington, where Senatorial investigation was threatened as a result of complaints that lawyers connected with the reorganization proceedings were attempting to "milk" the company.

The schedule of allowances to be discussed before Judge Coxe consisted of 51 different claims, ranging from a few hundred dollars, to $700,000 asked for by Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine, attorneys for the receivers and trustees from January, 1933, to the date of reorganization on July 1, 1935.

$2,500,000 Set Aside

The reorganization plan set aside a reserve of $2,500,000 in estimation of such expenses, and Paramount must pay the bill.

"All of this money, coming from a bankrupt concern, would naturally come at the expense of its creditors, bondholders and stockholders," warned the Hearst newspapers.

The court previously had warned the lawyers and accountants who rendered services as counsel or otherwise to the company and creditor committees against filing exorbitant fees, and set Thursday's hearing to pass on the applications.

Paramount's directors retained Thomas D. Thacher, of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett, to represent the company at the hearing, and Mr. Thacher, it was expected, would contest any claims which the directors regard as excessive.

"Public Scandal," Says Rogers

Saul E. Rogers, counsel to a minority bondholders' group, protested vigorously to the news press this week against what he termed was the "melon" that attorneys and others are cutting out of the company's bankruptcy.

He said that the situation as disclosed by the New York American amounted to a "public scandal."

"I have been in this case since 1932," he declared. "It has been a fight all the way to keep this group from getting away with all the assets of the company. When I filed a fee of $10,000 (for services to the bondholders' committee) some of them (the other lawyers) censured me for not asking $150,000."

Mr. Rogers urged all stockholders to swarm down on the courtroom in protestation against the distribution "of the remaining assets among a select group of lawyers and receivers."

Mr. Rogers warned, through the Hearst newspapers, that "the Paramount Publix incident is going to plant in the minds of the investing public a distrust of all stocks and bonds that may be offered in the future."

"Receivers normally are to safeguard the assets of a corporation in distress; they act in a fiduciary capacity. When a single law firm can get a million-dollar fee out of Paramount, then the public must lose faith in all receiverships," Mr. Rogers was quoted.

Should Judge Coxe approve the applications, Mr. Rogers declared, he will singly, or with others, take the case to the circuit court of appeals.

The New York American said that "two lawyers who entered the Paramount receivership representing bondholders of $15,000 of its bonds, emerged with a request for $150,000 legal fees because they 'automatically became petitioners for all security holders.'"

The American mentioned Malcolm Sumner and his associate, former Judge Edward L. Garvin, as originally representing three bondholders, whose bonds had a total value of $15,000, and who have applied for $150,000. Mr. Sumner was quoted by the newspaper as saying this sum was "very reasonable."

Mr. Sumner was said to have explained that after he initiated proceedings in favor of his three clients, he and Judge Garvin "automatically became petitioners for all the security holders." "Through their efforts," he was quoted, "control of the corporation was wrested from Kuhn, Loeb and Company," Wall Street bankers.

Defending "Huge Sums"

Law firms asking the biggest fees were said by the American to be "rushing to the defense of the huge sums," declaring the Paramount case the largest under Section 77-B of the bankruptcy act. They are said to have detailed the immense amount of work involved, and to have presented voluminous "worksheets" and records of labor to the court.

The $700,000 claim of Root, Clark, Buckner and Ballantine was accompanied by a worksheet stating that 43 members of the firm's legal staff worked a total of 72,113 hours on the reorganization, which involved more than 400 subsidiaries.

The Wall Street Journal of Dow Jones and Company, a financial newspaper, said, however, that "interests close to the company believe that many of these claims will be materially reduced by the court," and that a number of substantial stockholders in the company hold that the claims as a whole are exorbitant.

"In some instances," the Journal continued, "attorneys representing independent stockholders and bondholders owning a very small amount of securities have filed claims for amounts which are considered by the management of the company as out of all proportion to their services in the proceedings."

McAdoo Hints Senate Inquiry

Some $400,000 in claims were allowed during the reorganization, the pending applications involving the remaining $3,200,000.

Senator McAdoo of California declared in Washington that an investigation of the proceedings is a possibility. The Senator is chairman of a special committee which is investigating receiverships and bankruptcies.

The attention of the Senate committee was called to the Paramount case last month when

Former Finance Chairman Says Zukor Threatened to Resign and Apply for Receiver; Recalls Zukor's Coup in 1932

The drama of Paramount's reorganization as played by the bankers, attorneys and corporation officers on a private stage far removed from the public eye, was finally enacted in the open last week, under pressure, before a select audience of United States Government commissioners from Washington who sat as the Securities and Exchange Commission investigating the causes of the Paramount bankruptcy and the events of the subsequent reorganization.

The occasion was the continuation in New York of a hearing that had started several days earlier in Washington. Although the testimony taken has no other known official significance than possibly providing a guide to Congress in the writing of future legislation regulating corporate procedure, the narrative that was related about much of the "inside" of Paramount's reorganization and about many of those who participated prominently therein, held the interest of spectators throughout.

The star of the day was John Daniel Hertz, of Chicago taxi fame, former chairman of Paramount's finance committee, a partner in the Wall Street banking house of Lehman Brothers, and now a member of the new Paramount board of directors. There was only one other star narrator, Robert T. Swaine, of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine and Wood, New York attorneys and former counsel for Paramount Publix and for Kuhn, Loeb and Company, another large Wall Street banking house. Both Mr. Hertz and Mr. Swaine were ably prompted by counsel for the Government's commission. Other testimony, pertaining to the manner in which the new Paramount stock was floated, was heard from Edwin L. Weisly, of counsel for the Fortington creditor group now prominently identified with Paramount.

Tells of Conflict with Zukor

Mr. Hertz related, under questioning, his conflict with Adolph Zukor, Paramount president, which reached its climax when lawyers and bankers advised him to resign as finance chairman after Mr. Zukor himself had threatened to resign and to apply for a receiver because Mr. Hertz had "exceeded his authority" in running the corporation's affairs in his finance committee position.

Mr. Hertz denied that Lehman Brothers has any thought of the probabilities of effecting a merger between RKO and Paramount, despite its representation on the directorate of both corporations.

Zukor "Coup" in 1932

Mr. Hertz told the commissioners that the specific charge made against him by Mr. Zukor when Mr. Zukor effected his "coup" in 1932 to upset a move by the bankers to oust him as president in favor of Mr. Hertz, was that he had ordered Mr. Zukor to hold no further conferences with departmental heads without first consulting him and to refrain from

REDUCED COSTS $23,000,000: HERTZ

"I had been pushing ukor around," said Mr. Hertz. "I'd cut his son's salary from $50,000 to $25,000 and vetoed one of his (the son's) lump expense accounts. I refused for a month to okay a $1,000 phone bill of Zukor's which was for night calls to the studio, made from Zukor's home, when I learned that he was in the habit of calling up the studio manager and chatting with him for hours whenever he felt lonesome. That led to one of our most serious quarrels. I issued instructions that no more phone calls were to be made to the studio from his hotel."

The son of Mr. Zukor is Eugene Zukor, a Paramount executive for many years.

Significance of Zukor Coup

The resignation of Mr. Hertz disclosed the full significance of Mr. Zukor's successful coup in the light of testimony given to the commissioners a few hours previously by Mr. Swaine, who disclosed that the Paramount bankers desired at the time to elevate Mr. Hertz to the presidency of Paramount and to place Mr. Zukor in a "decorative" position.

The testimony completed a graphic picture of the executive conflict within Paramount at the time, in 1932, when its greatest financial difficulties were nearing a climax and which, less than one month after the resignation of Mr. Hertz, forced the company into receivership. The story detailed what Mr. Hertz described as "a race against the depression" to save Paramount from bankruptcy. The "race" became a rush of "cost cutting," and haste in this procedure seemed to the then chairman of the finance committee to be so essential that, he admitted to the commissioners from the stand, he "wasn't always overly careful" of its effects on others. The result was, it appeared from the record and substantiated in Mr. Swaine's testimony, that morale within the company ran at low ebb.

"The atmosphere was charged with uncertainty," Mr. Swaine said. "Everyone was afraid for his job."

In quick succession Jesse L. Lasky, production head; Sidney R. Kent, distribution head, and Sam Katz, theatre head, withdrew from the company. Eventually came the direct challenge to Mr. Zukor's authority as head of the company, which was met with the former Paramount president's ultimatum. Even then, Mr. Swaine revealed, had it been possible to obtain a majority of the Paramount board to take a stand against Mr. Zukor, which it was not, Mr. Hertz would have been elected to the presidency of the company.

Evidently interested to learn the full details of this episode, the commissioners had Mr. Swaine testify further in this connection. He told them that the late Otto Kahn, head of Kuhn, Loeb, Paramount bankers, wanted Mr. Hertz to be given "supreme authority" to finish his job of cutting costs in an effort to "outrace the depression" but that they could count on the support of only four directors. These were Sir William Wiseman, Maurice Newton, Gilbert Kahn and Felix Kahn.

"It is difficult to believe," interposed Irwin Langbine, SEC counsel, "that Zukor was ready to wreck his company in order to keep up his personal authority."

"It wasn't that," Mr. Swaine corrected him. "Zukor saw his three best men leaving him. He recognized an atmosphere of complaint throughout his organization and felt himself being forced out. All that of itself was a wrecking of the company to him, which he felt he ought to prevent."

> From John Hertz's testimony before the Securities and Exchange Commission:
> "We played it catch-as-catch-can, mostly. One way that usually brought results was to threaten to close the theatre unless the rent was reduced. Most theatre buildings are occupied by stores, too, and if the theatre closed the stores would have to close, too, and it would result in a complete loss of income for the landlord."

Mr. Hertz, at the Wednesday session, testified in detail regarding his entry into Paramount in 1931 at the urging of Sam Katz, then Paramount's theatre head, whom he had known in Chicago and who came to Hertz at Miami and told him that Paramount was in difficulties because of bad management and lack of control over personnel. Mr. Hertz said he next conferred with Sir William Wiseman, Kuhn, Loeb partner, who told him the bank wanted him in Paramount as its representative and that thereafter he was elected to the board and made chairman of the finance committee with power to veto all disbursements and exercise a general supervisory authority over all of the company's finances. He said that during the time he served in those positions, operating costs were reduced some $23,000,000, from $133,000,000 in 1931 to $110,000,000 in 1932.

Mr. Hertz said he found other theatre companies had been obtaining reductions on leases in appreciable amounts during the depression, but that no effort had been made within Paramount to obtain similar adjustments. Under his direction, Mr. Hertz said, $5,900,000 was taken off theatre leases. He added that $600,000 of annual insurance premiums was reduced "25 or 30 per cent,' that telephone and telegraph bills were cut from $800,000 to $400,000 annually and that the cost of the legal department was reduced from $800,000 per year to "a reasonable amount."

"Catch-As-Catch-Can"

Asked by counsel for the SEC how he had succeeded in reducing theatre leases, Mr. Hertz explained:

"We played it catch-as-catch-can, mostly. One way that brought results was to threaten to close the theatre unless the rent was reduced. Most theatre buildings are occupied by stores, too, and if the theatre closed the stores would have to close, too, and it would result in a complete loss of income for the landlord."

Mr. Hertz continued his testimony, bringing the commissioners up to the time of the reorganization. He was then asked by counsel for the SEC whether he did not regard himself as being disqualified to serve as a director of the new company while a defendant in two suits brought by the trustees in bankruptcy of Paramount to recover from former officers and directors for sums used for the repurchase of Paramount stock at guaranteed prices which was issued in the acquisition of theatre properties and to recover on allegedly excessive salaries and bonuses paid by Paramount.

The witness replied that when he had been invited by the so-called Fortington creditor group to become a member of the new Paramount board he discussed the question of his eligibility with H. A. Fortington, head of the group and himself a director, and said that Mr. Fortington put the question to the trustees and their counsel and was advised by Arthur A. Ballantine, of counsel, that not only was he not disqualified but that he would be a valuable addition to the new company because of his past knowledge of its affairs.

Mr. Hertz's transactions in Paramount securities prior to the receivership were explored by counsel and he was asked whether he thought it proper for a director and financial officer to deal in his company's securities. He was noncommittal.

Saw "Nothing" in Stock Deal

It was also brought out that Mr. Hertz, personally, had been offered and had accepted a one-third participation in 5,000 shares of new Paramount first preferred through the Atlas Corporation, and that Lehman Brothers, the investment firm in which Mr. Hertz continues as a partner, owns 25 per cent of the $6,400,000 of new Paramount second preferred. Questioned concerning the propriety of this, Mr. Hertz replied that he saw "nothing wrong" in it.

The examination of Mr. Hertz continued Thursday morning, after a full Wednesday session, and it was on this second day that Mr. Hertz denied that Lehman Brothers, with representatives now on the directorates of both RKO and Paramount, has any thought of the probabilities of effecting a merger between these two corporations.

In addition to Mr. Hertz's presence on the Paramount board, the Lehman interests directly are represented by Paul M. Mazur and by Arthur Lehman on the RKO board. In addition the investment house is affiliated with the Fortington creditor group, which has three directors on the new Paramount board.

Denial also was made by Mr. Hertz that the Lehman firm is RKO's banker, or even considered as such, or that Lehman, together with the Atlas Corporation and Hallgarten & Company, which owns 75 per cent of the new $6,400,000 issue of Paramount second preferred stock, can be regarded as "Paramount's new bankers."

Mr. Mazur and Lehman, Hertz said, are inactive as members of the RKO board, "because the company is in the hands of receivers, has been for several years, and is likely to be for several more years."

In reply to a question put to him by Samuel C. Clark, Jr., a special attorney for SEC, Mr. Hertz said that he regarded RKO as "only a smaller competitor of Paramount's at the most."

Definite Program Followed

Testimony given at the hearing Thursday by Mr. Hertz and Edwin L. Weisl, of counsel for the Fortington group, disclosed that a definite program was followed in offering Paramount's new $6,400,000 issue of second preferred in order to prevent the issue from being offered publicly. The issue was underwritten by the Atlas Corporation, investment trust, and offered by the underwriter to members of the Fortington group with "a gentleman's agreement" among the subscribers that it would not be reoffered to the public. This was done, according to Mr. Weisl, because Atlas did not want to be identified with a public stock offering. The agreement implied, he said, that those to whom the stock was offered would retain it as a permanent investment and, while no specific period of retention was designated in the agreement, he said he felt that any sale of the stock for immediate profit would constitute a breach of the agreement. Holders, however, would not be restrained from selling in a drastically declining market.

The agreement in connection with the offering of the stock appears to have some significance in that a cardinal point in the platform of the Fortington group, reiterated by its representatives inside and outside of court, has been that the owners of the company should control its management. The agreement, if maintained by the holders of the stock, would appear to continue members of the Fortington group as "owners" of Paramount and permanent factors in its management.

Atlas retained 25 per cent of the offering and made 25 per cent available to Hallgarten and Company and another 25 per cent to Lehman Brothers and its affiliate, Lehman Corporation. Goldman-Sachs was offered five per cent; Frederick H. Cassatt and Company of Philadelphia, five per cent; White, Weldon and Company, two and one-half per cent, and the balance in smaller amounts to other firms. Atlas received a commission of one per cent, or approximately $64,000, for its underwriting, the cost of which would approximate $10,000, according to Mr. Weisl's testimony.

Asked by SEC counsel whether he did not regard it as "unusual" for an underwriting firm to retain such a large amount of the issue it had undertaken to market, Mr. Weisl replied in the negative.

"But the usual practice for an underwriter is to dispose of the entire issue, isn't it?" counsel commented.

"No New Bankers"

Mr. Hertz was asked who Paramount's new bankers were, and replied that the company "has no new bankers." In reply to a direct question, he stated that he did not believe that the 75 per cent ownership of the new second preferred made Lehman, Atlas and Hallgarten the "new Paramount bankers."

"Speaking for Lehman," he said, "I know that firm has no thought of it."

It was also disclosed that on about May 10, 1935, Atlas had purchased 5,000 shares of new Paramount first preferred, of $60 par, on a when, as and if issued basis, at prices ranging between $50 and $60 per share. This stock is now quoted at $79 per share. Mr. Hertz testified that he was asked by Weisl if he, Hertz, cared to participate in this issue and had replied that he "would take all he could get." Mr. Hertz was then granted a one-third participation in the 5,000 shares held by Atlas. He said that while he thought that "a very nice favor had been conferred on him by Atlas," he felt in no way obligated as a result.

"It was a friendly gesture," he said. "We had worked together for months and grown to like each other."

Mr. Hertz was queried repeatedly by counsel for SEC on the ethics and propriety of his past and present position in the Paramount picture in the light of his present affiliation with the Fortington group, whose platform of corporate behavior and good manners for Paramount officialdom has been used by the group during the past six months in taking the measurement of more than one aspirant for a place in the new Paramount, and then has found them wanting.

From Robert T. Swaine's testimony before the Securities and Exchange Commission hearing:

"Zukor saw his three best men (Jesse L. Lasky, Sidney R. Kent and Sam Katz) leaving him. He recognized an atmosphere of complaint throughout his organization and felt himself being forced out. All that of itself was a wrecking of the company to him, which he felt he ought to prevent."

The dalliance of former Paramount officers and directors with the company's securities has raised the collective eyebrows of the Fortington group. Asked Thursday whether he saw any impropriety in his or Lehman Brothers' buying of new Paramount securities at a time when he, Hertz, was a designated director of the new company, Mr. Hertz replied in the negative. Again, asked whether he knew if it was not an objective of the Fortington group to eliminate investment bankers from new Paramount financing, Mr. Hertz replied that he "never understood so."

Fortington Letter Answered

Mr. Hertz's attention was called to a letter introduced at the SEC-Paramount hearings in Washington recently, which was written by Fortington to Lansing P. Reed, of counsel for the Vanderlip debenture holders' committee, and which cited acts of alleged mismanagement attributed to the former directors and officers of the company. One of these cited the Film Productions Corporation transactions, under which negatives were pledged as collateral to creditor banks. Mr. Hertz, as a director at the time of the transaction, voted for this proposal, it was brought out Thursday.

The Fortington letter referred to the suits brought by the trustees in bankruptcy against former Paramount officers and directors to recover for amounts expended on the repurchase of the company's stock and for bonuses and salaries of allegedly unreasonable amounts. Mr. Hertz is a defendant in both actions. The Fortington letter declared that if even a slight recovery could be had on these suits it would not be necessary for the new company to obtain any other new cash.

Mr. Hertz said he saw nothing inconsistent in his position, which, as a defendant, inclines him to hope that the suits cannot be won and, as a director, obligates him to aid in increasing the assets of the company. The recovery of several millions of dollars for Paramount is involved in the actions.

Mr. Hertz explained that the trustees, not the directors, retain the causes of action in these suits, and that, therefore, the new board will have nothing to do with them. He added that he would be willing to pay damages to the company if a fair trial proved himself to be liable.

On the subject of the Fortington contention that "owners" of the company should control, Mr. Hertz, whose present holdings in Paramount securities date only from January, 1935, was asked if he understood this to apply "only to new owners or to the old ones, as well." Admitting that his holdings were of recent origin, Mr. Hertz said: "At least, I do own them. I can name several Paramount directors who probably don't own any."

Queried on his reintroduction to Paramount affairs under the reorganization, Mr. Hertz related that he had shied away from the situation all of last year because he believed the company's condition to be "chaotic," and referred to the Ralph Kohn and Emanuel Cohen resignations to explain his viewpoint. Late in the year, he said, Frank B. Altschul, head of Lazard Freres, informed him that a reorganization was impending and asked him to join a creditor group then forming. Mr. Altschul introduced Mr. Hertz to Fortington, and he joined that group on learning it was "the largest" owner of Paramount securities and that his ideas coincided with Fortington's on reorganization procedure. He was also influenced, Mr. Hertz said, by his desire to "justify" his 15 months of "hard work" in Paramount during 1931 and 1932, which he felt had not been "appreciated," and also "to make an opportunity" for himself and his company, Lehman Brothers. In January, 1935, he began his buying of Paramount securities, which continued through May.

Sought Wiseman's Aid

Further reviewing the narrative of the animosity which developed between Adolph Zukor and himself and which eventually led to his resignation in January, 1933, Mr. Hertz elaborated on the policies he invoked to "outrace the depression" and save Paramount from bankruptcy.

To give himself a foothold in Paramount at the outset, Mr. Hertz said, he sought through Sir William Wiseman to acquire stock in the company. Sir William was said to have endeavored to obtain some from Mr. Zukor and other officers of the company for Mr. Hertz, but was unable to do so, at least at what was considered a "reasonable" price. Mr. Hertz, nevertheless, was elected a director and made chairman of the company's finance committee in November, 1931. Sir William had told him, Mr. Hertz testified, that Kuhn, Loeb wanted him, Hertz, in Paramount as the bank's representative because "Zukor was becoming an old man and had lost control over Paramount personnel."

As chairman of the finance committee, Mr. Hertz said he was given the power to veto expenditures anywhere in the organization with the exception of the studio and that at about September, 1932, following the resignation of Sam Katz, he was also given the veto power over studio disbursements. It was this veto exercised by Hertz that brought about what he described as his "most serious fight" with Mr. Zukor and which resulted in Hertz being forced to resign from Paramount. Mr. Hertz said the ensuing animosity between the two climaxed a personal antagonism which had been growing for a year as Mr. Hertz's "race against depression" more and more impinged upon Mr. Zukor's domain.

The influence of Kuhn, Loeb in Paramount affairs at that time was made manifest by Mr. Hertz's testimony.

"I made no move," he said, "without consulting with Sir William. I conferred with him daily, sometimes several times a day. And with Otto Kahn, too."

A comparable significance apparently attaches also to the influence in Paramount which rested with Cravath de Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood, the Kuhn, Loeb and Paramount counsel, at the time. Mr. Hertz said that he had frequent conferences with Robert T. Swaine, whom he recognized as "general counsel of Paramount." Austin Keough, Mr. Hertz said, he regarded as "house counsel."

Mr. Swaine, himself, while on the stand, told of the frequent occasions on which Paramount executives, in addition to Mr. Hertz and including Mr. Zukor and Mr. Katz, sought him out for advice, complaint and confession. The impression gained was that Mr. Swaine, during 1932, was an internal arbitrator at Paramount.

"When I entered Paramont," Mr. Hertz related, "income was shrinking constantly. The problem was to cut costs faster than the shrinkage. It was a matter of outracing the depression. I cut the personnel in every department, reduced salaries $186,000 weekly, for a total of $9,300,000 during my regime. I found the telephone and telegraph bills running to $800,000 a year. I introduced a voucher system for long distance calls, and everyone who made a toll call had to fill out a voucher. I employed girls to check outgoing telegrams and eliminate unnecessary words. I reduced the annual bill in the end to about $400,000. I found that most of the toll calls were to Hollywood and that the wires to the studio were open for hours at a time. I took out phones by the hundreds in the home office and every place we had an office."

Asked Legal Head Resign

"I found the head of the legal department," Mr. Hertz continued, "vacationing in Europe for three or four months at a time when the gravest problems were confronting the company. He was drawing a salary of $75,000 a year and had several assistants drawing $30,000 and $45,000. I called him home and asked for his resignation and his successor took the job at $35,000. Assistants were offered $12,000. I reduced the costs of the legal department from $800,000 annually to a reasonable amount."

Mr. Hertz had detailed earlier how he had reduced Paramount's annual insurance premiums of $600,000 by "25 or 30 per cent" after advertising for bids, something, he said, that the company had never done before. He had also told of reducing theatre leases by $5,900,000, which he said the Paramount theatre department had made no attempt to do although other theatre companies had succeeded in obtaining lease adjustments during the depression. He said that he had reduced operating costs by $23,000,000 during 1932.

"That gave me only a little more than a year to work in," Mr. Hertz remarked, "and that isn't very much time."

Questioned on his reduction of personnel, Mr. Hertz said that Sir William had told him "Paramount was honeycombed with relatives" and asked him "to look that over."

"Did you find any relatives of Sir William's?" the SEC counsel asked.

"No," was the reply.

"Of anyone in Kuhn, Loeb?"

"One."

"Was he discharged?"

"I cut his salary in half and gave him four months' notice. He had been there 15 years and I couldn't find out what his job was."

Relatives' Salaries Cut

"Did you find any relatives of Mr. Zukor's?"

"Yes. Most of them had their salaries cut and were given notice. I have always felt that relatives had no place in a corporate set-up, even efficient relatives. They're bad for an entire organization. Their presence discourages those who work with them. The only exception I made on relatives was that I agreed with Zukor I wouldn't insist on his son, Eugene, being discharged."

"Did you find any Lasky relatives?" counsel inquired.

"Yes."

"Katz relatives?"

"Plenty. They received the same treatment as the others."

"Any Hertz relatives in Paramount?" he was asked.

Hertz laughed and replied in the negative.

SEC counsel then explored Mr. Hertz's views on relatives in business by seeking to determine whether the fact that Mr. Hertz's son-in-law was a member of Lawrence Stern & Company, Chicago investment house, had any connection with the Paramount financing done by the firm while Mr. Hertz was chairman of the Paramount finance committee. Counsel also sought to determine whether Paramount's advertising account had been transferred to Lord and Thomas, which is headed by Albert D. Lasker, Mr. Hertz's closest friend, at the instance of the former chairman of the finance committee. A son of Hertz was employed by Lord and Thomas. The replies to both inquiries were in the nature of denials of influence having been exerted.

Crossed Swords on Management

By implication more than by direct testimony, the impression became apparent to at least some of those in the hearing room that Mr. Hertz, in the exercise of his unusual powers in Paramount, reached out more and more into the real of management, rather than confining himself to finance, and in so doing crossed swords with Mr. Zukor on numerous occasions. Even Mr. Hertz admitted this last at one point in his testimony concerning the animosity which grew up between them.

Mr. Hertz also admitted later that he had issued orders, which included Mr. Zukor, prohibiting management conferences without first consulting with the chairman of the finance committee. Despite the open animosity and perhaps moved by the holiday spirit, Mr. Hertz testified that just before leaving to spend the 1932 holidays at his Chicago residence, he called on Mr. Zukor at his home and "shook hands, showed him every indication of friendliness and co-operation and told him how much I had enjoyed the work during the year."

"He shook hands with me and cried copiously," Mr. Hertz said, "and told me he felt that Paramount would pull through."

"Jockeyed into Position"

"When I got back in New York about January 1 or 2," Mr. Hertz resumed, "I found Sir William waiting in my office for me. He told me that Mr. Zukor had told him I had exceeded my authority as chairman of the finance committee and that either I would have to resign or Mr. Zukor would and would bring suit for a receiver for the company. I was shocked at being jockeyed into this position because I felt that I had done the best job of my life at Paramount."

Mr. Hertz recalled how he had consulted with Mr. Swaine and with Leo Spitz, Chicago attorney and former power at Paramount during the Hertz regime, both of whom advised him to resign. Next, he said, he went to the "15 bankers" who loaned Paramount $15,000,000, with one of the conditions of the loan being "that I would remain at Paramount," and asked their advice. They agreed that it would be best for him to resign.

"I felt that the situation was ridiculous," Mr. Hertz said. "I didn't know where I had exceeded my authority. All my policies were introduced at open meetings, approved by the board or in consultation with others. I knew someone wanted me out. I didn't learn why until much later through a friend whose integrity I trust implicitly. I was told that Otto Kahn had visited Mr. Zukor on Christmas Day and had asked how I was getting along. Mr. Zukor replied, "All right, I guess." Kahn then asked Zukor if he didn't believe I was too naive, too much of a country boy for the big city and its ways. Then Mr. Zukor said he thought I was. So I was told I'd exceeded my authority."

An entirely different version of the story was recounted on the stand by Mr. Swaine, who said that he had heard the story recounted by Mr. Hertz only three weeks ago and, because it seemed "so fantastic and contrary to what I knew of the situation intimately," had gone to Mr. Zukor and asked him about it. Mr. Zukor told Mr. Swaine that he had given a screening of "The Sign of the Cross" in his home on Christmas Day for Otto and Mrs. Kahn but denied the rest of the story.

Found Each "Vitriolic"

Mr. Swaine then related how, at the crisis in the relations between Mr. Hertz and Mr. Zukor, he had gone from one to the other and found each "vitriolic" against the other. Next, Mr. Swaine said, he went to Otto Kahn and learned that the late head of Kuhn, Loeb wanted Mr. Hertz to be made president of Paramount and endowed with supreme authority so that he could continue his job of overhauling the company. A "decorative" post would be found for Mr. Zukor, Mr. Swaine said he was informed. It developed after a careful analysis of the Paramount board, however, that not enough strength to displace Mr. Zukor could be marshaled by the Kuhn, Loeb forces. Mr. Swaine, warning of a "public row" should Mr. Zukor carry out his threat to resign and bring suit for a receivership, advised abandoning any move to displace Mr. Zukor and urged Mr. Hertz's resignation.

"It is difficult to believe how wrought up Mr. Zukor was at the time," Mr. Swaine said. "He probably would have carried out his threat. Mr. Hertz, in good faith and sincerity, felt that he couldn't do his job unless he had supreme authority, but under the by-laws he didn't have it and it couldn't be given him. Otto Kahn's approval to Mr. Zukor's continuance was given most reluctantly."

Said Hertz Exceeded Authority

Mr. Swaine said that in his opinion Mr. Hertz had exceeded his authority in [illegible] Mr. Zukor not to hold departmental conferences without consulting Hertz and not to phone the studio.

Objections to any of the applications for fees for services in the Paramount bankruptcy and reorganization will be made by Alfred Cook, of counsel for Paramount, only in the event he is directed to do so by the company, Mr. Cook told the Commission at the final session.

Mr. Cook asked to be excused from venturing an opinion as to whether any of the fees sought were "excessive," declaring that it was a matter which had not been passed upon by the court. He said, however, that he "would have an answer" if his opinion was sought by the court.

Mr. Cook's firm has an application in for $250,000, which he called a "very modest and reasonable sum." His firm was employed both as counsel for Paramount and for the stockholders' protective committee.

Questioned by SEC counsel as to whether or not he owned or dealt in Paramount securities

Skouras, Warner In Pooling Deal

George Skouras has dropped four theatres in New Jersey from the Fox Metropolitan circuit which he operates. He has a deal pending with Warner to pool seven other theatres in New Jersey, effective September 1. Negotiations are expected to be completed within the next few weeks.

The four to be dropped are the Pascack, Westwood; Queen Ann, Bogota; Palace, Bergenfield, and Dumont, Dumont. Losses sustained during the past few months led to the decision to cancel the leases. The operating deal with Warner will involve the Fox, Oritana and Eureka, in Hackensack; Liberty, Regent and Ritz, in Elizabeth; State and Stanley, in Jersey City. The Fox, Liberty and State are Skouras houses.

RKO and Fox will terminate their operating pool in Detroit shortly and on September 1 RKO will reopen the RKO Downtown under the former policy of first runs, concentrating chiefly on RKO product. The Fox will draw upon Fox-20th Century and Universal next season.

Following announcement of pooling involving the John Hamrick theatres in Portland and Seattle, incorporations have been filed in both Washington and Oregon which gives either one or both of these companies right to operate in both states. Multnomah Theatres has been incorporated with Frank Newman, Sr., president; John Hamrick, vice-president; John P. Garvin, secretary-treasurer, and Clarence R. Innis, A. M. Ahlskog, Al Finkelstein, directors. The same officers and directors have been named to head the new Rainier Theatres Corporation, with headquarters in Seattle. George Black, Jr., of Portland, has power of attorney for Oregon.

Van Beuren Examined In Transfer Suit

Preliminary to a suit for $10,000 brought by Van Beuren Corporation against Charles C. Pettijohn and Courtland Smith, and their counterclaim for $15,000, Louis Nizer, counsel for the defendants, Tuesday examined A. J. Van Beuren as president of the company, on motion granted by Justice Walsh.

Van Beuren claims $10,000 on account of the purchase price in the transfer of a series of two-reel Chaplin reissues, arranged by Mr. Pettijohn and Mr. Smith. The counterclaim is based on their interest in the pictures and for effecting the sale from Ben Blumenthal. The court allowed Mr. Nizer's motion for an inspection of the Van Beuren books in connection with the transaction.

Erwin, Long Adherent, Louisiana Censor Head

Ellis Erwin, New Orleans lawyer and for years an adherent of Huey Long, has been named head of the censor board of the state of Louisiana. Mr. Erwin is a brother of Lou Erwin, wellknown as a booking agent on New York's Broadway.

Mrs. Harry P. Williams, the former Marguerite Clark, long a Paramount star at one time, and A. W. Newlin have been named to the new Louisiana censor board.

FOX SAYS PERSONAL RECORDS VANISHED

Testifies He Paid His Bookkeeper $80,000 Shortly After He Left the Company

Airing of charges of extravagance in administration by William Fox of Fox Theatres Corporation, and his testimony that his personal financial records from 1925 to 1929 had disappeared, highlighted his examination this week before trial in two suits for accounting brought against him by stockholders and creditors of the theatre company and by Fox Films, Inc. The examination was continued Wednesday before Elvin N. Edwards, former district attorney of Nassau County, N. Y., sitting as official referee in the Nassau supreme court.

Under examination by George Richards, counsel for Fox Theatres Corporation, Mr. Fox admitted at the outset that he could not produce his record books, and then gave some of the details of his financial and stock transactions incidental to the affairs of the corporation, from November 11, 1925, to August, 1930, when the firm entered receivership. Other officers of the firm are joined with Mr. Fox as defendants.

It was alleged that when Mr. Fox was head of the two companies before the stock crash of 1929, he paid certain executives salaries of $300,000 a year and gave bonuses totaling $500,000 a year. He admitted under examination that he had distributed 500,000 shares of Fox Theatres stock in addition to 400,000 shares he held himself. His stock, he said, he bought at $22 a share, and he could have taken 43,400 additional shares at that price.

Paid Bookkeeper $80,000

Under questioning by Mr. Richards the witness testified that while he was president of Fox Theatres, his records were kept for him by Herbert Leitstein, an employee of the firm, and that when he retired from the company the books were left in the theatre offices, although Mr. Leitstein at the time also left the company and became personal bookkeeper to Mr. Fox. He admitted he had paid Mr. Leitstein $80,000 a short time after his change of employment.

Mr. Fox said he could not remember whether he had borrowed $1,057,000 from the corporation to purchase 42,300 shares of stock at $25 a share, and when shown a copy of his bank account dated Jan. 6, 1926, indicating a deposit and withdrawal of $1,057,000, he said this did not refresh his memory.

Mr. Fox revealed he had hired, while head of the theatre company, a personal friend of many years' standing, Alexander S. Kempener, at a salary of $40,000 a year, from 1925 to 1930, as the theatre corporation's real estate expert. He testified that Mr. Kempener was paid out of his personal funds, and when he discovered the "error" he asked the company to reimburse him and he received $135,000.

Denies Watering Stock

Still under questioning, Mr. Fox related he was reimbursed for a similar mistake in paying the salary of Jacob W. Loeb, manager of Actors' Personnel. He said the company reimbursed him to the extent of $119,000 for the five-year period.

Mr. Fox testified he owned the entire 400,000 shares of stock in the corporation until June 25, 1925, when it was decided to issue 500,000 additional shares. He said he discussed the subscription with John C. Eisle of the brokerage firm of Eisle & King. He denied he had used his executive authority to water the corporation's stock or divert it from sale to the general public, maintaining it had not been intended for public subscription. He said the brokers were authorized to sell at $25 a share, with a $3 profit on each share for themselves. He admitted that he was to receive 25 per cent on the brokers' net commission.

Mr. Fox said that Mr. Eisle had friends who wanted to take the entire issue, and that the new issue was oversubscribed three times. "I was not surprised that stock bearing my name would be oversubscribed," he testified. He also said that he could have got $10,000,000 for the theatre property but he decided to accept $8,000,000.

Extravagance Charged

The examination related to two accounting suits by Fox Films, Inc., and Fox Theatres Corporation, in which it is claimed the plaintiffs were damaged by alleged extravagance of Mr. Fox. Examination before trial was authorized by order of Justice Meier Steinbrink last January, and is upon 105 separate matters relating to the financial setup of Fox Theatres Corporation, Mr. Fox's personal negotiations in respect to salaries of employees, by-laws of the firm, real estate transactions and general conduct of the business. Codefendants are Jack G. Leo, Eva Fox, Carolyn Leaf Tauzig, Maj. John Zanft, Jacob L. Rubenstein and Bessie Livingstone, all connected with the company before its receivership.

Henry A. Uterhart appeared for the stockholders at the hearing, Ralph O. Wilegus for the Fox Theatres' receivers, and Benjamin Hein for Mr. Fox.

FOX EXAMINATION BARRED TO PUBLIC

By unanimous consent of counsel for all sides, official referee Elvin Edwards on Wednesday ordered the examination before trial of William Fox continued behind closed doors. The press and public immediately were barred from the Mineola courtroom.

The order of the court binds all counsel involved not to discuss the proceedings with the press after any session nor until a report has been submitted by Referee Edwards to the supreme court. Mr. Edwards refused to disclose who demanded the closed hearings.

William Fox has pending a countersuit for $2,000,000 in connection with various stock transactions.

Nye Asks Inquiry To Stop "Milking"

the first Securities and Exchange Commission hearings disclosed that protective committees had been formed of men who held none of the securities and that some members had profited extensively by trading in the securities whose holders they were supposed to be protecting.

The Paramount case, however, according to Senator McAdoo, offers no features which have not marked other reorganization proceedings. If the matter is studied at all, individually, it will be as part of a general inquiry into receivership conditions and court attitude in New York, soon to be undertaken.

Compensation a Court Matter

While the heavy fees claimed by lawyers in this case are subject to criticism, it was said at Washington, compensation is a matter to be settled by the courts having jurisdiction and does not appear to be a subject for Congressional investigation intervention.

It was also pointed out at the Capital that the Paramount case is being studied by the SEC as fully as it could be by a Congressional committee. On the basis of disclosures in the Paramount and other cases being studied, the report is expected to recommend legislation to protect distressed corporations from rapacity of speculators and lawyers.

Even before the bills of the lawyers in the Paramount case were filed the SEC had had intimations that the charges would be heavy. It already had developed that reorganizations were being considered a fertile field by some branches of the legal fraternity and there had also been intimations that not all lawyers were above initiating the formation of "protective" committees.

This phase was developed to some extent during SEC's hearings last month by witnesses testifying that a New York lawyer, who apparently had no direct interest in Paramount, sought to form a "protective" committee of which he would become counsel.

The Paramount reorganization, it was declared by Senator Nye of North Dakota, shows the need for "thorough investigation by Congress and legislation that will protect companies in difficulties from being milked by lawyers, who get theirs even if the rest go broke."

"Plundering of corporations in financial difficulties has become a national racket," he charged.

Similar Conditions Elsewhere

While the Paramount case has been extensively publicized, members of Congress declare similar conditions have been found in a number of other bankruptcy and reorganization proceedings and that new laws are required.

These laws, it is indicated, will include a requirement that protective committees shall be formed from among actual holders of the securities involved, will prohibit members of such committees from trading in the securities they are supposed to protect, and may attempt to lay down some standards either for the compensation to be paid attorneys or limiting the number to be retained.

Special Master Joyce on Wednesday vetoed the proposed settlement of two claims against Paramount totaling $162,900. One, for $127,500, was by Goldstein Brothers, New England theatre operators, the other for $35,400 by Lawrence Berenson, attorney. Judge Coxe approved other claims totaling $800,000.

John Hertz Star At SEC Hearing

during the reorganization, Mr. Cook replied that he did not and as senior partner of the firm of Cook, Nathan & Lehman "would discharge any partner of his who had."

Louis M. Loeb, partner in Mr. Cook's firm, was interrogated on the formation and activities of the committee. He admitted that the de-listing of stock of bankrupt corporations resulted in increased deposits by stockholders with protective committees, due to the fact that the certificates of deposit may be traded when the stock cannot.

Retention of protective committees under 77-B of the bankruptcy law was urged upon the SEC examiner by Mr. Cook, who said that without them there would be 100 lawyers representing small interests and taking up endless time in court instead of one counsel representing a large consolidated interest.

No First Division Realignment Made

Despite discussions which indicated a realignment in the executive setup of First Division with the possibility of Joe Brandt as chairman of the board, the company's directors decided Tuesday that no changes will be made and that Harry Thomas will continue as head of the company. The board reported that First Division financing arrangements were completed for 1935-36.

Mr. Brandt had been considered for a top position and a place in the new financial setup, and membership on the board of the reorganized Pathe. He had made a survey for Frank S. Kolbe, when Mr. Kolbe became president of Pathe, as to the company's future policy with respect to First Division, and was reported to have been slated as Pathe's representative in First Division. It was contemplated that he would obtain an interest in First Division's new reorganization for $250,000 capitalization, Young & Kolbe putting in $125,000. First Division is expected to apply for reorganization within two weeks.

It was reported that First Division's new season activities will be conducted as in the past, distributing pictures from independent producers, largely confined to those financed by Pathe. Following reorganization, the company may decide to produce several features itself.

Willie C. Bright, treasurer of First Division Exchanges, Inc., has been elected a vice-president of Pathe Exchanges, Inc. Formerly with the New York Times and the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Mr. Bright recently joined First Division to fill the post of treasurer vacated by Dario L. Faralla. His duties with both companies will not conflict. Mr. Bright succeeded Amos Hiatt, who resigned this week.

Will J. Dusenbury, 70, who with his brother, J. W. Dusenbury, owned the Grand theatre building in Hamilton, Ohio, died last week when he leaped into the Scioto River from a bridge. The body was recovered 24 hours later. Ill health was given as the cause.

DOUBT VOLUNTARY CODE THIS YEAR; WOULD ENTAIL CONTRACT LOSSES

Prolonged Deliberations and Need of Moving Through Federal Trade Commission Would Delay Pact, It Is Said

Exhibitor Groups Seeking Self-Regulation Look for Central Guidance; Kansas - Missouri Board to Hear Complaint

Chances this year for a voluntary code or the creation of any form of self-regulation for the motion picture industry under governmental sanction went glimmering this week when it was made known by responsible industry circles in New York that distributors would face the loss of millions of dollars if 1935-36 contracts were disturbed as a result of the drafting of a new set of trade practices, many of which, as a matter of effective procedure, would necessarily be incorporated in license agreements.

Even if a move for a voluntary compact should be initiated in the near future—and the possibility of concerted action has not yet appeared on the horizon—it is felt, because of the prolonged deliberations that would follow and the necessity of moving through the Federal Trade Commission, that no agreement could become effective before the 1936-37 season.

While distributor apathy, for several reasons, was becoming more pronounced in home office circles in New York and while the Voluntary Industry Committee was delaying its decision on the legal possibilties of a voluntary setup, with no announcement as to whether a decision would be forthcoming, it was reported from key centers that those exhibitor groups seeking self-regulation locally were looking for some sort of central guidance. Other developments were:

1. The Federal Trade Commission announced initial procedure for holding trade practice conferences, emphasizing that it must first be satisfied that the convening of a conference would be to the best interest of the industry and the public.

2. All major distributors consider the principles laid down in the NRA code as adequately codifying the industry, and are retaining these provisions so far as contractually possible.

3. Seeing no immediate necessity for a voluntary code, at the same time John C. Flinn, secretary of the former Code Authority, warned that a trade practice agreement eventually will be imperative to solve many old problems and new ones arising.

4. Indicative of the demand in the field for some form of arbitration tribunal, the grievance board of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association was preparing to hear its first complaint.

With more than 170 communications from industries interested in trade agreements before it, either submitted directly or transferred from the National Recovery Administration, the Federal Trade Commission prepared to undertake negotiation of such agreements and promulgated basic rules covering the information to be provided in applications. No proposal from the motion picture industry has been submitted either to the commission or the new NRA administration.

Studying Past Procedure

The commission is studying the rules it has followed in the past in negotiating of fair-trade agreements with a view to their modernization and is expected to announce soon that the voluntary codes may contain provisions of any nature so long as they are not contrary to law.

This will make possible the inclusion in agreements of many of the provisions of the former recovery codes which it had been feared would be prohibited because they did not deal with violations of the trade commission, Clayton or similar acts, and may permit, if the industry desires, the transference almost bodily of the trade-practice provisions of the film code.

ASSESSMENT CHECKS FOR $7,000 RETURNED

John C. Flinn, secretary of the retired Code Authority, kept his skeleton office force busy this week returning checks totaling $7,000 received as assessments from exhibitor signers of the NRA code. Most of these were received after the supreme court's decision voiding the Blue Eagle, indicating, said Mr. Flinn, that many exhibitors still want a code.

More than 9,000 exhibitors paid dues to the Code Authority, Mr. Flinn revealed, and there are only 10,000 competitive situations.

Mr. Flinn's report to the Code Authority, expected next week at the final windup, also will show that the budget at the beginning of 1934 provided for $300,000. Collections for the year actually were $150,464 from producers and distributors, and $154,570 from exhibitors, an excess of $5,000 over the estimate. This was equalized in the 1935 budget.

Records of the 31 code boards and the Code Authority remain the permanent possession of the motion picture industry and will be kept by Mr. Flinn at the Authority's request.

There will be no necessity for the consideration of labor provisions. Under the amended recovery act, minimum wages, maximum hours and prohibition of child labor were to be required in any voluntary code requiring suspension of the anti-trust laws. None of the codes consummated by the commission will carry any such suspension, and it is believed there is little or no demand for such privileges in industry generally, in view of the penalty which must be paid in the freezing of labor conditions.

Must Show Meeting Is Wanted

In making public its initial regulations, covering the filing of applications, the commission explained that before it will authorize a trade practice conference it will be necessary for an industry to demonstrate that such a conference will be desirable and to the best interest of the industry and the public.

If, upon application, the commission decides to go ahead it will call into closed conference the members of the group applying for an agreement, at which meeting the ground will be canvassed to determine whether it will be necessary to hold a conference of the entire industry or branch.

The initial conferences will be closed to the public, but any general conference called will be wide open, it is said. These will be less in the nature of hearings than conventions at which all present will be permited to express their views.

There will be less red tape and more speed in the consummation of the agreements than marked the negotiations of the codes. After the general hearing the matter would rest entirely with the commission, with no bickering, no trading, and the commission, as in the past, phrasing the rules to suit itself rather than the desires of any group.

Must Show Authority

Applications for trade agreements, which may be in the form of either a petition or an informal communication, under the commission's rules, will be required to include a brief description of the business for which the conference is intended, the number of units in the industry, the number of employees, the products manufactured or commodities distributed, the annual volume of production, volume of sales, and capitalization of the industry.

It will also be necessary for the applicant to show the authority under which he is acting, and if filed by an executive of a trade association the petition must be accompanied by a copy of the organization's empowering resolution and a statement of the percentage of the entire industry represented by the association membership, either on the bass of volume of business or from the standpoint of the number in the industry, or both.

If the application is filed by an unorganized group, the percentage of the entire industry represented by the group must be shown.

The application must state whether the conference is intended for all branches of the industry or is to be limited to a particular branch or branches. It must also set forth the unfair methods of competition, trade abuses or unethical practices in the industry which it is intended to correct.

Officials of the commission admit that the 170-odd communications which have been received do not represent that number of actual applications for conferences. As a matter of fact, it was said, very few actual applications have been filed and in most instances the communications are merely requests for information as to procedure.

Groups Recommendations

Under the system it has followed in the past, the commission considers the recommendations of an industry, and divides those which it approves into two groups, one consisting of provisions prohibiting practices banned by law, violations of which can be prosecuted, and the other, accepted as representing the views of the industry, covering practices not specifically covered by law but which it is felt should be eliminated.

The trade practice submitted policy affords industry an opportunity collectively to eliminate unfair trade practices, but there is none of the "self-government of industry" which featured the recovery codes. Enforcement of the agreement is handled by the trade commission itself. Any member of an industry operating under an agrement may report to the commission any competitor who is violating the rules, but neither the industry nor any association or organization therein is empowered to deal with violations.

Officials in Washington point out that the new

MPTOA CALLS ON EXHIBITORS TO ACT ON 10-POINT VOLUNTARY CODE IDEA

Organization Presents Program for Theatremen's Consideration; Warns Government Will Act If Industry Does Not

Exhibitors of the country were urged this week by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to make recommendations on four fundamental questions concerned in the construction and enforcement of a voluntary code to govern relations among exhibitors and between exhibitors and distributors. These four questions follow:

1. What should be done to improve the business and trade relations, and what unfair trade practices should be regulated or abolished?

2. What can be done to restrain unfair competition, remove injustices and abuses?

3. How can these things be effectively accomplished?

4. Who is going to do it?

All exhibitor units are being urged by the MPTOA to launch negotiations locally with distributors for regulatory trade practice provisions.

Large circuits are understood to be planning to use a rider in contracts with exchanges imposing a ban on double bills and on cut-rate admission plans. Both the circuits and the exchanges would be parties to the rider and the agreement would prevent the sale of product involved in the contract to subsequents employing either the double featuring practice or a cut rate policy.

The Program

The MPTOA is offering for consideration a ten-point program to control the principal "irritating" abuses and trade practices and exhibitor problems as the basis for exhibitors' analysis in making recommendations for a voluntary code, as follows:

1. Unfair cut-rate competition between theatres, frequently forcing the sale of motion picture entertainment below cost, demoralizing and cheapening the business and ultimately and inevitably ruining the quality of pictures for all theatres.

(a) Premiums, give-aways and gift nights.

(b) Lotteries, pseudo-contests and prizes.

(c) Double and triple feature programs for one admission charge.

(d) Two-for-ones, coupons, merchants tickets and indiscriminate use of "advertising" passes.

(e) Bargain matinees, cheap balcony admissions, and unreasonably low admission scales.

2. Unreasonable clearance, either in time or area, not based on any actual competition, secured by private contracts or agreements without subsequents' knowledge.

(a) The growing necessity for an openly negotiated and published uniform zoning plan in each metropolitan center to limit clearance in time and area, to provide definite and uniform availability for subsequent runs of like classifications, and to encourage reasonable admission scales by offering earlier availability to theatres charging higher admissions, thereby reducing cut-rate competition on day and date runs of the same picture.

3. Overbuying to deprive a competing exhibitor of needed pictures.

(a) Encouraged by unrestricted double bills.

(b) Prompt release of pictures rejected under selective service contracts.

(c) Involves questions of theatre policy, genuine competitive buying and bidding for pictures, reasonable booking requirements of specific theatres and frequently expert and unbiased judgment of suitability of attractions, which can only be determined fairly by an impartial local committee qualified by personal experience and knowledge to judge each case.

4. A reasonable and unconditional rejection privilege in all contracts for ten or more feature pictures bought at the same time. We suggest 20%.

5. Control of non-theatrical exhibitions of professional entertainment pictures to prevent unfair competition with a theatre.

6. The score charge "racket."

7. The music tax "extortion."

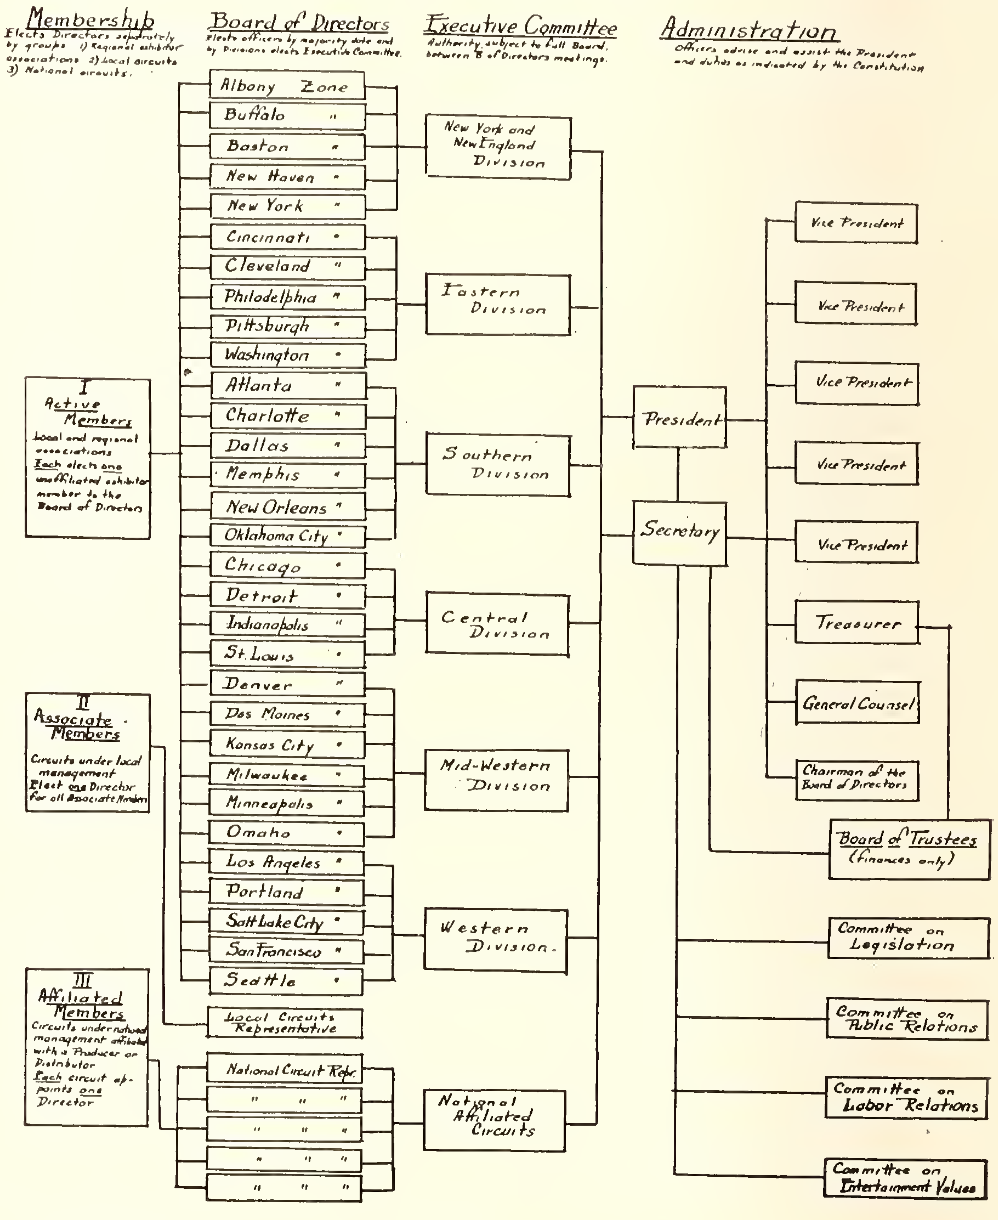
New Organization of the MPTOA

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners' membership and executive structure set down in the chart below shows how every type of theatre operation is represented in that association of exhibitors, under the plan adopted in the revised constitution and by-laws adopted unanimously by the members:



Membership
Elects Directors separately by groups 1) Regional exhibitor associations 2) Local circuits 3) National circuits.
Board of Directors
Elects officers by majority vote and by Divisions elects Executive Committee.
Executive Committee
Authority subject to full Board, between B of Directors meetings.
Administration
Officers advise and assist the President and duties as indicated by the Constitution
I Active Members
Local and regional associations
Each elects one unaffiliated exhibitor member to the Board of Directors
II Associate Members
Circuits under local management
Elect one Director for all Associate Members
III Affiliated Members
Circuits under national management affiliated with a Producer or Distributor
Each circuit appoints one Director

MPTOA OFFERS 10-POINT CODE PLAN

8. Arbitrary designation by a distributor of the days of the week a picture must be exhibited regardless of suitability.

9. Forcing unwanted short subjects with feature picture sales.

10. A standard form of exhibition contract, reduced to essential clauses, understandable in language to intelligent exhibitors who are not lawyers, with no trick clauses giving unfair advantages to the distributor added thereto without the actual knowledge and voluntary consent of the exhibitor, and with a uniform provision for the enforceable arbitration of all contract disputes, including substitution.

"There is no doubt other and, perhaps, less important abuses and trade practices may be just as irritating to individual exhibitors, but any plan that can practically and effectively and fairly regulate or control any one or all of these ten major items to the general satisfaction of exhibitors will get serious and careful consideration by the MPTOA," said the organization, which will be guided in drafting a complete or partial voluntary code for industry self-regulation by exhibitor suggestions.

Warns of "Empty Gestures"

"As a substitute for the quite dead NRA," the MPTOA declared, "there is talk of a voluntary code that will retain all of the 'good' features of the NRA code and eliminate all of the 'bad' ones, that will abolish the really serious unfair trade practices that were ignored or evaded by the former code, that will contain effective provisions in place of the ineffective and confused ones in the old code, that will be voluntarily agreed to and adhered to by all producers, all distributors and all exhibitors of their own free will and accord, that will provide a majority representation for each faction in each division of the business, and that will be uniformly and effectively enforced all the way down the line, from the top to the bottom.

"This looks good on paper," said the MPTOA. "Probably every exhibitor, if convinced such a thing was possible, would be for it. But let's not kid ourselves in these matters. While it may be useful as promotion material to rope in the 'suckers' and unthinking exhibitors for dues and donations, we believe in a realistic consideration of such proposals, rather than empty gestures, piously wishful declarations and dishonest advocacy of obviously impractical and visionary schemes."

In order to work out a method or system that will fairly regulate unfair competitive practices and remove abuses, the MPTOA said it is ready to cooperate with any "sincere" group or organizations of exhibitors, distributors or producers.

Warns Government May Act

"If it is demonstrated during the next few months that this industry cannot or will not regulate itself fairly or control its unfair trade practices and commercial abuses, it is pretty certain," the MPTOA warned, "that the government, the state legislatures and the courts will do it for us, just as they are beginning to do it for other industries."

In urging exhibitor groups to initiate negotiations with distributors for trade practice regulations, the MPTOA believes a voluntary code will be difficult, if not impossible, to achieve, and that if one is drawn it would take months to obtain its adoption and that its enforcement would be doubtful. The organization believes more effective regulation may be obtained through local effort.

NRA HAS BUSINESS AID DEPARTMENT

The National Recovery Administration announced on Wednesday the establishment of a department of business cooperation under the direction of Prentiss L. Coonley, consisting of five divisions, in one of which will be included amusements. This division, also embracing graphic arts, public agencies, public utilities and service trades, will be administered by L. H. Peebles as director and William P. Farnsworth, former deputy administrator of the NRA amusement division, as assistant.

The new department will be primarily a contact agency between industry and the Federal Trade Commission in the negotiation of voluntary trade practice agreements.

Allied Complaints Called Unsettled

Allied States Association, in a bulletin this week, said that the matter of exhibitor complaints, taken from the recent Atlanta convention to Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, is in the same status as originally, being still unsettled. It was said that Mr. Hays had done all he could to bring about amicable adjustment of the difficulties. The courts alone can decide the issue, said the bulletin.

The Independent Exhibitors of Massachusetts, Allied affiliate, in its most recent bulletin, urges its members to contact their Congressmen and Senators on the Pettengill block booking bill, now pending in Congress, urging passage.

New pressure was brought to bear on the Pettengill measure in Congress last week by Representative Wigglesworth, Massachusetts, in response to urgent constituency requests. He called for immediate enactment of the bill. The Indiana Allied unit, at its joint meeting last week with the Kentucky group, endorsed the Pettengill measure.

Sentiment at the meeting seemed to favor relief for the industry by modification of the copyright laws. Sidney Samuelson, Abram F. Myers, Walter Littlefield, H. M. Richey, P. J. Wood, Aaron Saperstein, Ray Branch and Ray Tesch were among the speakers.

Meetings of Allied's regional vice-presidents are to be held in widely separated key centers in the future for the purpose of giving the rank and file of the membership an opportunity to meet the national officers.

The Allied organization in Massachusetts is preparing plans aiming at the reduction of utility rates to theatre operators.

Mrs. Fay Ellis has been named secretary of the GFTA Independent Theatres Association, with headquarters in Atlanta, succeeding A. Jules Benedic, resigned.

The first annual meeting of the Independent Theatres Protective Association of Wisconsin and Upper Michigan is scheduled for August 6 and 7 at Milwaukee.

Doubt Voluntary Code This Season

recovery act provides only for "voluntary" agreements, and that no such agreement to be administered by an industrial organization could be enforced except with the consent of the governed. In other words, there would be no way of handling violations, unless the agreement was made in the form of a contract under which civil suits could be brought in the event of nonperformance.

An agreement made under the auspices of the Federal Trade Commission, however, has the trade commission, Clayton and other acts to back it up. But these being federal statutes, enforcement lies solely in the hands of federal agencies.

Consider Dillard Plan

The legal hazards in adoption of a voluntary code requiring action in concert was brought into emphasis this week when the Astor theatre in Chicago accepted a settlement from distributors, terminating its suit charging conspiracy as the result of inability to obtain product to show at a dime admission. It was pointed out any voluntary agreement requiring cooperative action would be liable to attack in the courts on the grounds of conspiracy.

It was learned that the distributors are continuing in 1935-36 contracts those provisions involving clauses which can be enforced by contract.

The newly created grievance board of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association at Kansas City will hear its first complaint, that on a charge of enforced shortage of product filed by R. H. Montgomery of the Mainstreet, Independence, Kan. He told the board that because of a new theatre in the town he has been unable to obtain a sufficient number of films for next year from companies which have supplied him in the past.

In Salt Lake City placards are displayed by theatres saying code hours and wages are being maintained.

Reports reaching John C. Flinn, secretary of the former Code Authority, were that numerous factors in the industry were mulling over the plan for voluntary arbitration and the creation of a Motion Picture Institute, as proposed by Tyree Dillard, Jr. The next move is up to the Voluntary Industry Committee.

Ted Toddy Leaves Columbia Pictures

Ted Toddy, manager of public relations, publicity and exploitation for the southern division of Columbia Pictures with headquarters at Atlanta, resigned July 12, terminating a connection of six years. He handled six branches embracing 11 southern states, and was editor of the Columbia magazine for the southern division of the company.

Prior to promotion as divisional head, he was exploiteer for the New Orleans branch. He started the first Buck Jones Club as well as the Scrappy Clubs, and promoted the "Columbia Jubilee Weeks" throughout the country. Before joining Columbia he was with Universal in the home office, handling Broadway openings.

RKO ADMISSIONS UP $46,065 WEEKLY; RENTALS, $24,069 PER WEEK, OVER 1934

Net Cash Profit on Theatre Operations $1,000,000 in 1934, Against Half Million Loss in 1933, Trustee Reports

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and its subsidiaries engaged in production, distribution and exhibition are making substantial progress in rehabilitating their corporate, financial and operating structures in the proceedings for reorganizing the bankrupt.

Admissions paid by the public at RKO theatres are running $46,065 weekly ahead of 1934, averaging $397,811 per week as compared with a weekly average of $351,746 in 1934, on the basis of a return of $8,344,044 for the first 21 weeks of 1935, against $18,290,803 in 1934.

Returns from exhibitors on film rentals and sales are averaging $24,069 more per week than in 1934, on an average weekly gross of $434,069 for 1935 and $409,167 for 1934, based on the $9,115,442 grossed in the first 21 weeks of 1935 and the $21,276,716 grossed in 1934.

Acquisition by Consolidated Film Industries, H. J. Yates, president, of $1,825,208 in secured gold notes has resulted in a reduction of principal amounts to $25,000 monthly until February, 1937, and $50,000 monthly from then until May, 1938.

Service corporation expenses have been reduced $82,000 monthly.

Net cash profit on theatre operations in 1934 was $1,000,000, whereas in 1933 there was a $511,879 loss.

Some 32 unprofitable Orpheum theatres have been abandoned, and now this division operates only 17 houses.

Orpheum's net loss has been reduced from $1,045,825 in 1933 to $401,089 in 1934.

RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., in 1934 had a net profit of $570,378, compared with a loss of $663,536 in 1933.

RKO Pathe Pictures, Inc., lost $627,149 in 1933, and only $270,477 in 1934.

Pathe News, Inc., reduced its losses from $141,233 in 1933 to $48,646 in 1934.

Total claims of $55,104,721 against the estate now stand as follows: Allowed by special master, subject to further reductions, $11,283,101; allowance indicated, subjected to court approval, $5,373,942; in negotiation or under investigation, $3,241,665; secured debt of RKO, $13,968,500; withdrawn, $4,641,386; payments made on RKO six per cent secured notes, $250,000; RKO six per cent secured notes in treasury, $626,000; amount of reduction by amended claim, stipulation, brief, allowance, etc., $15,720,125.

Cash on hand has increased from $2,619,000 to $4,659,000.

Fixed indebtedness has been reduced $2,600,000.

Net loss of $310,547 was incurred in 1934, against the $4,384,064 loss in 1933, but a net profit of $388,002 was earned in the first 21 weeks of 1935.

Current assets of $12,588,383 were at the ratio of 3 to 2 to the $8,343,383 current liabilities.

RKO has $46,739,157 worth of capital assets—land, buildings, equipment and the like.

Total assets are $65,511,419.

The status of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation, parent of all RKO theatre and motion picture producing and distributing subsidiaries, is outlined by Irving Trust Company, as trustee, in its first report, filed this week in United States district court for the southern district of New York, in the proceedings for the reorganization of the corporation. It disclosed that the funded debt of the corporation outstanding on June 30, 1934, was as follows:

Improvements in RKO Operations Reflected in Earning Statements

The financial and operating conditions of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiaries, now in proceedings for reorganization from bankruptcy, were set forth this week by Irving Trust Company, as trustee, in its first report to the United States district court for the southern district of New York. The equity receiver, however, previously had filed four reports since the receivership. As part of the report, Irving Trust set down consolidated statements of profit and loss for the year ending December 31, 1934, and for the 21 weeks ending May 25, 1935. The 1935 report (on the following page) indicates the extent of operating improvements.

(a) $1,825,208.76 Secured Six Percent Gold Notes: This issue is secured by RKO's collateral note indenture dated as of July 1, 1931, made to Chemical Bank and Trust Company, as trustee and a supplemental indenture dated January 1, 1932, under which RKO pledged with Chemical as trustee capital stocks and obligations of certain subsidiary companies which were valued on the books of RKO on June 30, 1934 at $53,389,383.

(b) $11,600,000.00 Ten-year Six Percent Sinking Fund Gold Debentures, due December 1, 1941: These debentures are secured by an indenture made by RKO to Chemical Bank and Trust Company, as trustee, dated as of December 1, 1931, and constitute a second lien on the collateral pledged as security for the payment of the secured six percent gold notes above-mentioned. During the receivership proceedings, Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company succeeded Chemical Bank & Trust Company as trustee under said indenture.

(c) $2,814,500.00 Six Percent Gold Notes: $1,118,500.00 principal amount of these notes are secured pari passu with the debentures referred to in the preceding paragraph.

Leases and Contracts

Prior to the receivership, Irving Trust pointed out, RKO had entered into some 48 contracts and four leases of theatres and office space, and was the guarantor of 22 leases of theatres and office space entered into by subsidiaries. During the subsequent proceedings the four theatre leases were defaulted, six contracts were adopted, 11 were disaffirmed and four were terminated. In addition several were assigned to or otherwise assumed by subsidiaries.

Irving Trust, by orders of the court, has until Jan. 1, 1936 to adopt or disaffirm contracts not yet disposed of.

Consolidated Holds $1,825,208 Notes

The secured gold notes held by Consolidated Film Industries, total $1,825,208, and were originally issued in the amount of $6,000,000 to Chemical Bank and Commercial Investment Trust. Mr. Yates' company purchased them in June, 1934.

Subsequent agreements with Consolidated substantially reduced the amount of each instalment of principal and extended the maturities, so that $25,000 principal amount became payable on the first day of each month from September, 1934 to February, 1937 and $50,000 becomes payable each month from March, 1937 to May, 1938.

Liquidation of Collateral

Pursuant to federal court orders, Chemical Bank and Irving Trustee, as trustees, have caused RKO and its subsidiaries to make payments to Chemical as trustee, in liquidation of collateral held by it, in the aggregate amount of $13,338,508 up to June 8, 1935, as follows:

In payment of principal notes	$12,083,521.86
In payment of interest on said notes	1,208,306.23
Dividends paid on a subsidiary's capital stock	46,680.00
Total paid in	$13,338,508.09

All but $97,369 of the above sum has been disbursed by Chemical as trustee as follows:

Re-loaned to subsidiaries of RKO against new notes of such subsidiaries	$12,238,287.11
Applied to the reduction of the principal of RKO secured six per cent gold notes	575,208.76
Applied to the payment of interest on said secured notes	243,018.74
Paid to Irving Trust Company, as trustee of RKO, to be used for the lawful administration expenses of the estate of RKO, as approved by court	184,624.34
Total paid out	$13,241,138.95

Service Corporation Expenses Cut

The principal corporation coming under this sub-heading is RKO Service Corporation, a non-profit subsidiary (of Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation,) which furnishes management services to all RKO subsidiaries and certain affiliates engaged in the operation of theatres. The expenses of this corporation are pro-rated among the theatres served on the basis of their gross receipts.

In 1933 the average monthly expense allocated to theatre companies was approximately $39,500 less than the average amount so charged in the year 1932, even though there had been included in 1933 a write-off of almost $150,000, which covered accounts receivable from affiliated companies in receivership or bankruptcy or otherwise unable to meet their obligations. A further reduction took place in 1934, during which the average expense again declined by approximately $31,500, monthly.

The other corporations in this classification are: RKO Film Booking Corporation, a non-profit corporation which derives its income from fees charged to theatre companies for services rendered in connection with film booking, and Radio-Keith-Orpheum Vaudeville Exchange, Inc., and Vaudeville Collection Agency,

Inc., which collect fees from the principals and agents engaged in supplying vaudeville acts. The expense of operating RKO Film Booking Corporation was reduced approximately $11,000 in 1934 from the cost of such operation in 1933. Radio-Keith-Orpheum Vaudeville Exchange, Inc., and Vaudeville Collection Agency, Inc., while still operating at a loss, due primarily to unfavorable leases of commercial space entered into prior to the receivership of RKO at a time when vaudeville was extensively used, show a reduction in loss in 1934 of $25,741 from the combined loss of the year 1933.

Due to the reduction in operating expenses, including a substantial decrease in fixed charges, of the theatre properties operated by RKO subsidiaries, the results of such operations for the last full year of 1934 showed a substantial improvement over those for 1933, Irving Trust reported to the court.

On a comparable basis, the operations of all theatre operating companies included in the RKO consolidation earned a cash profit of $1,000,000 in 1934, whereas in 1933 they lost $511,879. "This result," said the report, "was accomplished even though expenditures for maintenance, repairs, renewals and supplies were substantially increased in order that the properties should be kept in proper physical condition."

Only 17 Orpheum Theatres Left

Since the receivership, when 49 Orpheum theatres were being operated by wholly owned subsidiaries of that division, 32 theatres have been abandoned or sold, so that now only 17 of the original Orpheum properties are being operated under the RKO banner. These 17 theatres are operated by 11 subsidiaries. Stadium Theatre Corporation holds, as pledgee, the capital stocks of all Orpheum subsidiaries. In addition to these 11 theatre subsidiaries, three other Orpheum subsidiaries are still active, namely, Orpheum Circuit Booking Corporation, Excelsior Collection Agency, Inc., and Radio-Keith-Orpheum Western Vaudeville Exchange, Inc.

During 1933 these 14 subsidiaries of Orpheum showed a combined net loss of $1,045,825. In 1934 this combined loss was reduced to $401,089. The difference between the results of operations for these two years, however, is not an accurate measure of the improvement from ordinary operations, because there is included in both years, but principally in 1933, non-recurring write-offs of accounts receivable from affiliated companies, losses resulting from the disposal of investments and capital assets and losses incurred by the cancellation or revision of leases. It is estimated that the 1934 results from ordinary operations of these companies iimproved approximately $150,000 over 1933.

Producing, Distributing Subsidiaries

During the year 1934, the operations of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc. (a wholly owned subsidiary of RKO) and its subsidiary companies resulted in a net profit of $570,378, after all charges, including a provision for estimated federal income taxes. This profit showed a considerable improvement over the results of operations in 1933, during which a net loss of $663,536 was incurred.

RKO Pathe Pictures, Inc. (also a wholly owned subsidiary of RKO) and its subsidiary companies sustained a net loss of $627,149 in 1933. Operations for 1934 showed a substantial improvement, resulting in a net loss of $270,477.

Pathe News, Inc., another direct subsidiary of RKO, engaged principally in the production of the Pathe newsreels, showed a net loss for the year 1933 of $141,233.64. The operations for 1934 resulted in considerable improvement, the loss for the year being cut to $48,646.

NEW ORLEANS TEST USES FAMILY NIGHT

An experiment in "better films" is being undertaken this month in New Orleans. Four neighborhood houses, cooperating with the New Orleans Better Films chapter of the Louisiana Educational Association, are running selected "family night" programs each Saturday in July. The films are approved by members of the organization, who have been dissatisfied with the general run of product.

The following tabulation is a complete summary of the claims filed against the estate, as compiled by the trustee, exclusive of four claims which were contingent claims based upon guarantees of rental obligations of subsidiaries, upon which no default has as yet taken place:

Claims based upon rent guaranties or direct leases	$29,544,355.56
Claims based upon guaranties of financial obligations, and direct obligations of RKO	21,799,114.40
Claims founded on alleged breach of contract	1,112,828.99
Claims for goods and commercial services rendered	30,128.54
Claims for other services rendered (legal, banking, etc.)	106,101.64
Income tax claims	260,055.75
Miscellaneous claims	2,252,136.74
Total	$55,104,721.62

Under date of June 12, 1935, Judge Thomas D. Thacher filed his report as special master. This report shows that of a total of $26,437,376 in claims referred to Judge Thacher, there was recommended for allowance the sum of $11,283,101. This last-mentioned sum is subject to reduction by the amounts received by certain landlords for reletting of premises under lease, and a reduction for discounting of future payments allowed to Rockefeller Center, Inc., in connection with the lease of office space in the RKO Building.

The schedule below sets forth the status of all claims on June 28, 1935:

Allowed by special master, subject to the deductions described above and to the approval of the Court	$11,283,101.38
Allowance indicated, subject to approval of the court	5,373,942.39
Negotiating, investigating and/or preparing for hearing	3,241,665.61
Secured debt of RKO	13,968,500.00
Withdrawn	4,641,386.42
Payments made on RKO six per cent secured notes subsequent to filing of claim thereon	250,000.00
RKO six per cent gold notes (unsecured) in treasury (included in claim filed thereon)	626,000.00
Amount of reduction by amended claim, stipulation, brief, allowance, etc.	15,720,125.82
Total claims filed	$55,104,721.62

"No plan of reorganization has been formulated as yet to the knowledge of the trustee," said the report to the court.

On Dec. 31, 1932, RKO and its subsidiaries had approximately $2,619,000 in cash, exclusive of approximately $594,000 held by subsidiaries which were subsequently eliminated from the RKO consolidated accounts because of bankruptcy, receivership, or other evidence of insolvency. On December 31, 1934 cash on hand had been increased to $4,659,000, an increase of approximately $2,040,000. During this same two-year period the fixed indebtedness of RKO and its subsidiaries was reduced by over $2,600,000 (including the payment of $425,208 principal amount of RKO's secured six per cent gold notes), and interest on indebtedness was paid in the amount of $2,986,615 by use of funds acquired from ordinary operations.

A consolidated statement of profit and loss of RKO and subsidiaries for the year ended December 31, 1934, was submitted by Irving Trust to the court as an exhibit in the report. It indicated a net loss for the year of $310,547, after all charges, including interest on the secured indebtedness and provision for estimated income taxes. This was said to constitute an improvement of over $4,000,000 from the results for the year 1933 during which a net loss of $4,384,064 was incurred. Furthermore it is estimated that the operations during 1934 yielded a cash profit of over $2,000,000.

Furthermore, and indicating the extent of improvements in the corporation, operations for the 21 weeks ended May 25, 1935 resulted in a net profit (unaudited) of $388,002, after all charges. The cash profit for the same period is estimated at $1.050,000.

Theatre Admissions Increase

In the consolidated statements of profit and loss for the year ended December, 1934, and for the 21 weeks ended May 25th, 1935—both of which appear in full in this issue—Irving Trust shows that theatre admissions are on the increase. For the 52 weeks of 1934, admissions were $18,290,803 at RKO theatres, and film rentals and sales were $21,276,716, whereas for the first 21 weeks of 1935, theatre admissions totaled $8,344,044 and film rentals and sales were $9,115,442. The following breakdown shows the improvement.

Theatre Admissions

Weekly Average for 52 weeks of 1934: $351,746.

Weekly Average for 21 Weeks of 1935: $397,811.

Film Rentals and Sales

Weekly Average for 52 weeks of 1934: $409,167.

Weekly Average for 21 Weeks of 1935: $434,069.

The average weekly improvement, then, would be as follows: theatre admissions, $46,065 a week; film rentals, $24,902.

Profit from actual operations already is running ahead of 1933, equaling $2,142,737 for the 21 weeks of 1935, compared with $3,854,721 for the full 52 weeks of 1933.

Working Assets $12,588,383

Current assets on December 31, 1934, were proportionate to current liabilities at the ratio of 3 to 2, assets totaling $12,588,383, against liabilities of $8,343,338.

Capital deficit on that date was $10,822,955, and operating deficit was $16,078,501, a total deficit of $26,901,456.

Capital assets—land, buildings, equipment, leasehold, after devaluation, were worth $46,739,157.

Total assets were listed at $65,511,419.

Seigel Case Dismissed

The Baltimore grand jury last week dismissed the case against Mike Seigel, brought by Oliver Film, New York, which charged he received films of the Baer-Braddock fight without permission of the film company, which claims exclusive rights to the films.

Seek Conference With Huey Long

Legislative developments of the week included a miscellaneous group of bills before those legislatures which were still in session, and tax decisions of various sorts.

It is understood that film interests in Louisiana are attempting to arrange a conference with Senator Huey Long, looking to moderation of the recent law providing for a censor board and an inspection fee of $4 a reel. Another Long measure, passed last week, provides that foreign corporations may not sue in the courts of the state unless qualified to do business there and only if all taxes have been paid.

The Massachusetts House last week killed a bill providing for regulation of billboard advertising. The Senate has passed the bill prohibiting injunctions in labor disputes until after a hearing of the facts. The House had previously passed the measure.

Missouri's new one per cent sales tax will apply to advertising and accessories, according to a letter from G. H. Bates, supervisor of the sales tax at St. Louis, to Fred Wehrenberg, head of the local MPTO. The tax is effective August 27.

Phil Hill, city manager in Beatrice, Neb., for Fox Midwest, after deciding to test the local ordinance prohibiting Sunday films, following its passage recently, changed his mind last week, after having been warned by city officials that he would be liable to a fine of $100 for each theatre and for each Sunday.

Would Halt Sales Tax

In San Francisco an ordinance before the board of supervisors provides that the present distance of 200 feet permitted between oil stations and theatres, as well as schools and hospitals, be reduced to 60 feet. The measure was proposed by theatre interests.

Vice-Chancellor Malcolm G. Buchanan, in Trenton, N. J., last week reserved decision on a petition for a temporary injunction to restrain collection of the sales tax pending determination of the constitutionality of the tax law.

Campaigns for and against were closed late last week to await the decision of the people of North Dakota, who are voting this week in a special referendum on a two per cent sales tax.

The city council of Columbus, Ohio, is considering a ban on sound trucks operating within the city limits.

The local MPTO in Philadelphia, following the suggestion of Lewen Pizor, president, last week decided to pass on the new amusement tax to the public, holding the exhibitor cannot afford to absorb the levy. Petitions are being circulated locally to put the Sunday opening question on the ballot next November. The petition must have 17,000 signatures before it is mandatory to put the matter to a vote. Pittsburgh, through action of the city council, which may so decide, will vote on the Sunday show question in November.

An amendment to the Carrow tax bill in Wisconsin eliminating the three per cent gross tax on theatre admissions has been unanimously adopted. The tax bill passed the Assembly early last week.

ADVERTISING RATE WAR BRINGS 40% REDUCTION

Kansas City 'Journal-Post' Reopens Columns to Publicity After Loss of Theatre Ads

A 40 per cent reduction in advertising rates has been granted first-run theatres by the Kansas City Journal-Post. The peace pact terminates a fight of almost a year in which the paper lost thousands of dollars in revenue as the result of curtailment of space by theatre circuits and withdrawal of all national copy by film companies. The agreement was detailed in New York this week by John McManus, manager of Loew's Midland in Kansas City.

The new rate was followed immediately by increased local copy and reinstatement of the national advertising. Mr. McManus said the weekday rate was reduced from 35 cents to 20 cents a line for downtown first-run theatres, and the Sunday tariff from 55 cents to 25 cents. At the same time, he disclosed, the Journal-Post has resumed publicity which had been withheld from the theatres, and the newspaper's entire attitude has changed. The agreement involves the Midland, RKO Mainstreet and Publix Newman. The other two first-runs, Fox Uptown and the Tower, independent, use the Star, opposition paper, exclusively.

Copy placed by the theatres locally was cut to a minimum, usually not more than 28 lines, and national copy was withdrawn entirely when the newspaper refused to meet demands for rate revisions on a basis of comparative circulation and rate figures of the Star. The Star sometimes benefited commensurately in increased lineage.

Publicity Restored

The Journal-Post retaliated by eliminating practically all publicity, including bi-weekly art layouts and frequent notices and stories. Competitive amusements frequently were given preference in the Sunday amusement section. The weekly reviews, by Lowell Lawrance, became progressively critical, until Lawrence Lehman, manager of the Mainstreet, requested that Mr. Lawrance stay away from newspaper showings of his pictures. Other managers also protested unfair reviews, whereupon Mr. Lawrance instituted a policy of refraining from all critics' showings and attended the opening performances, to get, he said, the audience reaction. He paid his way at the box-office to be under no obligation to the theatres, he said, and to be able to write "unbiased reviews in the moviegoers' interest." Subsequently he adopted the star and adult-family classification system of rating pictures.

Under the new arrangement, this entire procedure has been abandoned, and theatres are receiving as much publicity as formerly, with the single exception that names of theatres are not mentioned in art layouts of current or advance attractions. Demanding equal space with the Star, the Journal-Post compromised on slightly less. Insertion of national copy has been resumed by MGM, United Artists, Paramount, Radio, Warners and Columbia.

Reader Service Extended

After terminating a year's arrangement with independent neighborhood houses for directory advertising at the rate of $3.50 a week, the Journal-Post recently inaugurated listing of attractions at suburban and subsequent run houses at no cost to the theatres, as a reader service. It was explained that the tremendous interest in films warranted the space.

The new "Neighborhood Movies" directory gives each theatre a line daily, listing the name of the theatre and attraction. When a double bill is run, only one feature is named. Forty-four theatres are included, among them all Fox Midwest houses and several in Kansas City, Kansas.

The Journal-Post claimed the old directory arrangement was a losing proposition because it not only allowed a special reduced rate but bought 100 theatre tickets weekly—on the basis of 50 from two theatres each week—which were offered to readers in an advertising promotion contest.

First of Fashion Magazine Two-Reels Shown at Macy's

Professional talent is being drawn upon in producing "Fashion Magazine of the Screen," a new series of two-reel subjects for exhibition in department stores. The first has been released and is being shown at Macy's, New York.

Lem F. Kennedy has been signed to direct the initial 12 subjects, which will be released one a month. They are filmed on 35 mm. stock at the Biograph studio, New York, and reduced to 16 mm. Each subject has music and narration. Joe Ruttenberg is the photographer and Walter R. Sheridan assistant director.

Louis Urdang is president of Fashion Magazine of the Screen Corporation, at 1440 Broadway.

Phil Reisman (left), vice president of RKO Export Corporation, and Ned E. Depinet, president of RKO Distributing Corporation, last Friday addressed the annual convention held by Radio Pictures, Ltd., in London, via transoceanic telephone, from the New York radio broadcasting studios of National Broadcasting Company.

The convention, held to discuss the sales policies and production program for 1935-36, was attended by district managers, branch managers and salesmen from the United Kingdom, and was presided over by Ralph Hanbury, general manager in England.

The address was broadcast at 11:00 A.M. New York time and was heard at the Trocadero convention hall at 4:00 P.M. London time. The voices were rebroadcast at the hall through loud speakers which amplified the speeches so that they could be heard throughout the hall.

Mr. Reisman predicted that RKO "is shortly destined to far outrank any other producing and distributing organization of motion pictures."

Mr. Depinet reported that the company is "in excellent financial condition," and said "we have ambitious plans for the future." He pledged that in 1935-36 a large percentage of pictures will be produced especially with the world market in mind. Both expressed laudatory remarks about the British distribution personnel.

U. A. Convention Delegates Return With 35-36 Plans

Returning this week to the home office in New York from the annual sales convention in Hollywood, United Artists' executives brought word that at the final sessions late last week detailed production plans were announced for the new season by the company's three producer-owners: Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Samuel Goldwyn and by Harry M. Goetz, on behalf of Reliance.

Charles Chaplin finally guaranteed September release of the film on which he has been at work for two years.

After Samuel Goldwyn told the convention that United Artists needs "younger blood," it became known that he is negotiating with Joseph M. Schenck for 20th Century's half interest in the United Artists studio,

The concentration of United Artists executive and ownership personnel at the convention did not bring an election of a new chairman to succeed Mr. Schenck, but it did result in the four owner-producers signing a new 10-year contract to continue to supply the company with product. Mr. Goldwyn said that he would not consider appointment as board chairman.

Douglas Fairbanks will make two pictures for United Artists, work to start February 1st.

Will H. Hays, Dr. A. H. Giannini, Nathan Burkan, Maurice Silverstone and Gunther Lessing also addressed the delegates. Mr. Korda spoke from London by amplified long distance telephone.

The delegates gave Al Lichtman $1,000 as the "Al Lichtman Endowment," to be administered by The Film Daily Relief Fund, and the convention ended.

With all sales conventions over and product plans practically completed, the few developments of the week involved the following companies:

Beaumont Pictures

Mitchell Leichter, head of production for Beaumont Pictures, announced eight western melodramas to star Conway Tearle, as follows: "Trails End," ready for release; "Desert Guns," "Senior Jim," "Whistling Scull," "Judgment Book," "Hell's Haciendas," "Three Fingers" and "Devil's Goal."

Blue Ribbon

William Goldberg's Blue Ribbon Photoplays has acquired for this market the English production "Ariane," starring Elisabeth Bergner and directed by Miss Bergner's husband, Dr. Paul Czinner.

Danubia

Danubia Distributing Corporation, a subsidiary of Danubia Pictures, Inc., was formed to handle Hungarian and other foreign language films in this market, also some British product. Eugene J. Lang and Bela Black were named officers, with headquarters at 729 7th Avenue, New York.

Besides handling the entire product of the parent company and foreign productions, the new subsidiary also will distribute films for other companies both here and abroad.

Fox Film

Spanish versions were discontinued at Fox's studio. At the same time the 1934-35 program was completed, but the studio continues at capacity with 18 in work for 1935-36.

Educational resumed production on the new season's shorts for Fox, following a layoff of several weeks, with Buster Keaton starting a two-reeler in Holywood and three single-reelers starting in New York.

Hoffberg

J. H. Hoffberg Company acquired world distribution rights to Northern Film's "Fighting Playboy," featuring Nick Stuart and Lucile Brown.

Jesse J. Goldburg left this week for the Coast and en route will visit states right exchanges in the interests of "Fighting Playboy" and "Speed Devils," also an untitled Buster Keaton feature. Upon Mr. Goldburg's arrival in Hollywood he will place in production the first of six action features, to be produced and distributed by Hoffberg.

Medallion

Philip Smith, Boston theatre operator, and a group of other local exhibitors, organized a new independent exchange, Medallion Pictures, to distribute in New England, starting with the eight pictures to be produced on the Coast by Victor and Edward Halperin.

MGM

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer formally signed this week to distribute BIP's British "Blossom Time," to be shown here as "Apple Blossoms," starring Richard Tauber.

Paragon

Paragon Film Company appeared in Atlanta as a new state rights exchange, sponsored by M. C. Katz and Ike Katz, president of the GFTA Independent Theatres' Association of the south. Some 52 westerns are said to be lined up already. Branches will be opened in Charlotte and New Orleans.

Six films, to cost $2,500,000, will be made by Walter Wanger under his new contract with Paramount, all to be produced in one year. Mr. Wanger has under personal contract Henry Fonda, Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett, Frances Langford, Peggy Conklin, and Alan Baxter.

Principal

Formation of a new motion picture company to be known as Principal Productions, was announced by Sol Lesser in California, who said four independents will be merged into the new unit, as follows: Atherton Productions, Principal Pictures, Sol Lesser Productions and Master Pictures.

The new company, capitalized at $1,000,000, will make 12 pictures this season, working at the RKO-Pathe studios in Hollywood. Louis Lurie is associated with Mr. Lesser and among the 12 will be four George O'Brien westerns for Fox release.

Republic

W. Ray Johnston's Republic Pictures formally opened its New York and Philadelphia branches, headed by Herman Gluckman and Jack Bellman, with exhibitors and exchangemen attending the housewarmings.

Warners

With 11 features completed and awaiting release, Andrew Smith and Gradwell Sears, Warners' sales managers, this week set about to personally handle each deal on the forthcoming "Midsummer Night's Dream" roadshow.

HOYTS CONSIDERS PRODUCING WITH FOX TO MEET N.S.W. QUOTA NEEDS

Fox Would Send Players for Pictures and Personal Appearances, Competing with Greater Union and Cinesound

by CLIFF HOLT

Sydney Correspondent

Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., has under consideration a proposal to enter into active Australian production in association with Fox of America. It is reported that the proposition is entirely divorced from General Theatres Corporation, which means that Hoyts will bring itself into active competition with Greater Union Theatres and Cinesound as a producing factor.

Announcement of the Hoyts proposition followed a week of uncertainty in production circles, which received a first-class shock when it became known what was in the wind.

Distributors had been wondering how they stood under the New South Wales Quota Law if there are insufficient locally-made films available to fulfil their Quota obligations. Their position since was made fairly plain by the Chief Secretary of N. S. W., Mr. Chaffey, as detailed later. The possibility of their having to produce their own Quota films was then more or less offset by Cinesound's announcement that it could supply the 20 pictures necessary to fulfil the 1935-36 quota if needed. Then independents took exception to Cinesound's stand, on the ground that Cinesound, which had opposed the quota, while they had helped its passage, was now endeavoring to crowd the independents out and smother up the opportunities offered them by the law they had battled for.

Hoyts' idea of going into production with Fox is backed by sound reasoning. Fox holds a big interest in Hoyts, so that Fox automatically will share in any profits from their combined production enterprises out here. Fox will be able to use the Fox-Hoyts product to meet Quota requirements, and if, as is proposed, Fox brings players from America, they not only will make pictures for the Fox-Hoyts organization but also will make personal appearances in Hoyts' city houses. The plan has all the earmarks of an inspiration.

Hoyts does not intend to build its own studios, but will rent whatever local studios and production equipment are available. It does plan to import directors and technicians as well as players, however, with a view to making pictures of a sufficient box-office merit to justify inclusion in the regular Fox releases in the United States and Great Britain.

Aim to Encourage Production

It seems clear that other foreign distributors in this territory will be forced into Australian production.

The act says that distributors must acquire a certain percentage of quota pictures each year, and the word "acquire" is defined as including the "production or obtaining of films." Defining this passage in the regulations, Mr. Chaffey told the Australian trade journal Everyones that under the law distributors are not compelled to manufacture pictures, "but the word 'acquire' has the meaning in the N.S.W. act as it has in the English Act. The spirit of the law is to encourage production. In England the distributors have joined in and acknowledged that spirit without the necessity for compulsion."

Mr. Chaffey declared that Government expects distributors here to do the same. "We have no desire to embarrass them," he said, "but it is our definite intention that these people should participate, in the interests of Australia, and we hope it will not be necessary for us to take those drastic steps which the act empowers us to do if we see evasions or a campaign of non-cooperation."

In consequence of the confusion that still partly remains as to just what is the position of producers, distributors and exhibitors under the Quota Law, production has been at a standstill for more than six months. This will mean a shortage of Quota film when the act comes into actual operation in 1936; and whereas exhibitors can escape their obligations if sufficient product is unavailable, it is now apparent that, under such circumstances, distributors won't escape so happily.

Clayton Sheehan, Fox foreign sales manager in New York, had no comment on the Fox-Hoyts situation.

Theatre Licensing Proposed

Independents in N.S.W. are making a bold bid for introduction of licensing laws similar to those in force in New Zealand, where the wholesale building of theatres in overseated areas is politically controlled. The executive committee of the Association has gone surety for a preliminary contribution to a Fighting Fund of £1000, and the trustees of the Fund will undertake a tour of the state in an endeavor to swell the association's forces into a formidable figure.

Bonafide independents have been actively campaigning for some time against the machinations of the go-getters who, it is alleged, are threatening point blank to find backing for new theatre ventures in opposition to established exhibitors unless the exhibitors singled out for these intimidatory tactics are prepared to sign contracts at the go-getters' terms. Unfair selling methods of this description were exposed at the Film Enquiry last year; and several exhibitors allege that they have been renewed in recent months.

Crystallizing their arguments for theatre licensing laws, exhibitors show by statistics that Australia is already one of the most heavily seated countries in the world; and that immediately an established suburban or country exhibitor is faced with opposition the value of his theatre is automatically reduced by half. In other words, the goodwill he has built up over a number of years is practically wrecked.

Officials of the Association declare that it is not their intention to set up monopolies or crowd out opposition; they merely seek to prevent the erection of new theatres in territories where a new house would make the profitable trading of either business an impossibility.

Cinesound Says It Could Make Twenty to Satisfy Quota; Independents Demand Licensing Against Overseating

Cinesound Seeks Denny

As a preliminary towards a renewal of active production in the near future, Cinesound Productions, producer of Australia's greatest success, "On Our Selection," has offered Reginald Denny £3,000 to star in two pictures to be made in Sydney. Denny asks £4,000, and alternative negotiations are proceeding.

Cinesound's forces will be augmented by an increased capital of approximately £100,000, the latest studio equipment is being imported, and to strengthen the writing staff, the Hollywood scenarist, Edmund Seeward, has reached Sydney under engagement to this company. The offer to Denny is based on a contract of 20 weeks. It is stated that, besides this offer, Cinesound is dickering for other Hollywood personalities who have a box-office following in the Commonwealth.

A significant statement in connection with Cinesound's activities is Stuart F. Doyle's statement that, if necessary, Cinesound can supply the 20 pictures for the 1935-36 quota.

Frank Neil, legitimate stage producer, who will present Polly Moran here in revue early in September, is said to have clinched a deal with Ben Lyon and Bebe Daniels to play Australia under his management. Should these players come, there is little doubt that local producers will compete for their services. It is practically certain that such personalities would not be allowed to return home before doing at least one Australian picture before their departure. Anita Page is another Hollywood player said to be anxious to make a trip to these parts.

From New Zealand comes the important item that the Standard Contract has been drafted and now only awaits the signature of the Minister of Internal Affairs before its adoption by exhibitors and distributors.

More than £60,000 will be spent by Hoyts Theatres, Ltd., on its Melbourne suburban circuit as part of an ambitious plan to bring their neighborhood houses into line with the world's best.

Beaumont Smith, representing J. C. Williamson Films of New Zealand, is in Sydney to continue negotiations with General Theatres Corporation for acquisition of a 50-50 holding in the Dominion circuit. Reports say that G.T.C. investigators have reported favorably on the J.C.W. proposition, but price considerations and other involved questions remain to be ironed out and it may be some time before finality approaches.

Erpi Delays Service Plan

Electrical Research Products, Inc., will take no action during the summer on the establishment of its planned theatre engineering service, it was declared by a company official last week. Experimental activity will continue throughout the summer.

THE CUTTING ROOM

Advance outlines of productions nearing completion as seen by Gus McCarthy of Motion Picture Herald's Hollywood Bureau

BARBARY COAST

Goldwyn

This picture, being produced on a lavishly colorful yet entirely authentic scale, deals with an engrossing subject—dramatic romance in the early days of San Francisco's gold rush when the roistering, lawless colony, the Barbary Coast, sprang into being. In no way has it any connection with the latter day sensuous reputation of that spot.

It is adapted from a widely read book, authored by Herbert Asbury, with screen play by Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht, whose screen writing and production accomplishments require no detailing. Direction is by Howard Hawks, maker of such vivid features as "Scarface," "The Crowd Roars," "Tiger Shark" and "The Criminal Code."

The three principals are Miriam Hopkins, currently in "Becky Sharp," Joel McCrea, appearing now in "Private Worlds," and Edward G. Robinson, whose role is similar to many of the menacing ruthless characters he created in previous vehicles. The supporting cast lists many familiar and several new names. Included are Walter Brennan, Frank Craven, Brian Donlevy, Clyde Cook, Matt McHugh, Harry Carey, Otto Huffman, Rollo Lloyd, J. M. Kerrigan, Donald Meek and Fred Vogading.

Unusual in that only one woman is featured, the story tells of the coming of Miriam Hopkins, the first white woman of gentle birth to set foot on San Francisco soil. First befriended by Craven, who aspires to publish a paper devoted to the interest of law, order and civic progress, she becomes Swan, the glamorous come-on girl for Robinson's crooked gambling establishment. Powerful Robinson, ruling the town with ironic cruelty, becomes infatuated with the girl, and when she falls in love with McCrea, a prospector who has lost his poke on Robinson's crooked games, Robinson becomes more ruthless than ever. As Craven is killed by one of the gambler's henchmen. Hopkins tries to lead McCrea to safety. The Vigilantes, rising in their might, take up Robinson's trail and in saving the lovers for each other lead the murderer off to his deserved fate, which he accepts philosophically as, in bidding him farewell, Miss Hopkins acknowledges with gratitude and compassion the many kindnesses he had showered upon her.

STEAMBOAT ROUND THE BEND

Fox

All the items of which this picture are being made are potentially of high entertainment and exploitation value. The one that undoubtedly will be the most attractive to the public and showmen is that it is a Will Rogers feature. But in it a rather different Rogers will be seen, one who still will make the best use of his comedy forte, but in this case will be presented as a dramatic artist in a Mississippi River yarn that combines down-to-earth comedy with gripping drama and blends with the two a quality of spectacle and novel action. In the person of Irvin S. Cobb, it presents a man whose writings always have dealt with elements and locales similar to this picture's story content.

The original from which this was adapted, written by Ben Lucien Berman, appeared serially in Pictorial Review and also was published in novel form. It has been read by millions. The screen play is by Dudley Nichols and Lamar Trotti, who did two previous Rogers pictures, "Judge Priest" and "Life Begins at 40." It is being directed by John Ford, maker of "Judge Priest," "The Lost Patrol" and the currently popular "The Informer."

The story, in which there is much human appeal, is being portrayed by a cast whose personalities and talents were given more than usual consideration in casting to insure typical characters in typical parts. In addition to Rogers and Cobb are Anne Shirley, whose work in "Anne of Green Gables" created a favorable impression, and John McGuire, a newcomer seen before in a small part in "Bright Eyes," who carry the love interest. Eugene Pallette will be seen as the genial sheriff, Berton Churchill as the psalm shouting evangelist, and Francis Ford, juror No. 12 in "Judge Priest," is Rogers' steamboat engineer. Stepin Fetchit is back again. Roger Imhof, Raymond Hatton, Charles Middleton and Hobart Bosworth also have important parts.

In the story, with the life of an innocently condemned boy at stake, Rogers is transferred from an itinerant medicine peddler to owner captain of the boat Claremore Queen. Searching for Churchill, who knows the real story of how McGuire got into a jam, Rogers, who has included a showboat wax works museum as part of his boat, enters into a great race with Cobb's Pride of Paducah. Winning the race, finding Churchill and clearing the boy, Rogers and Ford burn up everything on the boat, including the museum.

Supplementary showmanship features are the singing of Negro spirituals, the fun surrounding the wax works enterprise, and the spectacular stern-wheeler race down the Mississippi.

STORM OVER THE ANDES

Universal

With the recently concluded Bolivia-Paraguay South American war as the background, this is a thrilling story of battle in the skies, romance in the cantinas, and danger in the steaming Gran Chaco jungles.

It is an original story by Eliot Gibbons and Laclede Christy; adapted by Al DeMond, Frank Wead and Eve Greene. It is being directed by Christy Cabanne.

It's the action-packed story of an American soldier of fortune who seeks the excitement of a foreign war, in which he has no business, for an outlet for his suppressed energies. Ace flier, daring and resourceful, his skill in the air is comparable only with the manner in which he can make love at the slightest provocation. All goes well until he flirts with a woman who, unknown to him, is the wife of his commanding officer. Revelation of the affair not only adds to the danger of enemy activities, but brings him into direct conflict with his superior, a landing in the jungle, the capture of the enemy's ace flier, the bombing of ammunition dumps, a spectacular cat-and-dog fight over the rugged Andes, a wound that results in his death as a martyr which leads to the reunion of husband and wife.

Jack Holt will be seen in the leading role. The picture brings back Antonio Moreno, once a popular screen figure. The principals include a group of wellknown screen players, Mona Barrie, Jean Lockhart, Grant Withers, Barry Norton and George Lewis. A newcomer, Juanita Garfias, makes her debut. Supporting players are unfamiliar Spanish actors.

CAPPY RICKS RETURNS

Republic

Cappy Ricks, irascible hero of a long and exciting series of Saturday Evening Post stories written by Peter B. Kyne, fictionally parallels the actual career of Captain Robert Dollar, American lumber and shipping magnate. In this story, the screen play for which is by George Waggner, Cappy returns to the entertainment arena. With him come many of the familiar old characters—son-in-law Matt Peasley, T. Osgood Blake, his great business rival, and Skinner.

Cappy returns because his lumber business has been menaced. Blake has obtained passage of a bill which would eliminate wooden shingles. Only the governor's signature is needed. Fired by the lust of battle, Cappy's plans for a quick conquest are threatened when he learns that Skinner has fired star-salesman Bill Peck. He radios that Hawaii-bound worthy, who leaps overboard, thumbs a ride back to San Francisco's famous Fisherman's Wharf, meets and falls in love with Blake's daughter. Becoming Bill's secretary under an assumed name, while anxious to help her father in his business battle, Bill embarks on getting referendum petition signatures. When Bill discovers her real identity, he fires her and forgets all about romance. Blake's minions are outwitted by Cappy when they burn a bunch of fake petitions.

With Mack Wright directing, Robert McWade will be seen as Cappy, Lucien Littlefield as Skinner, Kenneth Harlan as Mat Peasley, Oscar Apfel as Blake, Ray Walker as the star salesman and Florine McKinney as Blake's daughter.

Fox-20th Century Contracts Signed

The departure by plane from New York for Hollywood of the principals in the Fox-20th Century setup was accepted last Thursday by the trade as a form of announcement that contractual agreements had finally been effected in the formal merging of the two companies.

Since the original announcement of the arrangement, made last month, Sidney R. Kent, president of Fox Film, and Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl Zanuck and William Goetz, of 20th Century, had participated with the lawyers in drafting the actual contracts for signatures.

With Mr. Zanuck's return to the coast actual production will start immediately on the first Fox-20th Century picture, "Metropolitan." Principals, arriving in Hollywood, began to discuss the new trade name for releases of the unit. For the new season, contracts will be written under the two companies' individual corporate titles.

The chart, based on Motion Picture Herald's tabulation of box office grosses, indicates the trend of business in each of three western key cities during the thirteen weeks period from April 6 to June 29, 1935. In each city the gross for the first week of the period is taken as 100 per cent for that city.

SOCIALITES TO BRING GRAND OPERA TO FILM

George Bailhe, President of Music Guild Productions, Planning Full Length Screen Opera

Grand opera will be transcribed to the screen with imposing professional talent, under the plan of a group of New York and Philadelphia social lights who have formed Music Guild Productions, Inc., with George Bailhe, known in New York and Cincinnati music circles, as the president and guiding factor.

The plan is to produce opera in its original form, with but a few changes required for film purposes. The first production probably will be "Faust," and if filmed will be the first full length grand opera made into a talking picture. While refusing to divulge other details, Mr. Bailhe said he expected completion of the plans in about a week. The Astoria studios in Long Island probably will be used.

Distributor Reading Script

Discussions starting six months ago have reached a point where distribution is being considered by one of the major companies, Mr. Bailhe said. This distributor is reading the script, he added, and if a deal is made will supervise the production. Exhibition is planned in the larger theatres, on a roadshow basis.

While the sponsors have subscribed more than $100,000 to the venture, other financing is not complete, but it is understood Erpi has the matter under consideration for financing in the usual way, this, however, depending on Erpi's acceptance of the production factors. While a series of grand opera has been proposed, there has been no discussion beyond the first picture.

Pabst Will Direct

The staff includes G. W. Pabst, formerly with European studios and more recently on the Warner directorial roster, who will direct; Manuel Komroff, novelist and scenarist, who is handling the adaptations; Fritz Reiner, symphony conductor as music director, and George Antheil, composer, in charge of music and supervising the score.

The cast for the most part will have had professional operatic experience, although many will be unknown to film audiences. The part of Mephisto in "Faust" is being adapted for a straight talking role and some well known film actor is being sought for the part.

Loew's 40-Week Net Is $5,840,351

Loew's, Inc., and subsidiaries, for the 40 weeks ended June 6, 1935, reports a net profit of $5,840,351 after depreciation, taxes, subsidiaries' preferred dividends and the like, equivalent, after dividend requirements on the $6.50 preferred stock of Loew's, Inc., to $3.50 per share on approximately 1,473,300 average number of shares of no-par common stock outstanding during the period.

The net compares with a profit for the 40 weeks ended June 7, 1934, of $5,750,750, equal to $3.45 per share on 1,464,205 common shares outstanding during that period. The corresponding period in 1933 showed a net profit of $2,336,027.

The company's share of operating profit after subsidiaries' preferred dividends for the 1935 period was $9,596,570, which compares with $9,631,012 in 1934.

Glynne, Long Island Exhibitor, Dies

Michael J. Glynne, well known in New York exhibition circles, died early this week at Water-Mill, Long Island, following an eye operation. Burial was on Tuesday from Southampton, L. I. He had been operating a Prudential theatre for Joseph Seider at Southampton. Mr. Glynne started in the business three years ago as partner in Ward and Glynne, the two later building two theatres in Brooklyn and the Astoria, in Astoria, L. I.

65 Coast Houses Adopt Bank Night

"Bank Night" practically permanently entrenched itself as a standard theatre policy in San Francisco last week with the signing of 65 theatres at one time by the Affiliated Enterprises, Inc. This is the largest number of theatres to adopt the original Bank Night at one time on record locally. Signing of the contracts was the outcome of what threatened to be a serious suit filed by J. W. Ehrlich, attorney, representing Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., holders of the original Bank Night copyrights, alleging infringement and demanding an accounting through all alleged imitations of "Bank Night."

Most of Subsequents

With the settlement out of court, and the suit withdrawn, the contract was signed by E. H. Emmick, president of the Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation; Mike Naify, representing the T. & D. Jr., Enterprises, Inc., and Mike Rosenberg, general manager of the Affiliated Enterprises, Inc. The theatre groups involved represent most of the subsequent run theatres in the San Francisco bay region.

While Bank Nights, Screeno and similar plans already in use continued to grow as an exhibition practice in dozens of cities, several new stunts of this nature made their appearance. Typical were "Race Night," "Radio Night" and others.

The Loew circuit adopted the plan in New York with nine theatres set to participate in either Bank Night or Screeno beginning this weekend.

The battle of the premium promoters in Boston continues as Bank Night entered suit in federal court there against Jack Pot, a cash giveaway scheme handled in New England by Doc Britton, local World Wide and independent distributor. Mr. Britton has been informed by the main office of Jack Pot in the Midwest that the trouble will be handled by attorneys there in an endeavor to checkmate the national avalanche of such suits. He is advised not to retain a Boston lawyer. George Ryan, well known in theatrical circles because of his anti-trust and other suits for E. M. Loew, head of New England's largest independent theatre circuit, is handling prosecution there for Bank Night. An actual test case brought by Bank Night against Gold Mine is due for hearing in federal court in Boston this week before Judge Brewster.

Iowa Owner Guilty

Giveaways have temporarily slowed in Milwaukee as a result of the issuing of a warrant for the manager of the Garfield, neighborhood Saxe house, who was charged with conducting a lottery. The theatre had been playing Screeno. The case has been postponed until August 23, and while a number of the local houses have dropped the games, including Fox's Palace, which had posted the town advertising a five-day Screeno carnival starting July 12, there are still a few neighboring spots holding the policy. As a result, additional prosecutions are expected to follow.

George P. Hundling, co-owner and manager the Capitol, Newton, Iowa, a Tri-States house, charged with advertising a lottery known as Bank Night, was declared guilty by verdict of a jury. Judge Frank Bechly set July 31 as date to pronounce sentence.

In accordance with the postal department ruling that no printed matter setting forth lotteries or games of chance shall be sent through the mails, the New Haven Register has refused to accept theatre advertising containing notice of bank night, cash night, country store drawings, or other similar devices.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

HOLLYWOOD TURNS TO THE BARD OF AVON
SCHENCK AND ZANUCK; HOW IT HAPPENED
NEED OF CONTINUOUS FLOW OF PRODUCT
NINE PICTURES START; FOUR COMPLETED

by VICTOR M. SHAPIRO

Hollywood Correspondent

"UNEASY lies the head that wears a crown," and showmen are in two minds about the sudden rush of Shakespeare to the head which Hollywood is undergoing at the moment.

The fact that Warners' "A Midsummer Night's Dream," now finished, has been closely guarded from the press has led to some anxious speculation as to its box office appeal.

Warner Bros., evidently, suffers not from doubt—it has announced plans for production this season of four more of the great bard's comedies, "Twelfth Night," "As You Like It," "The Merry Wives of Windsor" and "Comedy of Errors."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is following suit. Research has started for the production of "Romeo and Juliet," starring Norma Shearer.

RKO-Radio has been toying for some time with plans to do "Hamlet."

There is only one big precedent for Shakespeare on the American screen. That is the somewhat ill-fated filming of "The Taming of the Shrew," produced in 1929 by Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks, with "additional dialogue by Sam Taylor." That picture drew caustics from legions of Shakespeare lovers who had supported stage road companies for years, and proved to be of slight appeal to those who never had read or seen Shakespeare.

Schenck and Zanuck

Joseph M. Schenck, once fondly called the "King of Hollywood," again intrigues the imagination of the town.

Two and a half years ago Joe Schenck's fortunes were impaired. But he had a borrowing capacity. He had disbanded his production unit. He was through with pictures. He was devoting his time to other interests.

Then Darryl Zanuck resigned from Warner Bros. Seeking advice, he met Mr. Schenck and that meeting wound up in a partnership. Twentieth Century was born.

Mr. Schenck went to New York, returned with a paper promising to pay half a million dollars. With that he borrowed another half million from the banks, and obtained another half million credit from a laboratory.

For two years he and Mr. Zanuck toiled at picture-making. "The Bowery" launched their first year's schedule. At the end of 12 months all obligations were paid on the note, to the banks, to the laboratory. A profit was shown. The second year also showed a profit with "Les Miserables" and "Richelieu".

Planing to New York, ostensibly to bid for Fox Metropolitan Theatres, conferring with Sidney Kent, Mr. Schenck gave the industry another surprise when the Fox-Twentieth Century merger was announced, with Twentieth Century to receive half of the new common stock if and when issued.

At the peak of the boom days of '29, Fox Film was said to have a book value of $190,000,000. Today, with all the write-offs, amortizations and recapitalizations, its value is close to $40,000,000. Simple arithmetic tells what share of the new set-up Joe Schenck now owns.

Flow of Product

That Charlie Chaplin, Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks are aware of United Artists' need for a continuous flow of product was shown at the final business session of the convention.

Miss Pickford admitted frankly that she as well as Fairbanks and Chaplin had fallen down on the production job the last few years. Giving due credit to the distributing force, Miss Pickford said she is now prepared "to take off her coat and go to work," promising that she can be counted upon for two pictures a year, possibly appearing herself.

Chaplin said: "I have made sporadic releases—one every generation. Now I'm going into the business of making quickies. I'm going to make one picture a year—even if it takes me four years to make it."

Fairbanks, though absent, sent his message through Samuel Goldwyn, who said: "Douglas will be back January 1, and will henceforth live in Hollywood. And he will start his next picture February 1."

Chaplin has had no release since "City Lights," Fairbanks' last was "Around the World in Eighty Minutes," four years ago. Miss Pickford hasn't been heard from since "Secrets" in 1933.

It is not unusual for the goddess of fortune to wave the wand and lift some unknown to fame and fortune in the motion picture industry. A director saw Dorothy Wilson sitting before a typewriter, gave her a screen test and started her on her way to stardom. But not very often is the situation reversed with an erstwhile star discarding greasepaint for typewriter ribbons. Patsy Ruth Miller is the one star to put shame to the phrase "Vanity, thy name is woman."

Turning down numerous offers to renew her screen career, Miss Miller has taken up the typewriter with a vengeance. Aspiring to be a writer, she is making her debut in that profession at United Artists studio as a continuity writer for "Barbary Coast."

"It doesn't make any difference," she says, "how old you get when you are a writer," she said, "but an actress has to see herself suddenly die because she gets a few wrinkles which show on the screen."

Nine Pictures Start

Production activity continued its upward surge in the week as nine pictures started and only four were finished. Studios are so busy that the problems of allocating stage space and obtaining supporting players are causing many anxious moments. Illustrative of the condition is the fact that MGM has 14 pictures in various stages of production and Radio, in addition to having its home lot crowded to capacity and also using Pathe Studio, found it necessary to rent outside space to accommodate its program.

Three of the new pictures are credited to Radio, the remainder are divided among six companies. Four studios account for the completed product.

Westerners in Film Reunion

At Radio, "Powder Smoke Range" is in work. Featuring a quartet of noted western stars—Harry Carey, Hoot Gibson, Bob Steele and Tom Tyler—it also will present Boots Mallory, Guinn Williams and Sam Hardy. Wallace Fox is directing. The second activity, "Hi, Gaucho," being directed by Tommy Atkins, will present Steffi Duna, John Carroll, Rod Larocque, Montagu Love and Paul Porcasi. Also in work is a Wheeler and Woolsey, "The Rainmakers," in which Dorothy Lee, Berton Churchill, George Meeker and Frederick Roland will be seen.

At Fox Western Avenue studio "Charlie Chan in Shanghai" went into work. Warner Oland again is featured, supported by Irene Hervey, Keye Luke, Russell Hicks, Charles Locher and Frederick Vogeding. James Tinling is directing.

A new picture at Warner is "From This Dark Stairway." With Ricardo Cortez in the lead, the cast presented includes Kay Linaker, Martha Tibbett, Anita Kerry, Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot and Mary Treen. Frank McDonald is directing.

Universal began work on "Magnificent Obsession." Irene Dunne is starred, supported by Robert Taylor, Charles Butterworth, Gilbert Emery and Arthur Hoyt. John Stahl is directing.

Going along at scheduled pace, Republic started "Cappy Ricks Returns." In this Robert McWade, Ray Walker, Florine McKinney, Kenneth Harlan, Lucien Littlefield, Bradley Page, Lois Wilson and Oscar Apfel will be seen. Mack Wright is directing.

For its initial production Beaumont started "Trail's End," in which Conway Tearle and Claudia Dell are starred under Charles Hutchinson's direction.

The Pictures Completed

Probably the most interesting from an exhibitor viewpoint among the completed pictures is MGM's "A Night at the Opera." Featuring Goucho, Harpo and Chico Marx, the supporting cast includes Margaret Dumont, Allan Jones, Walter King, Kitty Carlisle, Siefried Rumann, Gwen Lee, Selmer Jackson, Purnell Pratt, George Irving, Leo White and Wilbur Mack. Sam Wood directed.

Warner completed "Special Agent." In this are George Brent, Bette Davis, Ricardo Cortez, Jack LaRue, Joseph Crehan, Joseph King, Paul Guilfoyle, Robert Strange, J. Carroll Naish and William Davidson. William Keighley directed.

Universal transferred "She Gets Her Man" to the cutting rooms. The cast lists Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell, Helen Twelvetrees, Lucien Littlefield, Edward Brophy, Warren Hymer, Bert Gordon, Ward Bond, King Baggott, Phil Dunham, Lola Nesmith and Louise Vincenot. William Nigh directed.

Last of the completed features, Radio's "Jalna," presents Kay Johnson, Ian Hunter, Nigel Bruce, David Manners, Peggy Wood, C. Aubrey Smith, Jessie Ralph and Molly Lamont. John Cromwell directed.

DISTRIBUTORS CALL TURN IN BRITISH BUSINESS, SOCIETY'S REPORT SHOWS

Credit Control Operates in 2,313 Cases in Month; $27,000 Collected in Year for Erroneous Reports of Receipts

Rival Nostrums for Quota Are Presented and Attacked, with Rowson and Craig in Opposite Camps; New Alignments

by BRUCE ALLAN

London Correspondent

Distributing companies, through their association, the Kinematograph Renters Society, are exercising an ever more effective control of the British industry.

In the just issued annual report, covering the year to December 31 last, it is revealed that tab is being kept on the exhibitor both at the box office and in the counting house by a closely organized system which insures that distributors can learn all they want to know about any exhibitor at any time. Action, by all distributors, follows immediately in any case in which a theatre owner breaches fair conditions as understood by the KRS.

One of the most striking instances is the operation of the Restricted Credit system under which certain exhibitors are classified for payment of their rental bills at various given periods.

The KRS started with 17 exhibitors on the list, on a five days credit basis. Now, 325 theatres are affected every change day, and the credit basis covers various periods.

The effect is that the "listed" exhibitor cannot get delivery of a program unless there has been a clearance of the last account due for payment to any distributor. During a single month, December, 1934, there were 2,313 "advices" exchanged through the KRS.

Frank Hill, secretary, said in his report that the Society's policy is that "any applications for extended credit shall not be acceded to except by leave of the Council," and that "though the Society's attention was first directed to the smaller exhibitors and circuits," it has "taken action during the year in regard to some of the larger accounts."

Checking Takings

Another supervisory department of the KRS which has further perfected its machinery is that concerned with "Inspection and Investigation" at the box office, through the Society's own Secret Service. British theatres for the most part play films on a sharing basis.

The report stated that 80 theatres were detected in deliberate fraud, 6 exhibitors "were discovered to have held matinee performances which had not been returned," and there were numerous cases of "illicit crossovers and other comparatively minor discrepancies."

COLOR AVAILABLE TO ALL, SAYS KALMUS

Any deal involving Technicolor which is made in England will be based on the idea that the new three-color method will be made available to all producers, according to Herbert T. Kalmus, Technicolor president, in London early this week. He declared no deal had been made as yet. The statement was an answer to reports tying in Technicolor with Gerard Industries, an affiliate of London Films, headed by Alexander Korda. Gerard controls the Hillman color process.

A total of £5,500 ($27,500) was recovered from exhibitors and it was added that investigations under way in 1,934 further cases were expected to yield another $10,000 to $15,000 to renters. There were 6,330 inspections and 11,355 tickets purchased at 11,355 suspect box offices.

Against Booking Circuits

There was only a passing reference in the report to the big controversy raised by the refusal of KRS members to recognize the G.B.-Hyams-Union deal. The Society, it was stated, regarded collective booking arrangements as inimical to trade interests. It also alluded deprecatingly to the "C.E.A.'s (Cinematograph Exhibitors Association) organized attempts to interfere between buyers and sellers of films," which may be regarded as a hint as to the sort of reception which awaits any such plan of co-operative booking through the CEA Council as was suggested at Cardiff. Nevertheless, CEA branches already are endorsing the Cardiff "forty per cent maximum" policy.

That 308 British cinemas changed ownership in the year, that no progress had been achieved towards establishment of a Standard Contract, and that the KRS opposition to programs running over 3¼ hours had been effective were other points of interest in the report.

John Maxwell has begun another year as president of the KRS.

Rival Quota Nostrums

Arising from Simon Rowson's paper on "The Future of the Films Act," at the CEA Summer Conference, controversy is afoot in the production industry as to the best method of amending existing quota provisions. The purpose of compelling the American producer to take his British films seriously is about the only common ground at present visible.

Mr. Rowson advocated a compulsory minimum cost of $50,000 per British picture. The most obvious weakness in this suggestion is that it postulates a connection between cost and quality which, in practice, is by no means inevitable. By better brains and better studio organization one producer will make entertainment for $25,000 while another turns out just a picture for $50,000.

Sir Gordon Craig, pointing out this weakness of the Rowson plan, has publicized an alternative suggestion that the distributor be relieved of the footage quota and given a cash quota instead. If he handles 100,000 feet of quota film at present he should be made to spend £100,000 ($500,000) on British films, said Sir Gordon. The exhibitor's quota would be abolished altogether.

The noteworthy feature of the Craig plan is that the American distributor would be free if he pleased to spend the whole amount of his annual cash obligation on five, three, or even one film.

Mr. Rowson has come back with a criticism of Sir Gordon's plan, suggesting that its effect would be to eliminate the cheaper type of imported picture, while the "big fellows" among the Americans would exploit the shortage until "prices were skyrocketed to unprecedented heights."

There is more equity, from an American point of view, in the Craig scheme, though the Rowson plan is more likely to be favored by the Government.

New Alignments

With the first trade show of Twickenham Film Distributors, Ltd., as its high spot, the week seems to have initiated a period of change and activity in the British distributing field. Twickenham, with Julius Hagen and Arthur Clavering as joint managing directors, has acquired offices in Dean House, Dean St., where Radio and County Cinemas already are established, signed up sales staff for all territories and announced eight pictures for 1936 release.

The first product announcement concerning C. M. Woolf's company, General Film Distributors, Ltd., also was made. It will handle the output of City Film Productions, Ltd. (Basil Humphreys and Eric Donaldson). Three pictures are on the immediate schedule, and Sound City studio will be used.

Under the title of Criterion Film Productions, Ltd., a new production unit to take over Fairbanks Productions, Ltd., has been formed to make four pictures a year for United Artists distribution. This is the organization originally announced as Tower Film Productions.

New Sunday Agreement

Under a London County Council decision, exhibitors in the London territory will pay 12½ percent to the charity fund, without guarantees, but excluding the 5 per cent of the charity fund which at present goes to the cinematograph fund endowing the British Film Institute's educational activities. The three-year agreement supersedes the arrangement whereunder £100,000 ($500,000) a year is specified as a minimum cinema contribution. To reach this figure the charity percentage recently was raised to 14 per cent. The new percentage, including the Fund levy, approximates 13.15 per cent.

The BLUEBOOK School

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 274 (one of a special group on sound).—(A) When should a photocell be replaced? (B) Why is it important not to disturb the position of the exciter lamp optical system after the focus has been correctly set by the manufacturer's representative? (C) What general precautions should be observed when replacing tubes in an amplifier?

Answer to Question No. 268

Bluebook School Question No. 268 was: (A) Explain why a flywheel is used in most sound reproducer sets. (B) As a projectionist, what do you regard as the most fertile field for improvement in sound system design, particularly with the object in view of greater convenience in operation of the equipment?

Answering Section A, the engineers who submited this question say, "One of the requirements of faithful sound reproduction is that the film shall move past the scanning beam (sound head aperture) at an absolutely steady, unvarying rate of speed. Any irregularity or jerkiness of film speed past the sound gate aperture will show up in the form of flutter (What about "wows?"—F. H. R.) which is ruinous, particularly to music. The sound or constant speed sprocket that moves the film past the aperture is driven by the same motor as both the take-up and the projector mechanism. It therefore follows that any uneven load, as for example in the take-up or the intermittent movement, or any intermittent or uneven binding in any of the many gears or shafts in the mechanism may be reflected back to the sound drive and cause uneven motion. In order to minimize this effect, a flywheel is attached to one end of the sound sprocket shaft. When the balanced and relatively large mass of the flywheel is in motion, it tends to prevent any small, sudden changes of speed in the sprocket, thus insuring steadiness of speed."

As to Section B, there were several answers, the practicability of which I would not presume to pass judgment upon. Many suggestions were evidently impracticable; a few just plain impossible.

Evans and Rau say, "The most fertile field for improvement in sound system design would be (referring to equipment, not service) some method of securing a fine adjustment of the exciter lamp optical system that would hold it at the right point while locking it into place. The later, up-to-date equipments are as convenient as could be desired, so far as has to do with operation. We are unable to suggest any needed improvement."

A. Sprafke says, "I have a few, perhaps fantastic, ideas, though I do believe they will one day become realities. First, that the present system of amplification, due to extensive development of design and tube development, be reduced to a small panel that would require little space, thus reducing the time and trouble when checking in case of emergency. This would tend to reduce the hold-up of the show when trouble comes. My second idea is to eliminate the present necessity for constant manipulation of the fader by so recording the sound intensities, and so marking them that the projectionist, knowing the particular sound level of his theatre, would be able, at the start of a show, to set his fader where it should be and let it stay there. By this I mean that aside from differences in response of various auditoriums, the sound intensities should be taken care of entirely by the studios in the recording."

In part, I believe this is not at all a fantastic idea. However, the projectionist would nevertheless still have to manipulate a fader. Brother Sprafke has overlooked the fact that many things more or less constantly alter the auditorium response. For example, the theatre is half empty at one time, and filled at another, and we all well know that calls for a volume change. Even light summer clothing and heavy winter wear makes a lot of difference, as do many other items.

B. DeVietti says, "One idea for improvement in sound system design has to do with sound and picture changeover—the synchronization of the two. It seems to me this could be accomplished by connecting the picture changeover mechanism with the fader in such manner that zero fader would occur as the changeover is made. When the fader is moved past zero on either side, the dowsers would operate automatically, and the changeover of both picture and sound occur simultaneously.

"Another thing: Why not have some sort of an apron attached to the lower magazine door that would keep the film from dropping on the floor when the door is open and one is threading? It might be some sort of a flexible apron that would fill the space between the magazine bottom and open door. That the end of the film does get on the floor and thus accumulate dust is indisputable. Possibly what I have said is not what is wanted by the engineers, but I do believe either or both would help to some extent."

D. Danielson says, "Further extension of the frequency reproduction range, either by improved emulsions and optical design, or by speeding up the film movement (projection speed) should, in my opinion, have first consideration. Second, the design of new systems to provide a large reserve of undistorted power, and the renovation of present systems to meet this requirement. Only thus may proper volume illusions be created. Perhaps this may not come, for in the future lies development of fourth dimensional sound or auditory perspective, using not less than three accurately calibrated recording and reproduction channels."

H. Edwards says, "The chief convenience to the projectionist would, it seems to me, be a complete instruction booklet, containing not only wiring diagrams so made that the average projectionist can understand them and trace them out, but also instructions so compiled that their exact meaning is clear. All engineers seem to have the idea that because something is perfectly clear and exceedingly simple to them, it should be to all others, which is far from being true. Those compiling instruction books should take the position that those reading them do not know anything about the subject being dealt in—which is too often the exact fact."

And now here is one that I believe deserves very serious consideration by sound engineers. It is by Charles Oldham, Norwich, Conn.

"Designers of sound systems should base their reasoning upon reports of the most frequent sources of trouble reported, making such modifications as will tend to stop or at least reduce those troubles. All equipments should be tagged or marked as to where voltmeters or head phones may be attached for testing work. All switches and fuse blocks pertaining to the sound system installed in the projection room should be in an approved type of panel, which is not always now the case. The amplifier rack and indicating lights should be constantly under the observation of the projectionist when at his post of duty beside the projector."

F. H. RICHARDSON'S NEW BLUE BOOK OF PROJECTION

A new edition of this famous book is now on the press. Projection, sound reproduction and trouble-shooting all in one compact, handy volume of 700 pages, including 153 illustrations of hook-ups, wiring diagrams and schematics.

Experts consider it the most up-to-date and practical projection manual on the market. Contains an extremely simple index system for instant use in emergency breakdowns. A book that should be part of every projection room in the country. Order early and get an original author's autographed copy.

Diamond Jim

(Universal)

Comedy Drama

In highlighting the life career of Diamond Jim Brady, peer of American go-getter salesmen and one of the most colorful characters of the Gay Nineties era, this picture is both an entertainment and exploitation feature. It is not a straight biography; fiction is blended with fact, and liberal license is taken with actualities. While heroizing its central character, it also succeeds in making entertaining and amusing its cross-section view of New York life at the time when rough, rugged American individualism was at its apex.

Skipping inconsequential details, the picture deals with incidents in Brady's career with which the older generation, remembering the many topical headlines which the character inspired, are quite familiar and which should be interesting to those to whom the name of Brady is synonymous with glamorous character as a great spender, resourceful promoter, friend of sporting world, stage and political figures. In so doing, it moves at interest holding pace, and being dramatic, romantic, exciting and comic, it makes a real character of its central figure. First, it's Brady, the boy, and his ambitious dreams; then the daring character whose plans, ideas and accomplishments amazed and altered the trend of big business dealings. Then is traced Brady's love of the sweetheart of his childhood, the dazzling Lillian Russell. There's Brady of lavish spending proclivities, a penchant for gaudy personal display, association with notables who made news that dazzled a nation as he wined them and dined himself in fabulous style.

The production readily adapts itself to circus ballyhoo. It makes possible a whole string of cooperative advertising ideas.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

The Murder Man

(MGM)

Melodrama

This picture is melodrama which has a tragic twist. Essentially, it is strong and meaty material in which the contrasting elements of romantic love interest and comedy have little relation to the central theme. In idea, it is a combination newspaper man and murder mystery story, but the mystery, while concealed from the characters of the story, is evident to audiences. It moves in interest-stimulating fashion and in so doing gives Spencer Tracy, the lead character, opportunity to turn in one of the most colorful and absorbing performances of his career.

The picture takes the cue for its story and title from the personality and work of Steve Gray. As a newspaper man, he is just smart and discerning enough to be a step ahead of the police department in solving crimes. In the course of his work, he himself becomes involved in a killing; in this situation the love interest angle is introduced, with Mary Shannon, also a reporter. Grey's father, Pop, having been victimized by a pair of ruthless financiers, and it developing that Mander, one of the partners, is morally responsible for Grey's wife's suicide, the reporter planning the perfect crime kills and so twists reports that Mander is arrested and convicted of the murder. In a death house interview with Mander he gloats over his revenge until his sense of honor and decency overcomes baser tendencies and he confesses that through desire for one grand headline story and revenge, he is the killer ready to accept the law's penalty.

Though the title and most of the story content is lurid, the big appeal of the attraction is a man's sacrifice. So presented that patrons are aware that it is the story of a perfect crime in which the only weakness is a hero's sense of honor, it has values for the men. Its general tone and paucity of love interest and comedy, however, constitute a problem that undoubtedly will require shrewd showmanship in making attractive to women. In any case, the picture is entirely an adult attraction, as the elements of which it treats are not only of little interest to children but hardly the type of entertainment that they will enjoy.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Farmer Takes a Wife

(Fox)

Here is a picture that any exhibitor can present with pride. Containing practically every essential that either spontaneously appeals to or is demanded by any class of patrons, it is an entertainment and showmanship feature destined to mark a new milestone in motion picture annals.

For exhibitors and the public it presents many things, each of which is a distinctive entertainment and exploitation asset. The love story, moving in an atmosphere of uniquely thrilling conflict, yet tender and attention-holding in its heart appeal, is gripping. The contrasting drama, in action and dialogue, expertly embellishes these qualities. Its homespun natural comedy in all phases is a delight. The locale in which it is told, and the times, are new to the screen. The Erie Canal, in the days when railroads were first beginning to supersede that famous waterway as an empire building medium, is the background. Production values reflect the spirit of the setting and the persons who lived in it. Produced and directed with intelligence and understanding, fine camera work and spotted musical accompaniment are definite commercial and entertainment assets.

In the matter of the most primary exhibitor requirement—names—it leaves little to be desired. Janet Gaynor is a star of acknowledged box office power. The supporting cast is composed of popular players. Introducing Henry Fonda, it presents a personality whose screen character, talents, mode of diction and manner of handling himself point definitely to a favorable public impression.

The glamor of canal life and business being established, Molly and Dan meet, come into conflict and fall in love. Born on the canal, she loves it with a fanaticism that causes her to hate anyone or anything that would sully its glory. Dan, equally attached to the soil, hoping one day to be a farmer, accepts work on the canal as a means of getting money with which to buy a farm. When Molly, getting a mad on Klore, best boatman, drinker and bruiser on the canal, quits as his cook, she goes to work with Dan, who has been given an interest in a boat by lottery winning Weaver. All season long, as their love grows more beautiful, by prior agreement they refrain from discussing their life ambitions. Each hopes that the other will somehow be won over.

Klore has sworn to be revenged upon Dan for taking Molly away from him. Both are on the grounds of a county fair when, after the Klore-led canal men wreak vengeance on a hated railroad car, the bully sets out after Dan. Dans runs away. Molly can only believe that he is afraid. All season long she bravely strives to stifle her disillusionment, while Dan, now owning a farm, dreams that it would be heaven on earth if Molly were only there.

Late in the season, Fortune rides by and tells Dan that Molly is the object of scorn and ridicule because her chosen man turned quitter. Back on the landing Klore and Dan meet. Follows a fight that fully matches any previous screen melee, and Klore, in losing, is astounded but thankful that it took a real man to lick him. In the finale Dan is back home plowing, with Molly coming stumbling over the furrows

(Warner)

Comedy Drama

Built of the stuff that interests the masses, giving them plenty to laugh about and much to play upon their most tender emotions, this looks like a picture that any exhibitor would like to have on his program. It's an entertainment and showmanship feature from start to finish. Those qualities are to be found in title, cast, story content, production details and directorial technique.

Essentially, it's an action-crammed, romance-tinged domestic comedy drama. Each quality is an individual part of the whole. With excitement its keynote, it moves at speedy pace, builds its situations, whether comic, dramatic or romantic, in logical fashion. In appeal, as it deals with a family, it is a family picture, yet it is also one that holds much interest for specialized groups. While majoring in elements that ordinarily get under the skin of men folk, there is no lack of romantic love interest with which to intrigue women.

Danny, Pat and Mike are Ma O'Hara's brood. Pat is a cop, and Mike a fireman. Danny, the baby, a harum scarum fellow, a manager of bum fighters but always dreaming that he will discover a champ, is closest to Ma's heart. Pat and Danny are always in typical conflict, with the old "why don't you get a job" question. Sympathetic Ma, however, always manages to keep peace, promising that Danny will get his chance, until that worthy chisels in on Pat's girl.

Danny gets a match for his slug-nutty protege, Carbarn, who is so far back on his heels that he goes into action whenever he hears any kind of a bell. Kayoed by Delancy in the dressing room when a phone bell makes Carbarn think he is in the ring, Danny has to substitute for him. With Pat and Lucille present, Danny is taking a powerful walloping when Lucille, unable to stand the strain any longer, tells Pat that Danny is the boy with whom she is in love. Blood ties proving stronger than brotherly enmity, Pat goes into the ring to second Danny and gives him the tips that enable him to knock ou Delancy. In the finale Pat steps aside so that Danny may have the girl.

While the fight atmosphere is the big production highlight of the feature, it should not be sold as a prizefight picture. An advance campaign that establishes it as a family comedy drama with catchy romantic contrasts looks to be the medium through which the most interest might be aroused. Past performances of the Cagney-O'Brien-McHugh trio should not be overlooked.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by First National. Director, Lloyd Bacon. Assistant director, Jack Sullivan. Photography, George Barnes. Film editor, James Gibbson. Screen play by Earl Baldwin. Story idea by Frank Orsatti. Art director, Esdras Hartley. Musical director, Leo F. Forbstein. P. C. A. Certificate No. 1049. Running time, when seen in Hollywood, 80 minutes. Shanghai

(Paramount-Wanger)

Romantic Drama

An interesting dramatic, romantic theme is the subject of this picture. It is a story of a great and honest love—that of a half-white, half-Oriental Eurasian for a white girl, all of which the moral ethics of both races said should not be. While not entirely new as screen material, the expert manner in which it is written, acted and directed, plus the embellishing value of production effects, results in absorbing entertainment with a powerful sympathy stimuling appeal.

Modern in every phase, the title indicates the locale in which all the bizarre glamour of one of the world's most famous crossroads cities is reflected. Dmitri Koslov, half-Russian, half-Chinese, an aristocrat on both sides but reduced to poverty by the cataclysm of revolution, is tugging a ricksha. Barbara Howard, wealthy young American girl, engages him. They fall in love. Under her inspiration Dmitri becomes a powerful financial figure. Against the advice of friends of both races their romance develops to a point where it would be tragic for either one to break the ties. The wisdom of the East finally convinces Dmitri that he must give up his love. At a magnificent party, he announces his determination. But the impetuosity of the West impels Barbara to a desire to override any barrier. When Dmitri seeks to lose himself in the wild interior of China, she follows to re-pledge her love. Gripped in a situation which neither can understand, they return to Shanghai. There the wisdom of Lun Sing convinces both that the union of East and West cannot be. Understanding, the lovers part.

Naturally, because of its topic, this picture is essentially serious, but there is a goodly portion of contrasting comedy, found particularly in the dialogue of Warner Oland and Alison Skipworth.

On the surface, because of its content, the picture might seem to be exclusively a woman's attraction. That it will arouse much feminine interest, given the benefit of a revealing campaign, is hardly to be doubted. But as an adult feature, it also holds much that should entertain men. Concentration on its intriguing topic, use of the appeal of names to the full extent of their box office value, and taking advantage of the other showmanship values included in the production, it is material for not only specialized audiences but also for the run-of-the-mill theatregoers.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Pruducer, Walter Wanger. Directed by James Flood. Original and screen play by Gene Towne, Graham Baker and Lynn Starling. Photographed by James Van Trees. Romantic Drama

There should be sales value alone in the top names in the cast of this active and romantic drama, set in the lively field of the newspaper business, as well as in the origin of the story. The film is an adaptation of a story which appeared, in serial form, not long ago in the Saturday Evening Post, under the title "Women Are Bum Newspapermen," which in itself opens a lead for sales copy on the part of the exhibitor.

Through an execution, a trial, murder mystery and more mystery, runs the friendly, sporting rivalry of a man and a woman, the man trying to prove to the girl, because he loves her, that women are no good as reporters and would be much better off if they would simply settle down and marry. She, on her side, and also largely because she loves him, tries to prove that women are just as good reporters as men, if not a great deal better. There is punch and lively action, and suspense as the story moves along at a rapid pace.

Heading the cast are two names which should mean something on the theatre's marquee, those of Bette Davis and George Brent. Together and individually they have appeared in several recent pictures which have added to their reputations and popularity. The best supporting names are those of Roscoe Karns, largely for comedy, and Winifred Shaw.

Rivals of the press, sweethearts when not working, Miss Davis accepts a bet by Brent that she will finally say "yes" if he proves to her that she is not nearly as good a newspaper reporter as he is. At a fire two men get away in a taxicab while Miss Davis is unable to get through the fire lines. She learns the identity of the man, finds him dead in a hospital of a stab wound, and beats Brent with the story. He tells her she was lucky, that the real test will come when the killer is unearthed. They go to work, Brent beating her with the story of the culprit. The case goes to trial and Brent, in a fashion known only to the audience, gets the inside news, edition by edition, of the progress of the jury deliberations. Finally he gets the actual result of balloting by the jury, and flashes it to the paper before the jury returns its verdict officially.

Meanwhile Brent has framed Miss Davis by entering the jury room, preparing fake ballots and arranging that she gain admittance to the room. She does, flashes the "not guilty" lead to her paper, and as the jury returns its "guilty" verdict, her paper is being sold in the streets with the wrong headline. Her career as a newspaper reporter appears finished, but with Brent temporarily behind the bars for contempt of court, she goes out, finds the right person and obtains a confession from the real murderer, thus freeing the suspect. Then Brent and Miss Davis decide to call off the war, she having won her point anyway, and the romance has its expected conclusion.—Aaronson, New York.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BROADWAY BILL: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy, Walter Connolly—Everyone knows this picture has a wonderful drag, but we ran into excessively hot weather, so only made a little above expenses. Everyone delighted. Played July 3-4.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CARNIVAL: Jimmy Durante, Lee Tracy, Sally Eilers—A fair picture that was below average draw at the box office. Played July 2-3.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

DEATH FLIES EAST: Conrad Nagel. Florence Rice—Another good Columbia picture that did not draw any business. Can't understand it; this company has more good entertaining pictures than the rest of the companies, but no drawing power. Please all we get, but we starve on most all of them.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MEN OF THE HOUR: Richard Cromwell. Billie Seward—A splendid entertainment. Gave good satisfaction, but did not draw any business.—Bert Silver. Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

THAT'S GRATITUDE: Frank Craven, Mary Carlisle—This picture was certainly not box office with us, since we had the smallest crowd on a Saturday night in two years. The performance of the veteran Craven certainly pleased and those who attended expressed their approval of the picture. Played June 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

UNWELCOME STRANGER, THE: Jack Holt, Mona Barrie—Showed this three days last part of week to less than average business. However, it is quite a nice little picture. They conceal the fact that it is a race horse picture and it might help to advertise it as such. Recording very bum. Jack Holt good as usual.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

UNWELCOME STRANGER, THE: Jack Holt, Mona Barrie, Jackie Searl—A nice little picture. Holt always popular here. Glad he has signed with Universal. Maybe Uncle Carl will give him some bigger pictures to star in. Frankie Darro ruined himself here with the children with this picture. He was very popular before this; now the children tell me they don't care for him any more. What's wrong, Frankie? Must be kinda "hard up" to take a part like this one. You were very good in the "Wolf Dog," but now you've fixed yourself in my town. Don't hurry back.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

First National

GO INTO YOUR DANCE: Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler—Warner Bros. have a very good musical in this one, far better than "Gold Diggers." Pleased those who saw it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played July 3-4. —W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Adolphe Menjou, Gloria Stuart, Alice Brady—A well produced musical, but not in the class with "42nd Street" and "Footlight Parade." As usual, Alice Brady talks too much, too fast, too loud and too long. The dance sequences are good and Dick Powell can put over any kind of show. Pleased most of my patrons. Running time, 95 minutes. Played June 21-23.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Gloria Stuart—"Gold Diggers" got away to a bad start here. Monster flood in the Republican River and terrific rains shut off all communications for nearly a week. Spent most of two days trying to locate film on other side of river. Secured services of an airplane to bring film over, but was almost rained out even after it arrived at theatre. Picture pleased, but not up to the standard of "Flirtation Walk." They slipped a little on this one for some reason or other.—John J. Metzger. Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Adolphe Menjou, Gloria Stuart, Alice Brady—A great big picture that did not draw hardly film rent. Good. yes. All of it is good, but we have played so many of this type of picture, they just won't draw any business. The few we do get are satisfied, but it is so few we can't stand the gaff. Played June 30-July 1.—Bert Silver. Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

HAPPINESS AHEAD: Dick Powell, Josephine Hutchinson—Very good. Many favorable comments and did O. K. at the box office. Played June 19.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

OIL FOR THE LAMPS OF CHINA: Josephine Hutchinson, Pat O'Brien—This show pleased almost everyone. Good for any day of the week.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre. Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

Fox

BABOONA: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—A wonderful picture, but we always expect the best from the Johnsons. They were here in person in 1910 and their pictures have improved constantly until it is hard to tell which is the best. This one not only shows the wild animals and natives, but some beautiful scenery. It is both entertaining and educational. We always look forward to showing the Johnson pictures. They are the best pictures of the kind filmed. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 26-27.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

BRIGHT EYES: Shirley Temple, James Dunn—"Bright Eyes" and "Little Colonel" are two fine shows; will please anywhere. The story of "Bright Eyes" pleased the patrons the best, but "Little Colonel" is very good. If you have not run a Temple picture, do so, and you will be surprised. Running time, 80 minutes.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

BRIGHT EYES: Shirley Temple—Shirley is a honey, the picture is a honey and, what's more important, the box office statement was also a honey. Played June 22.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BRIGHT EYES: Shirley Temple, James Dunn—I don't understand the reason, but this business was way below the usual Shirley Temple. We ran this picture at a time when four other theatres were playing Shirley Temple pictures. Everyone told me that this was the best of the lot of Temples; maybe so, but I've still got to be shown. Played June 15-18.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah. Suburban patronage.

DOUBTING THOMAS: Will Rogers—Good picture to good business. Personally I liked "Life Begins at 40" much better, but this one is good enough. We had the Braddock-Baer fight pictures and played on July 4, so we naturally did a good business.—S. R. Rich. Rich Theatre, Montpelier. Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS: Alice Faye. James Dunn—Good picture. One hundred per cent better than last year's picture. In fact, here is real entertainment.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

HELL IN THE HEAVENS: Warner Baxter, Conchita Montenegro—The chief value of this picture is to show the horrors of war. Well produced, with some very good airplane shots, but was not generally liked. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 19-20.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre. Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—Will draw the cash customers and please them. Away above average at the box office.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40: Will Rogers—About an average Rogers picture, possibly a little better than usual; plenty of action and enough comedy to please everybody. Will Rogers and Shirley Temple are life-savers for Fox. Played June 22.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre. Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

LITTLE COLONEL, THE: Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore, Bill Robinson—See report on "Bright Eyes." Running time. 80 minutes.—W. T. Biggs, Adair, Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

ONE MORE SPRING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—Two good stars wasted in a very poor picture. Did not please anyone. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 11-12.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

ONE MORE SPRING: Janet Gaynor, Warner Baxter—Poor. It's just a poor picture in spite of the cast. —S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN: George O'Brien—About the usual western opus that satisfied and brought out the cash customers. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 29.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

WHITE PARADE, THE: Loretta Young, John Boles—A very good picture. Loretta Young played a grand part. This is a well produced picture. It certainly clicked at the box-office. Did a swell Saturday and Sunday business. Played May 26-28.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City. Utah. Suburban patronage.

Mascot

BEHIND THE GREEN LIGHTS: Norman Foster, Judith Allen—A satisfactory picture for double bills. It received fair audience response.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

CRIMSON ROMANCE: Ben Lyon, Sari Maritza, Erich von Stroheim—Very good action picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

HEADLINE WOMAN: Roger Pryor, Heather Angel—A good program picture that did well on a double bill with "The Masquerader." It has plenty of action.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

IN OLD SANTA FE: Ken Maynard—Here is an exceptionally good western with fine singing and music. My patrons enjoyed it very much. If you want a fine outdoor picture date this one. It is good. —S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

LITTLE MEN: Ralph Morgan, Erin O'Brien-Moore, Frankie Darro, Dickie Moore—Good picture. Should make money for you. although I did nothing extra on it.—Sammie Jackson. Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MARINES ARE COMING, THE: William Haines, Armida, Conrad Nagel, Esther Ralston—A major product from an independent producer. Give us more like it. Gave satisfaction in every way. I believe that I can report on all Mascot pictures along with this one. I can sincerely say that I have played all of the Mascot pictures this season and there hasn't been a bad one in the bunch. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 18-19.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville. Ohio. General patronage.

MGM

AFTER OFFICE HOURS: Clark Gable, Constance Bennett—Good entertainment to excellent audience response.—J. W. Noah. New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth. Texas. General patronage.

BABY FACE HARRINGTON: Charles Butterworth, Una Merkel—A good comedy cast and a swell title, but the picture is as near to nothing as anything I have seen for some time. Gets by as Number Two on a double feature and that's all. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 30.—B. Hollenbeck. Rose Theatre. Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

BIOGRAPHY OF A BACHELOR GIRL: Ann Harding. Robert Montgomery—I call this one of her best pictures. Montgomery was great as well as the rest of her fellers. Played on a double bill and all seemed to like it. Did not draw any special business, but gave satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

ONE NEW YORK NIGHT: Franchot Tone, Una Merkel—Good program picture that did average business. Played June 26.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

RECKLESS: Jean Harlow, William Powell—This picture is the life of one that was headlines in newspapers a short time ago. It pleased, but did not draw like "Thin Man" did. I had the pleasure of meeting J. C. Jenkins, just a short visit, but very glad to have him stop. I have been a subscriber to the Herald for the past 16 years and always read his column. Could not take him fishing as we have no fishing around here. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 29-30.—W. T. Biggs, Adair Theatre, Adair, Iowa. Neighborhood patronage.

RECKLESS: Jean Harlow, William Powell.—Good picture. In fact, good enough for anybody. Just fair at the box office.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

SEQUOIA: Jean Parker, Russell Hardie—This is a wonder picture, entirely different than the rest. You will have to see it to appreciate it. I have never seen anything any more interesting. Played June 18-19.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

SOCIETY DOCTOR: Chester Morris, Virginia Bruce—A very good program picture. Interesting story and fine acting. Gave good satisfaction. Played June 18-19.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

VAGABOND LADY: Robert Young, Evelyn Venable, Reginald Denny—The story was so goofy I was afraid of this one, but it pleased. Well directed and produced with a lot of comedy. Pleased better than a lot of specials. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 29-30.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

VANESSA: HER LOVE STORY: Helen Hayes, Robert Montgomery—Played this for the benefit of the Republican river flood sufferers. Sponsored by Ladies of the P. E. O., who sold tickets and turned in our biggest Friday and Saturday business. Had people in our theatre who have never attended before. Received many fine comments from the older, who enjoyed the fine acting of May Robson. Excellent story, good cast. Worth running and advertising.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

VIVA VILLA!: Wallace Beery, Leo Carillo, Fay Wray, Stuart Erwin—A little old, with divided opinions, but have had worse pictures. It didn't register a special, but did a nice business. Beery is liked in our town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

WEST POINT OF THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young, Maureen O'Sullivan—Saw this picture in Omaha before our showing and was in a position to tell them all about it. Recommended it to our patrons as a 100 per cent entertainment. Grossed our largest three-day business this season. Wallace Beery excels his work in all previous productions. Don't fail to tell your patrons about West Point. Many returned for second night and the neighboring towns came drifting in as reports reached them of the goodness of the picture. Some wonderful scenes and thrilling shots and the story is excellent.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

WEST POINT ON THE AIR: Wallace Beery, Robert Young—One of the best this year. Beery does not "hog" the picture, but he does well with his part and gives the other players a break. Good story well made and greatly appreciated here.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

WINNING TICKET, THE: Leo Carillo, Louise Fazenda—Some said good; others, not so good. Personally think there was too mucha da spaghetti in this one and our people just don't care for that kind of fruit. It is a talking picture. Will do on a double feature program.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

Monogram

FLIRTING WITH DANGER: Robert Armstrong, Edgar Kennedy—A good comedy. Nothing out of the average. Just a good program picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played April 11-12.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

Paramount

ALL THE KING'S HORSES: Carl Brisson, Mary Ellis—Swell show. A surprise number. Carl Brisson is great. What a voice. Give this picture some publicity. It's different. The story will please and your patrons will thank you for telling them about it.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

> "I have been getting a lot of benefit from what other exhibitors have to say in 'What the Picture Did for Me' section, so I will try and return a little."
> —C. R. GREGG, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan.

CAR 99: Fred MacMurray, Ann Sheridan, Sir Guy Standing—This seemed to please everyone. Business fair. Played June 29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

GILDED LILY, THE: Claudette Colbert, Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland—Claudette Colbert's acting is always fine. Colbert is right on top with them since her "It Happened One Night" performance. Picture did average business. It seems that the little pictures make more money for you than all of Paramount's specials. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 29-July 1.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah. Suburban patronage.

HOLD 'EM YALE: Patricia Ellis, Cesar Romero—Good. Just a good picture for any house, any night in any town.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

HOME ON THE RANGE: Jackie Coogan, Randolph Scott, Evelyn Brent—A very good western. Played on Thursday-Friday to good business. And the main thing, it pleased. Joe Morrison's singing of "Home on the Range" very good. Thanks, Paramount, for an out-of-the-ordinary western. Hope you make many, many more as good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell, Sir Guy Standing—This picture is exceptionally made, good story, well acted, swell photography, but poor drawing. With all these requisites of a fine picture one would naturally think that this would click at the boxoffice. Notice that most of the business was men. Played June 8-11.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah. Suburban patronage.

LOVE IN BLOOM: Joe Morrison, Dixie Lee, George Burns, Gracie Allen—The radio fans turned out for Gracie and George. Played it midweek to a nice business and a much better picture than some of the socalled big ones. It will please both old and young.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Walter C. Kelly, Andy Clyde, Richard Cromwell, Betty Furness—Poor business, but those who attended were very well pleased with excellent performances by veteran actors. Played June 15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Betty Furness, Richard Cromwell—A good picture for my town and my patrons. They liked it and told me so.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

MISSISSIPPI: Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Joan Bennett—Good musical that went over O. K. W. C. Fields is the biggest part of the show, although Bing put over some nice musical numbers. Played July 3.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

MISSISSIPPI: Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Joan Bennett—A great picture. Everyone pronounced it Bing's best. Crosby rises to new heights in this beautiful story of the Southland and steps into a real he-man role. Joan Bennett as "Lucy" has never been sweeter. W. C. Fields supplies plenty of comedy. The pickaninny kiddies and the colored chorus added much to the musical part. Good settings, good music, a good cast and a mighty swell picture. What a pleasure to run a theatre with pictures like "Mississippi." —John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH: Pauline Lord, W. C. Fields, Zasu Pitts, Evelyn Venable—We played this late, but did a little better than normal business. Played June 19-20.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

PRIVATE WORLDS: Claudette Colbert, Charles Boyer, Joan Bennett, Joel McCrea—An excellent picture, but not as good as "Imitation of Life" or "It Happened One Night." Claudette is a favorite. I hope they keep her in good stories.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MYSTERY: Randolph Scott, Charles "Chic" Sale—Scott registers with the western fans here. Business about normal. Played June 8. —C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

RUGGLES OF RED GAP: Charles Laughton, Mary Boland, Charles Ruggles, Zasu Pitts—If it's a Paramount picture it's the best show in town and this certainly was the best in town when we showed it. When they turned out on a Friday like a real good Saturday there surely must be something to bring them out. "Ruggles of Red Gap" enjoyed a trip across the river on the backs of the theatre force on account of washed out bridges. A mile and a half in mud and water knee deep across the Republican River saved the day and the box office clicks nicely for our efforts.—John J. Metzger, Oriental Theatre, Beaver City, Neb. Small town patronage.

WINGS IN THE DARK: Myrna Loy, Cary Grant—Very fine picture. Better than expected.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES: Anne Shirley, Tom Brown—A very satisfactory performance to normal business. Played June 26-27.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CHASING YESTERDAY: Anne Shirley—Another flop from Radio. They tried to make another "Anne of Green Gables," but sure missed their mark. Just a dull costume picture with a lot of talk and no action. I received more unfavorable comment on this picture than any I have played for a long time. My advice would be to pass this one up if possible. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 30-July 1.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

CHASING YESTERDAY: Anne Shirley, O. P. Heggie—A very fine picture. Great story and great acting by the stars and all the cast.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

ENCHANTED APRIL: Ann Harding, Frank Morgan—Mighty good picture. Story interesting and very fine acting by the stars and all the cast. Good satisfaction here. Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

GRAND OLD GIRL: May Robson, Mary Carlisle, Fred MacMurray—Fairly good production, but did not draw very well; just about an average picture. Played June 15.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

GRAND OLD GIRL: May Robson, Hale Hamilton—Pass this one up if possible unless you want to sit in the theatre by yourself. There is practically nothing to this picture except May Robson sticking her nose into other people's business. I would class this with the poorest picture ever made. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 14.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

HOORAY FOR LOVE: Ann Sothern, Gene Raymond, Bill Robinson—And hooray for Radio. This company has produced a dandy musical which didn't cost a fortune to make and which shouldn't bankrupt the exhibitor. True, the story is unoriginal with its "the show must go on" plot, but it is so refreshingly filmed that it seems all new. The clever musical numbers are what put the film over in grand style. Bill Robinson's act alone is worth the price of an admission and his song with comical Fats Waller is great. Take my suggestion and, by all means, give Waller equal billing with Robinson, for although this portly gentleman's appearance is somewhat brief, he makes a decided impression. There is also a pleasant little theme song, "I'm in Love All Over Again," which is engagingly sung by Ann Sothern. This is fine summer entertainment as it does not require any mental effort to follow the story.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatre, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

INFORMER, THE: Victor McLaglen, Margot Grahame—I will not attempt to tell you what I think about this picture, but have this to say: it is not suitable entertainment for movie patrons of the good old U. S. A. and I warn you to screen it before trying to put it over. If you can figure any way after screening it to put it over, you are a better man than I am. I wasted four days playing time.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

INFORMER, THE: Victor McLaglen, Margot Grahame—Here's a picture that I used July 4. I really thought from all advance reports of the big reviewers and it being rated a four star picture that I was going to give my audience a big treat. I had it booked for three days and used it only one day. So far I have found but one person that said they liked it. My advice to you small town exhibitors would be to pay for it and leave on the shelf.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

LADDIE: John Beal, Gloria Stuart—Here is the kind of a picture for a small town. It drew well and pleased everyone. These are the kind of pictures it's a pleasure to run and stand on the outside of your theatre and hear the fine comments from your patrons. It made good money for me and will make money for you.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

LADDIE: John Beal, Gloria Stuart, Virginia Weidler—A mighty fine picture for this size burg. The little Virginia Weidler stole the picture and that's no lie. All the cast was splendid. Everyone had read the story, and it was certainly well done. We did not do the business we would have if we were showing in our theatre. But we are using a tent while we are rebuilding our house. And talking pictures have never made much success under canvas, though we have a raised floor and theatre chairs and splendid results as to delivering the show. But people don't know that. A tent, and they look for the elephant. Played 23-25.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. City and country patronage.

NITWITS, THE: Wheeler and Woolsey—Another fast-moving, uproaring slapstick and what have you from this comedy team; they just started making this and went off and left it to work itself out and you have marvelous entertainment and a box office draw. The new girl is good, but I miss Dorothy with this team.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ROBERTA: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Irene Dunne—Another good musical from Astaire and Rogers, but not up to the standard of "Flying Down to Rio" and "The Gay Divorcee." In the first place there is too much singing from Irene Dunne and in the second place there is too much style show to interest small town patronage. Running time, 105 minutes. Played May 5-7—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

ROBERTA: Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—Excellent.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

ROMANCE IN MANHATTAN: Francis Lederer, Ginger Rogers—Great audience appeal. Above the average, but not a special. Suitable for any class of people and full of interest, with action, comedy and romance. Played July 6.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: William Powell, Ginger Rogers—I heard a lot about this picture before I ran it and was advised it was a wonderful picture, but my opinion is that Miss Rogers is badly miscast and Mr. Powell is not natural. Both players just did not fit in and the plot was so complicated it was hard to follow.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

WEST OF THE PECOS: Richard Dix, Martha Sleeper—A much better than average western picture. Had people in to see this picture that never go to see a western. I can't understand why they don't produce more of this type of picture in place of a number of society dramas that won't even draw film rental. Running time, 69 minutes. Played March 3-4.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

Spectrum

FRONTIER DAYS: Bill Cody, Ada Ince, Bill Cody, Jr.—The children went crazy over this one. A very good picture. Can't be beat for weekends.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Tiffany

LAND OF MISSING MEN, THE: Bob Steele—Old and not so very good. Better play something else on your Saturday night program.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

United Artists

CARDINAL RICHELIEU: George Arliss—I always lose money on George Arliss pictures and this was no exception. It brought in the lowest Thursday-Friday gross in six months.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

CATHERINE THE GREAT: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Elisabeth Bergner—I hardly think it necessary to state that this picture is not for the small towns, as the title alone gives it away. From every angle this film screams class with its lavish mountings, heavy story and battle of foreign accents: Miss Bergner's Teutonic brogue, the English actors' natural speech, and Doug Jr.'s assumed British accent. For the minority who can truly appreciate real artistry, this picture has great appeal, for it was produced with an eye for minute detail in every phase of the story. The acting is perfection itself. As a box office attraction, this film did surprisingly well, and we accounted for this by interest in Miss Bergner, who has received a tremendous amount of publicity in recent months.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

CLIVE OF INDIA: Ronald Colman, Loretta Young—A good picture made in a big way, but a failure for me at the box office. Too much English talk that small town people do not want. It's four stars in Liberty, but we can't live on stars nor pay film rental.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

KID MILLIONS: Eddie Cantor, Ann Sothern, Ethel Merman, Block and Sully—Perfect entertainment of its type. It received grand audience response and did well at the box office.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

MOULIN ROUGE: Constance Bennett, Franchot Tone—Played this one old. Then I played it to a loss. Nothing to this picture except the musical numbers in the last reel. Running time, 70 minutes. Played May 12-13.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

SCARLET PIMPERNEL, THE: Leslie Howard, Marle Oberon—This picture played one of our poorest crowds in six months. These English pictures are still bad news in our situation. Sound awfully poor. Liked the picture, but did very poor business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

TRANSATLANTIC MERRY-GO-ROUND: Gene Raymond, Nancy Carroll, Jack Benny, Mitzi Green—Good entertainment to fine audience response. However, the trailer leads you to expect even better entertainment than you receive.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

WE LIVE AGAIN: Anna Sten, Fredric March—Ran this picture with another good picture and both did good business. First of the hot spell when we ran this, which knocked business some. This is a very well produced picture, rather deep for some of them, but the majority liked it. Running time, 84 minutes. Played June 22-25.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah. Suburban patronage.

Universal

BRIDE OF FRANKENSTEIN, THE: Boris Karloff—We made a lot of money with this picture. In fact, I think it now holds the box office record for Friday and Saturday this year. It has some wonderful opportunities to make money and we took advantage of them and made a cleanup. We offered a ten-dollar cash prize to any lady who would see this picture alone in our theatre at midnight and had over two hundred applicants. Everyone within a hundred miles were talking about the picture and whether any lady was brave enough to see the picture with all the doors locked and the house in absolute darkness. Each person agreed to relieve us of any responsibility from shock, fainting, etc. We started advertising about three weeks in advance of the show and when we opened on Friday night the house was filled in 15 minutes. Large crowds were standing in line for the second show which was the first sellout I have had in months. My advice is to advertise it right. Offer a prize of what you can afford to pay to any lady who will see the picture alone at midnight and then go through with it just as advertised. We had quite a number of people who stayed outside the theatre to see what the lady looked like after previewing the picture. The picture itself is good and enjoyed by the large crowd. It don't make much difference how good the picture is, it will make any exhibitor a lot of money if handled right, but it must be put over. It must be handled right. Played June 28-29.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

CRIMSON TRAIL, THE: Buck Jones, Polly Ann Young—Less than ordinary business. Our attendance for Buck Jones' shows has been considerably lighter than normal. Our patrons state they like more comedy in the westerns. Played June 22.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

GOOD FAIRY, THE: Margaret Sullavan, Herbert Marshall, Frank Morgan—Some good spots in it, but it was too long. A better picture could have been made out of it, with two-thirds of the length. I rate it as only a medium production. Played June 29.—George Lodge, Green Lantern Theatre, Claymont, Del. Small town patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Claudette Colbert, Warren William—I consider this one of the outstanding pictures of this season, and believe that when the best 10 of this year are selected it will be No. 1. It didn't do the business that I expected, but I played it during a downpour of rain all day Sunday afternoon and night. Running time, 111 minutes. Played April 7-8.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Claudette Colbert. Warren William, Louise Beavers, Rochelle Hudson—Played it on a weekend; it drove the blues away from this exhibitor. Packed them in. Saw them cry and come out pleased. What could be better? Hats off to Universal. Everyone should play this and advertise it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Claudette Colbert, Warren William, Rochelle Hudson, Louise Beavers—Ran this picture after it had had practically all the 15c runs in the city, but it still did exceptional business for me. Any exhibitor could afford to run this picture, no matter how late you get it. After the show there wasn't a dissatisfied person in the bunch. Played May 18-22.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah. Suburban patronage.

PRINCESS O'HARA: Jean Parker, Chester Morris—Good audience response to this picture forces me to classify it as a good program picture, although personally I found it very ordinary film fare.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas. General patronage.

STONE OF SILVER CREEK: Buck Jones, Noel Francis—Our town likes a western at least twice a month. This picture filled the bill nicely and gave a much better net than some specials we played. Buck is popular with the adults and kiddies. Play it if they like westerns.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NEW CONTRIBUTORS FROM MIDDLEWEST

Kansas and Nebraska contribute new reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week. They are C. R. Gregg, Liberty theatre, Caney, Kansas.

John J. Metzger, Oriental theatre, Beaver City, Kan.

Read the reports of these showmen in this issue.

STONE OF SILVER CREEK: Buck Jones, Noel Francis—In my opinion the best Jones this year. We ran it on a double bill, but it's good enough for any house on a single bill. The last Jones, "Crimson Trail," is not so hot, but "Stone of Silver Creek" is good.—S. H. Rich, Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho. Town and rural patronage.

Warner

ALIBI IKE: Joe E. Brown—One of Joe E. Brown's best. A scream from start to finish. Be sure and play it.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay—We ran this on the same bill with another strong picture and did good business. You can say what you want about Cagney, but somehow his pictures usually click here, especially if he is teamed up with O'Brien. Ran this picture on some of the first hot days we had and it hit business slightly, but it is still a good investment. Played June 22-25.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah, Suburban patronage.

DINKY: Jackie Cooper, Mary Astor—This is a great program picture. Splendid story and well acted by the greatest little actor of them all. Gave good satisfaction to everybody. Played July 4.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

FLORENTINE DAGGER, THE: Donald Woods, Margaret Lindsay—A good mystery story, well acted, and gave satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

STRANDED: Kay Francis, George Brent—Strictly a program picture which is entertaining, but not out of the ordinary. It is the type of picture which the patrons forget almost as soon as they leave the theatre. Kay Francis deserves better material.—J. W. Noah, New Liberty and Ideal Theatres, Ft. Worth, Texas.

SWEET ADELINE: Irene Dunne, Donald Woods—This is a good hit at the box office; ran a plain filler with it and still cleaned up. Sorry we ran this on a Thursday-Friday. It still seems that people like to see this oldtime "stuff" which they themselves had experienced. Usually costume pictures do not click with my sort of patronage. This is a safe bet for anybody. Running time, 87 minutes. Played June 27-28.—Earl D. Smith, Tower Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah. Suburban patronage.

Short Features

Celebrity

HEADLESS HORSEMAN, THE: ComiColor Cartoons—A very good and interesting cartoon taken from the story "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." This is more interesting due to the fact that it has a story to follow. Running time, one reel.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

Columbia

BIRDMAN: Krazy Kat Kartoons—Good cartoon. Music in this is fine. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

A CAT, A BELL AND MOUSE: Color Rhapsodies—Very good cartoon. Give us more like it, Columbia. Running time, one reel. Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

FLYING PIGSKINS: World of Sport Series—Played it at the wrong time, but it is good. Better wait till September to use this. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson. Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Educational

CLANCY AT THE BAT: Andy Clyde, Harry Gribbon—A two-reeler with a carload of laughs. It's old, but Goodrow in New Orleans sent me a very good print. This is one of the best two-reelers I've played in a long time. Running time, two reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

TARS AND STRIPES: Star Personality Comedies—This is a fairly entertaining comedy from Keaton. But not up to his usual standard of comedy. At least not as I remember him from a few years ago. Running time, two reels.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

First Division

MARCH OF TIME: All of this series of "March of Time" are just a newsreel and are not worth any more than what you pay for a newsreel. Issue No. 2 and No. 3 were interesting, but No. 4 was terribly dull and uninteresting. Running time, two reels.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

MGM

CHAIN LETTER DIMES: Oddities Series—Was fortunate enough to book this one while we are all lamenting our gone-but-not-forgotten dimes and it clicked. If you can book this one early it will go over. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CHINESE NIGHTINGALE: Happy Harmonies Series—One of the most beautiful of this series. Think these cartoons please the adults almost as much as the kiddies. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

STAR NIGHT AT COCOANUT GROVE: All-star cast—The best short I have ever run. Beautiful coloring, all the favorite stars, comedy, music, dancing; more entertainment in it than in lots of features. You can't over-advertise this one. Leo ought to roar twice for this one. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

ZEELAND, THE HIDDEN PARADISE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks.—Another very good Travel Talk. Beautiful color and interesting pictures. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HOW TO BREAK 90 AT CROQUET: Four Star Comedies—How this piece of film got listed among the comedies is more than I can understand. It is just a piece of misery to sit through. Running time, 15 minutes.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

SOUTHERN STYLE: Musicomedies Series—Another pleasing musical two-reel comedy from Radio. Ruth Etting sings several old songs which are very good. Running time, two reels.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

THIS BAND AGE: Headliners Series—Very pleasing two-reel musical comedy. Received many favorable comments on it. Running time, 21 minutes.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

Universal

MEET THE PROFESSOR: Mentone No. 10-A—Another one of the very good musicals from Mentone. All of them are good entertainment with very few exceptions. Running time, 19 minutes.—M. S. Porter, Orpheum Theatre, Nelsonville, Ohio. General patronage.

NIGHT IN A NIGHT CLUB, A: J. Harold Murray, Buck and Bubbles—Good two-reeler. Running time, 18 minutes.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

RADIO SCOUT: El Brendel—A very good two-reel short that got a lot of laughs. Running time, two reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

CONVICT: Ko-Ko—A good one-reel cartoon. Seems as if they were made silent and reissued with sound. Maybe so, but it was good enough for us. Good print and sound. Running time, one reel.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

FARTHER-FASTER-SAFER: A two-reel subject put out by the Pennzoil Co., Oil City, Pa. It's free, but has comparatively little direct advertising. Good shots of the streamline trains, air transports, auto racing, etc. Pleasing to the men.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

J. C. JENKINS--HIS COLYUM

Des Moines, Iowa

Dear Herald:

This town was originally an Indian trading post but the Indians moved out when the Paramount, Des Moines and other theatres moved in, and from then on the town began to grow until today it is a city of no ordinary dimensions.

We met Mr. Lionel Wasson, who is director of advertising for Central States Theatres Corporation, which is under the management of Harry Weinburg. We were told that Mr. Wasson was soon to marry a lady who is now connected with MGM at Omaha. Doggone the luck, why do these tall cornhuskers insist on coming over to Nebraska and picking out our finest women? Why don't they go down in Kansas or South Dakota and get 'em; they are almost as good in those states. Harry Schumal, the MGM manager at Omaha, ought to look out for these boys from the state of the "Tall Corn"; they have no Indian blood in 'em but some of 'em might be Swedish (which wouldn't hurt 'em a bit).

We also met Mr. J. W. Carter, who operates The Service Theatre Supply Co., a comparatively new service company at Des Moines and, from what we could observe, we are inclined to believe that this company is equipped to handle all kinds of supplies and do all kinds of repair work connected with theatre operation. It might be well for you theatremen to look this company over. Mr. Carter at one time got his instructions under our friend H. A. Van Housen of Omaha, and when Van trains 'em you can bet they have been trained.

If we should ever come to Iowa and not go to Indianola and meet Mr. Will H. Eddy, who operates the Empress theatre, we'd feel like we ought to move back to Patagonia, where we belong. Mr. Eddy is not only a theatreman who knows the business but he also knows a lot of other things, among them being that the radio crooners should move out to that "Shelterbelt" and serenade the blue pelicans with their lovesongs, which ought to incite Mother Pelican to lay more eggs.

Score One for Oskaloosa

J. C. Stack of the Rivoli theatre at Oskaloosa has been there in the theatre business for a long time. This indicates that Oskaloosa knows a good thing when she sees it, for if it wasn't for the Rivoli theatre offering the best there is to be had in entertainment just where do you think the Oskaloosa folks would go? They couldn't go to Neligh; that would be too far. Oskaloosa is to be congratulated.

The Broadway theatre over at Brooklin is operated by M. A. Favor, a tall corn husker who is still running at large with no charges preferred against him. But why should there be; he is giving Brooklin a line of shows that ought to be good enough for anybody. And besides that it looks like they would harvest enough wheat and oats around Brooklin to feed every family and horse in Iowa. Should you ever happen near Brooklin drive over there and go to the Broadway and see a good show.

They have a radio here in this hotel that ought to be sent to the dry cleaner's or the blacksmith shop. Last night we heard eleven selections on it. Ten of 'em were love songs sung by national crooners, and after that they told us about the good qualities of The Bill Mud gasoline and blue pills for dyspeptic people and then we took a dose of salhepatica and went to bed, and this morning we feel pretty good.

Another Marion

Marion, Iowa, isn't the town where former President Harding was born. Should Marion, Iowa, claim that, Marion, Ohio, would probably get pretty sore about it, but Marion, Iowa, has enough to brag about without going into back history. She has H. C. Mershon, and his Garden theatre, and that is enough for one town to holler about. H. C. says that the MOTION PICTURE HERALD should be in every well regulated theatre. You bet your socks, H. C.; again you are correct.

Say, Horace, we are pretty dense, we are going to admit that right now to save any argument, but what we'd like to know is, just what is this "New Deal" we hear so much about? Is killing five million pigs to raise the price of bacon to 35 cents and ham to forty cents a pound part of this "New Deal?" Is plowing up of thousands of acres of cotton, to cause the price of cotton shirts to go up 45 per cent, a part of the "New Deal?" Is the paying of farmers for letting their land lie idle and not grow wheat and then spend hundreds of millions of dollars to build dams to irrigate more wheat lands. Is that a part of the "New Deal"? Is building a "Shelterbelt" a hundred miles wide and a thousand miles long out in the agricultural slums "to bring rain." Is that a part of the "New Deal"? Our neighbor has an Airdale that is going to have pups some time this summer. Is that a part of the "New Deal"? We don't know, we are asking for information.

Mind on His Business

E. W. Hageman, who operates Independence's popular playhouse, still has his mind on the business and both feet on the ground and still has the goodwill of the showgoing folks of Independence, and that means that business at the Grand theatre is so far out of the red that he has thrown the red ink bottle away. E. W. has known us for a long time but he isn't bragging very loud about that.

If all the theatremen in Iowa were as sociable as M. R. Blair of the Regent theatre at Cedar Falls (and we don't know but what the most of 'em are) we'd try and persuade our wife to move over into Iowa and give the officers over west of the "Big Muddy" a rest. M. R. is pretty close to Waterloo with his theatre, and that's one thing which makes it pretty tough on Waterloo. Anyhow, we had a nice visit with him.

The Iowa legislature has at least one man who has been instrumental in keeping the state from running hog wild trying to dig all her taxes out of the theatremen, and that legislator is E. O. Ellsworth of the Metropolitan theatre at Iowa Falls.

Just what would have happened to the theatre boys over here had it not been for the watchful eye of Mr. Ellsworth is something of a conjectural nature. Our guess is that they would have had more taxes saddled onto 'em, and the Lord knows that they have enough already. Iowa Falls is to be congratulated, not for Mr. Ellsworth alone, but also for another illustrious citizen, Mr. Middleton, who operates the Rex theatre. Gosh all fish-hooks, that town is pretty well hooked up for prominent people. Wish we could say that for some towns over in —— Guam.

If we thought you were not already tired out we might close this with a little poetry, but being the president of "The Society For The Prevention Of Cruelty To Animals," therefore we are going to put in another week or two over here in Iowa and then head for Wisconsin, and some brick cheese, and we hope that Fred Hinds of Whitewater will have his bulldog tied up.

Pathe News Staff Was Shifted to Cover Flood

Virtually the entire camera and sound staff of Pathe News in the east was rushed by every possible conveyance from New York, Buffalo, Albany and Philadelphia to cover the floods which swept through New York state and part of Pennsylvania last week. The crews were concentrated in Binghamton, Syracuse, Hornell and Albany, from which points they used automobiles, airplanes and boats to film the flooded areas. Many times, according to reports, they risked their lives, and on several occasions were able to effect rescues.

Havana Operator Leaves

Manuel Solis, who, with his father, operates theatres in Cuba, left by plane Wednesday after a 10-day visit in New York, during which he completed arrangements for the opening of the Teatro Alhambra, recently built in Havana, seating 2,000. The opening has been tentatively set for September 1.

To Handle "Time" Sales

James F. Sharkey has been named special representative attached to the home office of RKO Distributing to devote his time entirely to developing sales on the "March of Time" reel, working under the supervision of Harry Michalson, short subject sales manager.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

BACK TO SHOWMANSHIP

He is a widely known theatre executive who has worked his way to the top from the low rungs, acquiring on his way up a sound and practical experience in the business of managing and exploitation. He speaks with authority, and therefore to be related with gratification is the opinion of this showman who sees a definite and early nationwide swing of the theatre pendulum back to showmanship and all the term implies.

"All" implies many things, but most important is the rightful place it will again make for the real-honest-to-Henry theatreman who for, lo, these many years has been pushed into dark corners, his talents ignored and neglected.

"All" also implies that men who know will be given a freer hand in selling their attractions, and that means enough advertising money to cover adequately all fertile sources of patronage.

"All" means that good product will be sold properly and not permitted to starve at the box-office through exhibitor short-sightedness. And last but not least, "all" will allow the fireball showman to prove his worth and personally profit thereby. Thus will the wheat of manpower be separated from the chaff.

The millennium approaches, gents, and long overdue, too. It becomes more evident with every day's passing that grasping-at-straw policies must be replaced with expert hard-hitting and relentless showmanship.

SHOW MUST GO ON

Floods swept McCook, Nebraska, and Manager Fred Glass, of the Fox Theatre, with every avenue of land transportation closed, made contact with a flyer who piloted him out of the maelstrom to his key city where Fred loaded up the ship with film and a generator and fought back to McCook, through death and desolation. The show must go on.

That it does go on and that there are men who, in spite of hell and high water, make it go on is a constant reason why the theatre retains its high place as one of civilization's most vital factors.

At the bottom of Warnerite Dick Wright's letterheads, is presented this thought: "Attend the movies regularly. In no way can you get so close to life for so little." Who was it that recently remarked, if admissions were twice what they are, motion pictures would still be the cheapest form of entertainment?

DAMNED NEAR RUINED

There's entirely too much of defeatist psychology in the attitude of those who profess themselves as being thankful today to be on a payroll on most any terms. This frame of mind undoubtedly has quite a bit to do with the current state of business in general and the theatre in particular. Showmen who are responsible for respectable grosses in this year's market should be compensated accordingly instead of being forced to kid themselves they are fortunate enough to be eating regularly.

Thankful? Reminds us of the school Thanksgiving Day celebration when the teacher asked her youngsters to get up and explain for what they had to be thankful on that day. Each child dutifully gave a number of glowing reasons for so desirable a state until it came the turn of little Jimmy, age 10, cross-eyed, bowlegged, knock-kneed and freckled.

"Teacher," he wailed, "I got nothin' to be thankful fer. The good Lord damn near ruined me."

KEEP ON SAYING SO

Many moons ago, this department protested often and at length against the buildup given the newspaper picture-rating system by the Broadway theatres using the stars in all manner of advertising. In June, an agreement was put into effect by the ad heads to discontinue this practice.

Now from Kansas City comes another shot at the stars-system from Lowell Lawrence, Journal-Post motion picture critic who has discontinued this method in his reviews, explaining that the system which was expected to become the standard over the country has petered out.

No system of arbitrary picture rating by the critics can long endure if the theatre advertising men themselves say "no" together and continue saying so in unison.

The next step forward in the progress of your Round Table is a plan now in work for the formation of a series of local Round Table Clubs throughout the United States and other countries. Further details regarding the organization of these local units will be announced in an early issue.

The delayed presentation of Col. Bill Hendricks' Quigley April Silver took place a few days ago in Memphis, where the manager of the Warner Theatre (center) accepted his honors from Col. Roscoe Turner (left), famed flyer. In the group also are Col. Howard Waugh, Warner Theatres Kentucky zone director, Col. Tom Young, Memphis Fox exchange manager, and the Flying Keys, also Colonels, who recently established a new flying endurance record.

Ceremony originally was planned to take place in Hollywood where the plaque was forwarded, but changes in the program switched the proceedings to Memphis with Turner flying the trophy back from the Coast and doing the honors in Hendricks' home town. Bill won the Award on the Fox picture, "Baboona."

Insurance Company Gives Heralds for Farrar

On "Les Miserables" through the cooperation of local insurance company, Ward Farrar, Loew's Palace, Indianapolis, succeeded in having all solicitors distribute theatre heralds when calling on accounts. Tying in with Boy Scouts, each master was instructed to discuss the picture at all meetings, place notice on bulletin boards and recommend that boys attend showing.

For his street bally Ward used enlarged book on small wagon pulled by burro with man in costume at reins (see photo). Special screenings were held for press, clergy and local notables. Newspaper tied in on a movie crossword puzzle contest based around title.

Radio Discovery Nites Click for Hodges

Jack Hodges, of the Florida, in Jacksonville, Fla., reports the conclusion of the statewide radio discovery nights held in 20 towns of the Sparks circuit, each theatre sending local winner to the finals which were held on the stage of the Florida. Winner of the finals receives a free trip to New York via boat, week's stay at midtown hotel, and an opportunity to sing on Showboat hour. Jack reports contest biggest yet with distinct increase in business.

Another radio stunt currently clicking for Jack is a tieup with local station dramatic group to put on dramatization from a coming attraction. Program is no cost to theatre as sponsor pays for everything getting a break on the screen in addition. (P. S.—How's the fishin', Jack?)

Killers and "G Men" Act As Street Bally for Gilkeson

To promote his "G Men" date at the Iola Theatre, Iola, Kan., C. G. Gilkeson handcuffed four of his house staff, labeling them Karpis, Dillinger, Pretty Boy Floyd and Baby Face Nelson and marched them through the streets in charge of two G men equipped with pistols and riot guns. This bally also was used in surrounding towns.

Gilkeson also secured from the sheriff's office various accessories used by the department of justice and these were stationed in front of house during run.

Hits on "Marietta" At Two-Day House

He did it with exactly $17.80 in a theatre open only two days a week, Fridays and Saturdays—referring to Manager Chuck Shannon's campaign at Warners' Hollywood, Pittsburgh, on "Naughty Marietta" that was voted the Quigley June Bronze Plaque. And the tipoff on how much Chuck put on the ball is evidenced by his report that all the art work for his many window displays was done by himself.

To land these windows, all in prominent neighborhood locations, Chuck secured tieup stills for tieins with florists, dress shops, drug stores, beauty shops, shoe stores, etc., painted the cards and posters and generally supervised the layouts. Accompanying photo shows some of his handiwork.

Other merchant tieups were made via rubber stamp with which Shannon imprinted shopping bags, napkins, grocery and five and ten bags, restaurant checks, and even the bills at nearby tailor and cleaning shop. Tailor also pinned stamped cards to each outgoing garment. Space on back page of heralds was sold for enough to cover entire cost plus printing and these also were distributed by participating merchants.

Chuck then promoted kites for giveaway at matinees, planted empty barrel labeled "danger" containing stills and picture copy at prominent corner; painted a vacant window with bon ami and leaving a peep-hole in the center labeled "ladies only," inside showing theatre display. Window cards were tied to spare tires on cars belonging to house staff, their friends and Shannon's.

Telephone was used extensively in advance, imposing lobby and front made up inexpensively, and all local papers and shopping guides promoted for various publicity, art and ads to wind up what was reported a highly successful campaign.

Barry Stages "Nitwit" Nut Hunt for Kids

A lucky nut contest was staged by Terry Barry at the Huntington Station Theatre, Huntington Station, N. Y., for his "Nitwits" date. All under 18 were eligible and at a given signal youngsters adjourned to a nearby lot where the nuts were buried and started their hunt.

Terry says police protection was provided and to each kid finding one of the lucky nuts a pass was awarded. Stunt broke papers with gag stories.

Armstrong Starts London Hat Style

Conceded to be one of the most effective and spectacular campaigns ever staged in London was John Armstrong's drive for the benefit of "Bengal Lancer" put on by the London Paramount Theatres ad director at the Carlton Theatre.

Well in advance the date was sold with special one-sheet teaser flats in two colors planted throughout the entire local electric railways system. Long lines of sandwich-board men also plugged the showing and newspapers gave able support.

The theatre front proved an unusual puller, the full decorations topped with giant lancer figures mounting guard on each side of the front neon sign and this idea carried out further (see photo) in the foyer with similar impressive figures.

Foyer itself went completely "eastern" with house personnel all in lancer uniforms and for further sock Armstrong dug up a circus horse which he had paraded round town, then down the theatre stairs through the auditorium and on stage to appear in the prologue.

Full advantage was taken of topical events. On the occasion of some late holidays, heralds advising parents to take the family to the picture were distributed, as were others showing eight lancers in a rowing shell with appropriate tiein copy given away at the famous Oxford and Cambridge boat race. Further, personal letters were addressed to every headmaster of public and private schools in a 100-mile radius of London.

Tieups were numerous, such styles being introduced as "Bengal blues" for men's shirts, wide participation by all leading booksellers, and what proved to be one of the most popular of the Jubilee Year's souvenirs was a Lancer rag doll mascot. Pajamas were also treated similarly and costumed ushers from the theatre were planted in a special display of Bengal home industries at Selfridge's, leading London store.

Starts New Hat Style

What was inaugurated innocently as just another stunt, proved to be one of the biggest things in the tiein for a woman's Lancer hat. Armstrong got the idea from a shot of Gary Cooper in a pith helmet, sold the idea to one store and wound up by seeing it retailed by hundreds of shops, large and small, all of which of course plugged the title.

Not only was the new style publicized in the stores' advertising, but it also caught on in the news columns, fashion writeups in smart magazines and other unlooked for breaks. And to top all this Armstrong promoted a special performance for those wearing the new style, regiments of women, Bengal-hatted, turning up at the theatre for the free showing.

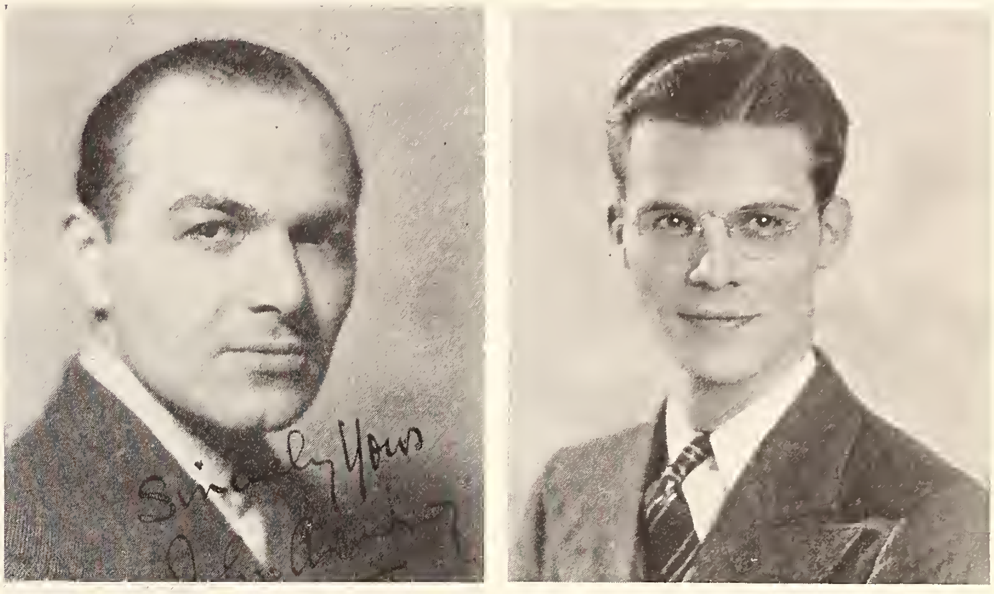
"HANDS ACROSS THE SEA"



To the Round Table gallery of Award winners, we are pleased to add the photos of John Armstrong and Chuck Shannon. Armstrong, advertising director, London Paramount Theatres, voted the Quigley June Silver for his "Bengal Lancer" campaign at the Carlton, is the first overseas theatre man to win one of the coveted plaques. Shannon, who took down the June Bronze on "Naughty Marietta," is manager of the neighborhood, subsequent-run Warner's Hollywood Theatre, in Pittsburgh.

JULY DEADLINE AND JULY JUDGES

Midnight of Monday, August 5th, has been determined as the deadline for the Quigley July Award entries. Managers are again reminded that campaigns must be at Committee Headquarters, 1790 Broadway, New York, by that time.

The following have been selected to act as judges: Neil F. Agnew, Paramount Pictures Corp., Edward A. Finney, Republic Pictures Corp., and Louis Frisch, Randforce Circuit. Decisions will be announced in the issue of August 17th.

Baker Offers West Trophy On "Goin' to Town" Race

With the simultaneous opening of a local race track and "Goin' to Town" at the Newman in Kansas City, George Baker arranged for the presentation of an appropriately inscribed trophy in the Mae West-Newman Theatre handicap. Publicity stories broke sports pages, all ads for the inaugural program carried plug of the featured race and trophy was on display at the judges stand. Radio transcriptions of hit tunes from picture were played at track before race.

Bulletins were planted in golf clubs, restaurant menus carried copy and imprinted pay envelopes used by downtown stores. As part of his advance on the picture, attractive lobby setpiece was constructed (see photo) carrying enlarged photo of Mae. As a further attention-getter reproducer attached to box office played hit tunes.

"Y" Helps Pet Parade On Grove's Date

The "Y" tied in with H. D. Grove's "Sequoia" date at the Fort Theatre, Rock Island, Ill., putting on their annual pet parade. Boys carrying banners marched to theatre with their pets, but Herb doesn't tell us whether he provided parking space for the animals, which consisted of mice, dogs, cats, birds and snakes. (See photo.)

Invitations were extended to educators and rod and reel clubs to attend private showing, and newspaper tied in with contest for stories on acts of courage performed by animals, theatre offering tickets for best entries.

Police Cooperate With Newkirk on "Reckless"

When J. G. Newkirk, Loew's Granada, Cleveland, played "Reckless" he contacted the Chief of Police and sold him on putting aside that week for a safety drive. Policemen distributed the stop-go pamphlets and watched for careful drivers, awarding them guest tickets. Newspapers carried page one stories on safety week, mentioning picture.

Ice cream company tied in with elaborate window displays and distributed photos of Jean Harlow to all patrons, as did five and ten, which also featured song hits at their music counter.

Identify the "G Men" and Get a Buck, Says Morris

With the merchants coming through with a co-op page on "G-Men" for S. L. Morris, Colonia Theatre, Norwich, N. Y., ads ran in paper offering one dollar to those identifying the "G-Men" who, wearing carnations, visited the various cooperating stores. The first person in each store who identified the dick and made a purchase there was entitled to the money.

Programs and heralds plugged the gag, and handbills were distributed by merchants and placed in all outgoing packages. "Watch for the G-Men" window cards were placed in all participating stores.

Phillips Promotes Heralds

Through the cooperation of local creamery, who paid for printing of heralds in exchange for credit line on them, Ralph E. Phillips, State Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D., put over a contest on "West Point" for which ducats were awarded those identifying on the throwaways certain air insignia, naming missing parts of planes and coloring parade of cadets. Heralds were distributed house to house and by merchant.

Store Ties In With Novak On Temple Dress Parade

Leading department store in Winnipeg, Canada, tied in with Bill Novak's "Little Colonel" date at the Gaiety, putting on a Shirley Temple dress fashion parade of kiddies with star dolls presented to the best models. Accompanying photo shows some of the contestants. Parade was followed by Shirley Temple birthday party, which was paid for by nominal admission charge by store to those attending fashion show. All received starlet photos and store devoted windows to dress displays.

Laundry tie-in brought a Temple shirtboard coloring contest with cash and ticket prizes awarded winners. Drivers in delivering laundry bundles plugged the contest. Jeweler tied in with display of the Shirley locket, book stores devoted windows to book displays and photos of the starlet.

Evens Goes Spook On "Vampire"

Folks out in St. Louis recently were "dared" by Manager Chic Evans and J. F. Harris to attend one of those midnight spook screenings on "Mark of the Vampire." Invites were passed out to department store gals, drug clerks, beauty parlor operators and others coming in contact with the buying public.

Theatre was in complete darkness, house staff in skeleton costumes, weird sound effects were employed, and a "skuh-reeming" good time was reported by all.

Schwartz Also Birthdays Parents

There's no kid like an old kid, and working on that premise, as a further good-will builder, Al Schwartz, managing director of the Fountain Square, Granada and Sanders Theatres in Indianapolis, Ind., has his kids register the name and birthdate of their parents, theatre management in turn sends greeting card jointly from staff and child with theatre ticket enclosed. Al also has secured some inexpensive small loving cups, which are presented to each child making school honor rolls.

Houps "Nit Wits" Display

Ralph Houps, artist for Anna Bell Ward, Phoenix Amusement Company, Lexington, Ky., constructed an attractive lobby display for "Nit Wits" (see photo) in which flasher was used on title, cigar tip and Woolsey's eyes, all going on and off simultaneously. Ralph utilized his 24 sheets for the heads.

Boy Scouts Aid Harding On "Sequoia" Date

Lyle Harding, Warners Regent, in Pittsburgh, distributed circulars to Boy Scout headquarters, one side of herald containing "Sequoia" copy and the other room for twelve names and addresses. For the first fifty circulars presented to theatre with names and addresses of Boy Scouts, tickets were awarded.

Through contact with local church, official bulletin contained picture plug and tieup with five and ten brought large aquarium lobby display of rare fish, in exchange for small credit card. Front display consisted of deer heads, cage with rabbits and large cutouts of Jean Parker.

Baltimore Members Welcome Chairman

It was warm in Baltimore but no warner than the hospitality showered there upon your venerable Chairman, who last weekend skipped down to the Maryland metropolis to visit with local Round Tablers.

We were "keyed-to-the-city" by amiable Bill Saxon, Loew's Theatres City Manager who with his charming wife introduced us to the justly famed Chesapeake Bay seafood and other nourishment befitting the weather. Thus ably sustained we ventured forth with Billy to visit some of the members.

Met up with Fred Greenway, manager of the Century, and then upstairs to the Valencia, the theatre above and uniquely in the same building, where Manager Joe Kavanaugh holds forth. Then a trip out North Avenue way to greet Manager Charlie McLeary, at Loew's Parkway and his assistant, Jack Fox. Herb Morgan, demon Loew city publicist and recent Quigley Award winner, was up at Cape Cod vacationing.

The next round of visits found us at lunch with fast-stepping Lou Rome, General Manager, Associated Theatres, and Bob Kanter, of his executive staff, both giving us a lot of information regarding the circuit publicity operations. Then up to the Warner Stanley, where George Browning was holding down the fort in the absence of weekending Rod Collier, and after a pleasant visit with George, across the street to the Little Theatre, to greet Herman Weinberg and his brother Maxwell.

Article Arouses Discussion

In course of conversation we learned that Herman's recent Round Table article on "The Fallacy of the Art Theatre" brought forth immediate repercussions from the other side where it was reprinted and discussed in the cinema magazine published by the motion picture department of the League of Nations.

A stop next at the Boulevard Theatre, to say hello to Frank Durkee, head of the Durkee Enterprises; to Chas. E. Nolte, general manager, and his son, H. Vernon Nolte, manager of the Boulevard. And then to meet the Fields, Joe, Leo and Harry, operating the Rivoli, Embassy and Casino.

High-powered Ted Routson, at the Hippodrome, was our next port of call, and before calling it a weekend stopped off at the Lord Baltimore and the Capitol, where we found Manager E. H. Kimpel and E. H., Junior, Associated circuit booker. Across town to the Broadway to visit with Lee Back and then to the New York train, where your weary narrator relaxed gratefully as he reviewed his pleasant and somewhat hectic visit.—A-MIKE.

Arm of Law Atop Marquee Sells Sweeney's "G Men"

Special front was constructed by Wayne Sweeney, Roxy, La Porte, Ind., on "G-Men" with long arm extended over marquee holding gun. Arm moved up and down, and blinker lights in side panels on mask heads completed the effect.

Sidewalks were stenciled with "the G-Men are coming," special preview was held for police officers and Brisbane's editorial comments on justice were carried in ads.

WHAT OTHERS HAVE TO SAY

More opinions on Floyd Bell's article in June 22 issue in which he placed the blame for tieup flops upon the theatreman, are still being heard and the following are opinions from Frank Boucher and John McManus. Evidently, Boucher does not agree with the Bell findings at all. Other expressions from members appeared in the July 6 issue. A-MIKE.

BELIEVES TIEUPS SHOULD NOT FLOP

I have read with great interest Floyd Bell's article on "Why Tieups Flop," and the article really amuses me, for I cannot imagine a personality in our business of Bell's standing and reputation making such an apparently ridiculous statement that "tieups are made merely to impress bosses." That may be true of the tieups made by Bell while at the Metropolitan, Boston, but I am sure that it is not true for the thousands of other showmen throughout the country who have arranged such tieups in the past—and will no doubt continue to arrange same in the future—despite Bell's article.

I have never allowed any manager under my supervision to make tieups merely for the sake of such tieups—and in all my own years of experience in managing a theatre I have never pursued such a course. I think you will agree with me when I say that I have had more tieups, both local and national, for my towns than any other manager—all with great success to the merchant and to ourselves. There has never been a merchant that I, or any of my managers, have ever had a tieup with that we could not go back to for future tieups and that was only because the first tieup was properly handled to his satisfaction and to ours.

I think that in a good many cases tieups are sometimes too hurriedly arranged—without thought of benefits to the merchant or to the theatre—and sometimes without any direct connection with the picture.

I believe the majority of us, located in perhaps smaller towns than our good friend Bell, have more consideration for our fellow merchants. We have the thought in mind of building good will for our theatre and for ourselves.

Looks Out for Merchant

That is why we, in the hinterlands, take more care in making tieups. We plan them far enough in advance, we make sure they tie in directly with a certain picture. We make certain that the merchant derives as much benefit as we do; we do not make promises we cannot carry out and when we do make any promises they are carreid out to the letter.

I will match tieup for tieup with Bell on any picture with satisfactory results to both parties concerned, the theatre and the merchant.

Let's canvass the Club and prove to Bell that the percentage of successful tieups are way in the majority, because all Round Tablers feel the same as I do about tieups—give the other fellow a break.—Frank Boucher, Paramount Theatre, Lynchburg, Va.

PSEUDO PUBLICISTS BLAMED FOR FLOPS

Theatre publicity being an intangible material often suffers glaring abuses, through untrained men. Bell's article a lesson to every theatre man and publicist who will read and accept it.

Field publicity men the great error. Being human, covering a large territory, getting into a town or city infrequently all lead to a shabby character in their work. Theatre men should, whenever possible, go along with a strange man, covering the contacts, and seeing that whatever is agreed upon is done completely. The reason for this being, the city, or town is yours, the man sent in is a stranger, he does not live with the people contacted, but you do; therefore with you along, you intelligently cannot create any bad-blood, and two heads are better than one.

Make Plan Fit Problem

My findings are, you must do just what you agree to do; otherwise you shall not be able to go back. You must use intelligence in the time, manner and presentation you offer any prospective. Making this clearer, do not go when he is busy. Flatter him, asking his opinion, and if possible in all matters agree with him; this will automatically lift you up in his estimation, and the road will be that much easier.

Have some reason for taking up his time, offer him something, have it in your mind so clearly or better still a rough sketch of the plan. And, also change this most readily to suit the man's particular problems.

Never Agrees to Lobby Displays

My opinion is, that the position of publicizing is one of the highest sales positions in the work today. You cannot fail all the time if you will first please the man contacted, deliver results to his store or department and acquit yourself with a brevity which will give you an entree again at any time. Remember, sell yourself, personal contact well done is better than all the printed copy in the plants, but, regretfully poorly done it becomes a liability, so study your man, his problems, and have in his mind this thought: this chap is a help. I have never agreed to any lobby displays. I agree with Bell, the merchant who wishes same is a conniver, and sooner or later the breach will come. My plan is, I sincerely believe a tie-up such as I at any time will work on, will, if followed, assist any contact, for is our business not one of the most widely discussed topics of the day, then how can a store but benefit through a tie-up with a glamorous star?—John McManus, Loew's Midland, Kansas City, Mo.

Segall's "Wanted" Cards

On "McFadden's Flats," I. J. Segall, at the Rivoli in Philadelphia, planted tack cards all over town with the word "wanted" at the top followed by "534 carpenters, 323 bricklayers and 219 plasterers at the Rivoli to see how McFadden's Flats were built on a million laffs."

YOU ARE INVITED TO JOIN UP

FRED R. FISHER
holds down the managerial reins of the Metropolitan Theatre in Winnipeg, Canada, having originally started his own theatres, one at Portage La Prairee, Manitoba, and the other at Regina, he finally gave them up and for the past six years has been managing his present house. Frank has worked for the Morton Circuit and Famous Players.

is the publicity director of Loew's State, Newark, New Jersey, having started in show business as a runner in the home office. Later he was promoted to the publicity department, and after that handled the vaudeville department. Al was then sent to Jersey City to take charge of publicity and then on to his present assignment at the State.

who manages the Coliseum Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., is another new member to join us from close by and we extend the same invitation to him that we did to all members, to drop in to see us whenever you are in the neighborhood of 1790. How about your next day off, Mack?

sends in his application blank from Toronto, Canada, where he is managing the Roxy Theatre. If you've followed our pages closely, Lou, you know how active our members from Toronto are, so we're hoping we'll have another active one to brag about from your fair city, and look forward to hearing from you.

has grown up in the business, his parents owning a house and Bill acted as ushers, doorman, etc., etc., learning every angle of the business until today he is owner-manager of the Lincoln Theatre out in Rock Island, Ill. Bill says he remembers the good old silent days and maybe we could wheedle an article out of him on showbusiness in general.

manages the Cameo Theatre in Bristol, Conn., which isn't so terribly far from Club headquarters. What with vacations on us, what's chances of you dropping into the office to get better acquainted, Dennis, and we promise if we're up your way we will stop at the theatre.

is out in Youngstown, Ohio, managing the Astor Theatre. Says he started in showbusiness at the tender age of eleven. About twenty years ago he ushered for his dad at the Market Street Theatre, which he later managed, wiring it for sound and changing the name to the Astor. This house was the first subsequent run to install sound. Later El spent two seasons on the road with his own company and then returned to his first love.

DIRECTED BY MERVYN LE ROY

Title was featured in above shot of the New York Strand front on "Oil for the Lamps of China" with the three words 'Oil for the' built up eight inches and faced in muslin painted in light yellow transparent colors. Remaining letters in title were covered similarly but painted in orange. Lamps were set in all letters for illumination.

Background was in two shades of green coming in rays from the plaque holding the clinch of O'Brien and Hutchinson. This panel was in relief, six inches from the background. Chinese buildings were set twelve inches off the base, with a row of lights masqued behind and flashed on and off. Photographic enlargements were used on the head, stars' names and incidental copy in raised letters.

Front was designed and executed by Sid Nagler as part of campaign put on by Zeb Epstin, manager, and Irving Windisch, publicity director.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Running times are those supplied by the companies. Asterisk indicates running time as made known by West Coast studio before announcement by home office in New York. Variations also may be due to local censorship deletions. Dates are 1934, unless otherwise specified. Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers.

"Grand, heart-stirring... fine, unashamed sentiment, gusty comedy, homely reality and slap-bang action, all geared for the greatest amount of entertainment for the greatest number of folk and a sure sock at the box-office! . . . Terrific suspense build-up. Cagney has never had a better role. Pat O'Brien gives one of his top performances ...Mary Gordon will probably start an Irish mother screen cycle. Olivia de Havilland . . . unquestionably is going places. Lloyd Bacon has done a grand job of direction."

"Here is one to raise the roof with audience mirth. Comedy and sentimentality mingle for a wild Irish hit. Mary Gordon scores as the waddling, sweet, peppery mother . . . Allen Jenkins draws howls as a dim wit fighter who starts to slug every time he hears the bell. McHugh causes three tidal waves of laughter. Olivia de Havilland looks like a coming bet . . . Sure box-office material emphasized for laughter and sentiment by Director Lloyd Bacon. You can go the limit on this. It should keep 'em howling."

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

Vol. 120, No. 4 July 27, 1935

"A MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM"

MANY a year after Professor Langley's dreamcraft to take man into the air was built, after the old professor had been gathered to his fathers, not quite a success in aviation, Mr. Glenn Curtiss put a new motor in the device and took it into the air, a success.

In somewhat analogous fashion it seems that Warner Brothers have today put a breath of new life into the classic dramatic fantasy, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which flowered in the mind of William Shakespeare in the remote year of 1595.

There is promise of exciting adventure in the impingement of the new technology of the motion picture upon the time hallowed Shakespearean masterpiece and the creative skill of the world famous Dr. Max Reinhardt.

A re-reading of the lines of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" will bring to any picture-minded person a realization that after all, the screen, with its infinite elasticity and capacity of defying the limitations of the stage, and with that inexplicable glamouring quality of the camera, is a better instrument for the telling of the tale than Shakespeare had.

There is in fact within the production itself a gay burlesque of the dramatic technique of the sixteenth century, sufficient to reveal, caricature fashion, what the stage was like in 1595—sufficient to show that Warners have put in the hands of Dr. Reinhardt a better tool than Shakespeare had.

It may be promised, too, that there presently will be revealed upon the screen a vastly better performance of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" than Shakespeare ever saw — his dream revealed to human vision for the first time—a work of art three and a half centuries in the making and completed only yesterday in Hollywood.

TURKEY, it seems, does not like the prospect that M-G-M is to make a screen version of "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh," the novel by Mr. Franz Werfel which so considerably and dramatically concerned itself with the subject of the treatment of the Armenians by the Turks. The American picture is being rapidly reduced to the necessity of selecting villains and bearers of unpleasant roles solely among our own nationals. What if the Americans should not happen to like it, either?

MR. JOHN HAY WHITNEY—or perhaps it is just his publicity department—has been asking critics across the land if "Hamlet" should be made in color, also if it should be made at all. Personally, we think the cause of color would be helped more by making a good western. "Hamlet" has been dead quite a while.

THE MATURE CHAPLIN

THE growing up of Mr. Charles Chaplin, who evolved on the screen from a knock-about comedian of English music hall calibre into unparalleled stardom and thence into a philosopher, is one of the most significant personal stories of the motion picture.

It is currently announced that the title of his long contemplated picture known in Hollywood as Production No. 5, to be released in October, will be "Charlie Chaplin in Modern Times." The title is indicative of Mr. Chaplin's introspective approach, and mayhap his measure of himself and his career. This is probably the first occasion on which a star's name has been made a part of a title—and there is to be sure only one Chaplin. His work these many years has been a sort of amplification, with variations, of his primary theme of the triumph of the boob, the pathetic victories of patient inconsequence.

Because Mr. Chaplin has been so much a definition and personification of a quality of social attitude, and since he has been long meditating, and mayhap mellowing, in his reflections on Life and the Times, there will be a special challenge to his considerable audience among the cognoscenti in this title, and it is to be hoped in the picture, too.

Mr. Chaplin is exceedingly aware of himself. Not so long ago he received a proposal from a lavish radio advertiser to go on the air in a campaign addressed at children. He waved it away with the quoted observation: "You are thinking about another generation."

A vast curiosity will await his new expression.

IT'S A SYSTEM

JUST to picture his persistence, they used to tell a story on William Fox. As the yarn went, he was on the golf course with an instructor. He sliced into the rough, and thereupon picked up the ball and carried it to a favorable spot on the fairway.

"You can't do that, Mr. Fox—it's against the rules," the professional cried out.

"Against the rules?" returned the player. "Well, I do it anyway—and you can sue me."

It's an old bit of fiction, but it so reminds one of the way the New Dealers operate.

Of course Mr. Fox became a good golfer—hence the parallel ends about there.

Our contemporary, Motion Picture Daily, records in bold-faced type that Mr. S. Charles Einfeld, impelled by current interest, is "thigh-deep in Shakespeare and ideas." We consider the term evasive.

This Week

MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S NEWS SUMMARY COVERING THE SCREEN WORLD

Selecting Audiences

The exhibitor who overlooks the special audience groups in planning his campaigns is depriving himself of much patronage, declare public relations experts who advocate direct exploitation apart from the usual channels. These classes, they say, must be sought out and made aware whenever there is product on exhibition that they have been demanding.

RKO, Paramount, Warner, MGM, Universal, United Artists and Republic are conducting specialized campaigns. RKO has contacted thousands of communtiy groups, educational and religious leaders and others on 11 pictures on its 1934-35 release list.

The reasons for the campaigns, both national and local, and their effect at the box office are detailed on page 13.

NRA Legacy

Officially laid to rest this week, the Code Authority of the Motion Picture Industry leaves a legacy—the Los Angeles clearance and zoning schedule and the general provisions therein which were to have been incorporated in other key city plans awaiting approval when the U. S. Supreme Court brought the activity to an end.

Retiring Code Authority members consider the general provisions as worthy of attention when exhibitors in a few months again find it necessary to set up clearance and zoning.

The provisions, which West Coast exhibition factors, both circuit and independent, are retaining, can be considered as a foundation upon which local interests in any territory can erect an equitable workable clearance and zoning structure, in the opinion of the retiring Code Authority.

While the clearance and zoning perennial issue is dormant at the moment because territories are following precedents laid down by local boards, the Code Authority and established custom, there exist many problems which require attention, particularly in Kansas City and New Orleans.

A digest of the "model" general provisions, together with the national picture, is found on page 15, and the complete text of the provisions starts on page 16.

Jersey City Arises

Jersey City folk have turned to swatting distribution policies instead of mosquitoes, now that the Jersey Journal, of which A. D. Mackie is dramatic editor, is making the populace first-run conscious.

The city "desires to get out of the 'hick' class when it comes to presenting films," says a letter sent to the film companies, and "feels that it is the only city of its size (300,000) in the United States which is compelled to show 'second run' features.

First to endorse the movement was George P. Skouras, who with his brothers Spyros and Charles Skouras is operating the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses as well as theatres of their own.

Mr. Skouras said he had been fighting for this privilege since he took charge of the State theatre in Jersey City. Story is on page 43.

Spoor Emerges

George K. Spoor, who 40 years ago made his first appearance on the scene cinematic when he financed the projection device of Edwin Hill Amet, and went on with G. M. Anderson to form Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, is planning to return to production and exhibition.

According to announcement by Edward H. Barron, attorney for the Spoor family in Chicago, a new producing and exhibiting company will open negotiations in a few weeks for long-term leases of key theatres in six large cities.

In these theatres will be shown productions to be made under Mr. Spoor's supervision, employing his large film—"third dimension" process, a Spoor projector and his patented sound board. The story appears on page 14.

Again, "Nell Gwyn"

From time to time during the past year British newspapers, magazines and the London trade press have become exceedingly agitated over the American Production Code Administration having laid profane hand on the British picture, "Nell Gwyn." The incident, seemingly, only missed becoming subject for a debate in Parliament by a narrow margin. The PCA, it appears, thought the picture could take to advantage a little cleaning up in spots.

Hence, quite interesting is the information at hand from the censorship authorities of the Province of Ontario, Canada, which advises that "Nell Gwyn" has been rejected in toto. Reason: "While admitting the historical accuracy of this picture, the evidence is clearly demonstrated that King Charles II was already supporting one mistress at the time he commenced to support Nell Gwyn, which renders this picture unsuitable for Ontario."

The Costly Law

Leading corporation lawyers, receivers and trustees and others face the prospect that their 51 specific claims aggregating $3,222,315 for services in connection with the bankruptcy and reorganization of Paramount Publix Corporation, will be sharply pared.

That impression was left by Judge Alfred C. Coxe in the U. S. district court in New York last week as he pointedly questioned attorneys who pleaded fairness and reasonableness of their claims. The court commented many requests were high and others did not seem justified.

Thus encouraged, the opposition, in the person of former Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher, special counsel for Paramount, was prepared at the resumed hearing Thursday to challenge many of the applications and ask that some be disallowed entirely. The account of the court hearing on claims is on page 39.

Paramount Earnings

Evidence that Paramount is responding to reorganization doctoring and that the company is headed for a substantial profit this year is seen in net earnings of $2,411,414 for the first quarter of 1935, as reported to the U. S. district court by counsel for the trustees.

This compares with a net of $5,469,512 for 1934, $5,076,317 for 1933 and a loss of $19,945,569 in 1932. Cash on hand June 22 was in excess of $20,000,000. Story and table on pages 41 and 42.

Collection Method

The distributors in Great Britain, to close all loopholes against sidestepping of full accounting by exhibitors under percentage showings, have just issued a warning that "removal from the barred list (for violations) is not a necessary consequence of a change of proprietorship."

The Kinematographs Renters' Society pointed out that cases have arisen in which "barred" halls have changed hands, and so the Society thus advises exhibitors intending to purchase theatres to make certain that the owner has a clean slate.

The Society "bars from future trading" any individuals making false returns or retaining a six-day booking for Sunday. The story is told on page 62.

Zanuck at Helm

With a new trade name, Twentieth Century-Fox, production of that company moved in expected fashion this week under the supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, following last week's resignation of Winfield Sheehan. Mr. Zanuck and Joseph M. Schenck, board chairman, took over complete charge of production.

Characteristically, Mr. Zanuck went into immediate production action, contracting players and writers, bringing his production staff from Twentieth Century to the Fox lot and planning to devote his attention to the schedule as a whole. See page 37.

Stage Not Dead

The legitimate theatre is not dead, in the opinion of Brock Pemberton, a leading New York stage producer, in an interview with Burns Mantle, dramatic critic of the New York Daily News last week.

"In spite of the ululations of countless calamity howlers, the theatre is not dead," said Mr. Pemberton. "Its economic pains prostrated it for a few years, but it is on the road to recovery. The vitality of the past two seasons and the promise of even greater vigor the coming year should confound its detractors into silence. It is my observation that the only thing dead in the theatre is the individual who proclaims it so. If I were dictator, those who, departing to the cinema or some other field, maligned the theatre, would never be allowed to return."

In Mr. Pemberton's opinion the theatre "will be allowed to stage its comeback" without the aid of the government. He declared that little has been done toward government aid to date despite a sympathy and willingness to help. He pointed out that work relief on a broader scale and a charter for a national theatre are the only forward steps thus far undertaken by the government. He declared that the national theatre probably will mean nothing to the stage.

Hal Horne Resigns

Hal Horne, for several years director of advertising and publicity for United Artists, announced his resignation on Wednesday. The announcement said "he will immediately organize and head a new advertising and publicity company in New York."

Monroe W. Greenthal, exploitation manager with United Artists since 1931, will succeed Mr. Horne, it is understood.

Mr. Horne went to United Artists after serving as general manager of Far West Theatres, Los Angeles, before which he was a production executive with Mayflower Productions and other companies.

One of Mr. Horne's best known campaigns was one which introduced "Palooka," for which he was voted the 1934 American Spectator award for the best advertising in any field.

Group Monopoly

A sensational declaration was made this week at Toronto, when, in summing up the evidence at the inquiry into the activities of the Canadian Performing Rights Society at the closing session before Judge James Parker, Joseph Sedgwick of the Ontario Auditor-General's department charged the society with being a combination in restraint of trade.

He argued that the evidence obtained by the federal commission was sufficient to bring the organization within the scope of the Combines Investigation Act for legal prosecution.

NRA Refund

Its affairs liquidated, the Code Authority of the Motion Picture Industry announced this week that a surplus of almost $24,000 remaining in its treasury will be returned to exhibitors and producer-distributors, in the ratio in which assessments were paid.

Contributions from code members since the start of operations on December 7, 1933, amounted to $341,880.37. Close to 9,000 exhibitors paid assessments the first year.

Records of the Code Authority and of local administrations may be requested by the new NRA in an expected survey of the industry which will go back to its very inception and cover its development, introduction of new processes, plant obsolescence, distribution and other problems. See page 47.

On 'Buying Audiences'

A policy under which an exhibitor actually "pays the public to come and view a motion picture program" which has cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to produce is nothing short of insane, writes William Hatch, publicity and art director of the Hayward theatre at Hayward, California, in an uncompromising attack upon giveaways.

"This giveaway creed may be the reason why showmanship is becoming a lost art," says Mr. Hatch. He blames the widespread prevalence of Bank Nights, Bargain Nights, Cash Nights, and What-Not Nights to shortsighted follow-the-leader exhibition. His comment appears on page 26.

Ad Code Echoes

The motion picture industry's Advertising Code seems to have been the forerunner to similar strivings in other business groups, for Paul E. Murphy, chairman of the sales promotion division of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, warns that legislative censorship of all advertising will be brought about by public pressure unless restraint is practised.

A national standard for censoring copy in all media is needed, said Mr. Murphy, the while praising the regulations of some of the leading newspapers barring advertising that is dishonest, misleading and in bad taste. See page 38.

Theatre Canvass

A second census of theatres, covering activities of the current year and providing data comparable with that obtained by the amusement census of 1933, will be undertaken by U. S. Census Bureau next January.

In the 1935 census, according to Bureau officials, information on every theatre will be sought, under schedules planned to reduce the possibility of error. The canvass will be made by relief roll workers under supervision of experienced Bureau men.

Flinn to Variety

John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the NRA Code Authority, will assume an executive editorial post on the weekly theatrical and radio publication, Variety, on August 1, it was announced Tuesday.

Mr. Flinn has had wide experience in executive positions in the industry over a period of years, most recently as executive secretary of the NRA Code Authority.

This Week in Pictures

COMEDIENNE. One of the best known in England, Cicely Courtneidge, of Gaumont-British, here for an American film debut in MGM's "A Perfect Gentleman."

ENTERTAINED. At a Metro studio luncheon recently was Governor Harry Nice of Maryland, by Louis B. Mayer (right) and Jeanette MacDonald, star, on a Coast visit by the governor.

DANCING. Jimmy Ormonde, signed by Educational to direct a new dancing group.

FUNSTERS. The story department of the Harman-Ising studio, producer of "Happy Harmonies," cartoon concoctions in animated color for MGM release. Standing at the head of the table are the bosses of the fun-makers, Hugh Harman and Rudolf Ising, both enjoying the joke.

PRESENTATION. From W. Hurworth (left), Paramount general sales manager in Australia, to Acting Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, Dr. Earle Page, of a print of King George's Jubilee Celebration.

HORSEMEN. Are Sol Lesser (center), producer, son Bud Lesser, 20, and young Bobby Breen, 8, Mr. Lesser's recently acquired child singing star, out for a morning canter on the ranch.

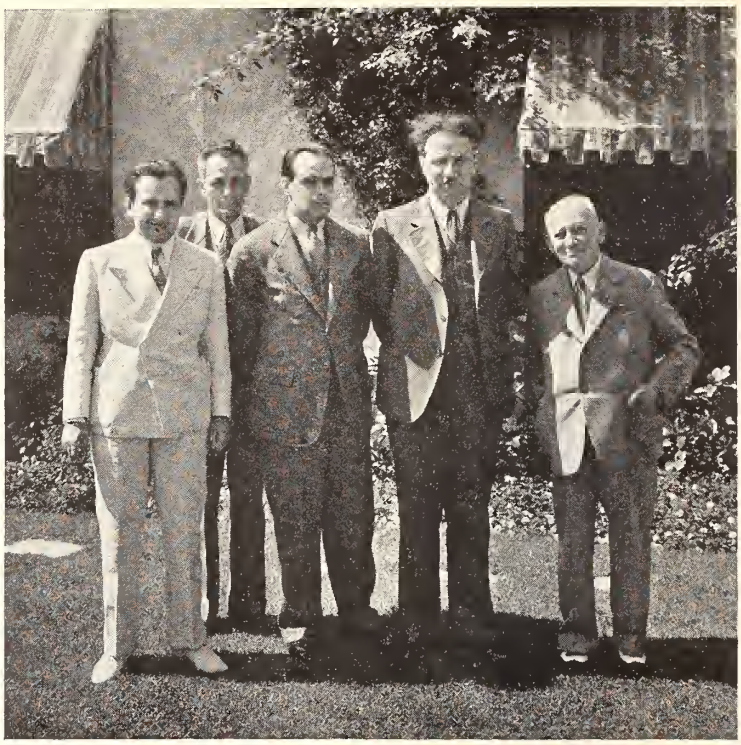
ABSENTEE. Sidney Fox, returning to the screen after an absence of more than a year, to appear in "Sweet Surrender," produced by Broadway Productions for Universal.

VOICE. Of Lorraine Bridges, Oklahoma girl, which was discovered, then signed by MGM.

AMBITION. About to be filled, as Ronald Colman discusses with director Jack Conway the role of Sydney Carton in the MGM-Selznick film of Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities."

DAUGHTER. Daddy is Jack Benny, of the radio and Metro's forthcoming "Broadway Melody of 1936," mother is also known as Mary Livingstone of the radio, and daughter is Joan Naomi, 11 months, taking a turn at the mike, as the parents look more than pleased and proud.

PLAYWRIGHT. Luigi Pirandello, Italian author and 1934 Nobel Prize winner in literature, visiting Radio City Music Hall on his arrival from abroad, en route to the Coast, where at least some of his noted works are to be adapted to the screen. He displayed a lively interest in the operation of the Music Hall.



VISITORS. At Universal City recently were the heads of the Soviet film industry on an inspection trip in this country. From the left: Carl Laemmle, Jr., A. Aberson, Amkino; Vladimir I. Virlinsky, Amkino president; Boris Z. Shumiatsky, head of Russian industry; Carl Laemmle, Universal president.

VETERAN. G. E. Battersby, paymaster of the Philadelphia zone for Warner, honored for 25 years of service, as zone circuit manager Ted Schlanger presents him with a gold watch. In the picture are: Lester Krieger, Skip Weshner, A. J. Vanni, Mr. Schlanger, Mr. Battersby, Herman Maier, Ellis Shipman, Leonard Schlesinger, Harry Goldberg, Lou Schwartz and Lou Brager. The "young" motion picture industry yet is able to boast of real veterans who have spent a quarter of a century and more in the service of the motion picture. Mr. Schlanger earlier had honored a Philadelphia theatre manager for his record in a general business drive.

CAMPAIGNS FOR SPECIAL AUDIENCES FOUND ROAD TO INCREASED PROFITS

Public Relations Experts of Distributors Say Millions in Revenue Await Exhibitors Tying In on Special Appeal Films

Millions in potential revenue are to be collected by exhibitors by carefully cultivating the patronage of elements in the community who demand socalled better films, and pictures of special appeal, in the opinion of some of the public relations experts in the industry who have observed box-office reaction to campaigns directed at these prospective theatregoers. It is emphasized that to make patrons out of these prospects the exhibitor must use advertising and publicity methods off the beaten path.

Many theatre men, say advertising promotion directors, fail to take into account that certain classes attend a film theatre only when there is a picture that interests them, and that these must be sought out and informed when there is on exhibition a picture to their liking.

Distributors Specialize Campaigns

Such distributors as Radio, Paramount, Warner, MGM, United Artists, Universal, Republic, are taking these factors into consideration when building campaigns on certain pictures, and where the product is found suitable for this sort of handling extraordinary methods are employed. One method commonly used is the School Study Guide. It is recognized that those who pick their entertainment with high discrimination are not susceptible to every-day campaigns. And it is emphasized by those who have charted the results of specially-directed advertising and publicity messages that they have proved good box-office.

There are, in fact, three tangible results cited:

1. Such campaigns develop a keener appreciation of the better motion pictures as a medium for entertainment and educational and cultural advancement—an appeal, incidentally, over which certain groups voice enthusiasm.

2. They enhance the institutional prestige of the screen.

3. They develop closer relations between the exhibitor and important community forces; they bring him in contact with special groups, all to the benefit of his goodwill and box-office.

The elements to which the exhibitor must direct his special campaign are the various social organizations and clubs, church leaders, schools and the like.

Warner has retained Dr. Richard Burton, literary authority, to contact special groups in a campaign on "A Midsummer Night's Dream." MGM has sent an elaborate booklet to 35,000 teachers, noting educational points in 1935-36 product.

In the home office of the RKO Distributing Corporation in New York is an index file of results on showings to which exhibitors have given the extra effort needed to bring the more discriminating into the theatre. A typical case is that of "The Little Minister," on which Frank Fielding, who contacts the different groups in the field, reports as follows:

BRONXVILLE, N. Y.: "Little Minister" grossed within 10 per cent of "Little Women" and "Roberta" and above all other films.

SUFFERN, N. Y.: The film grossed higher than all except "Little Women," which ran twice as long, despite snow blocked roads. The big draw primarily was due to high school interest aroused by an essay contest.

EAST ORANGE, N. J.: The head of the English department in the local high school arranged for whole classes to attend with no price cut. Gross was 20 per cent higher than "Little Women" and 225 per cent greater than the average special.

MORRISTOWN, N. J.: "Little Minister" played here four months after release and after all adjacent spots, instead of the usual protection because of delayed signing of contract. The theatre turned patrons away on Saturday matinee and had the largest gross of any RKO picture playing three days.

Mr. Fielding represents the company's New York exchange in working with local exhibitors on campaigns of this sort, following up with local groups in a more direct way than could be done through the contacts maintained nationally by RKO. That company has pioneered in public relations activities designed to benefit the box office, and for the last two years has maintained activity under the direction of Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager.

Called "Tremendous Force"

Creative campaigns of this nature are a "tremendous force" in obtaining support for fine pictures that otherwise would fail commercially, Mr. Bamberger said.

"The influence of public relations activities on the box office is one of those intangibles almost impossible to measure," he explained. "However, we can draw certain deductions from the figures of general motion picture attendance and from statistics on the total potential motion picture audience unemployed.

"In 1929 and 1930 it was generally conceded that the average weekly motion picture attendance in the United States approximated 115,000,000 people. In the two ensuing years that figure dropped to somewhere between 55,000,000 and 60,000,000. There is no reason to believe that this marked decrease in attendance was caused by any factor other than loss of employment, and the general depression.

"The American Federation of Labor says the amount of unemployment has remained almost constant since 1929. Motion picture attendance, in contrast, has made steady gains every year since 1931. It would be hazardous to guess whether the weekly attendance at the present time is 77,000,000 or 85,000,000.

"It is reasonable, I believe, to attempt to seek an explanation of this increase in theatre attendance, other than a return of part of the fan audience which unemployment and poverty took away from the theatres.

"What actually has happened is that the increase has come almost entirely from an element of the population which, up to 1931, had sought its entertainment elsewhere than at 'the movies.'

"Our function has been to reach the more cultured people who would appreciate fine entertainment, through channels other than those normally developed by our publicity and advertising departments. That we have somewhat succeeded in doing this is evident from the change in the character of mail we have received. It is not only that the suggestions sent in with regard to new productions ask for a higher type of drama, but criticism and appreciation alike evidence an interest in the treatment of story material, and in the direction.

Big Gains in Receipts Recorded After Directional Drives at Community Groups; School Study Guides Also a Factor

"Letters on pictures which have lent themselves to this type of treatment have been sent to the General Federation of Women's Clubs, alone representing 3,000,000 women in the United States; to the national Catholic, Protestant and Jewish organizations; to groups interested in child welfare, and so on.

Where Ordinary Advertising Fails

"The success of these campaigns depends largely on the tieup of the local theatre with the local branches of these organizations. The value of an endorsement we get from the national headquarters of the Boy Scouts of America, or Girl Scouts, the Junior League, YWCA or other typical groups depends on the extent to which the local exhibitor brings this endorsement to the attention of the local groups and gets their cooperation in word of mouth or other advertising. In turn, the extent to which local theatre men capitalize on their opportunity depends on the emphasis our publicity men and sales forces in the field place upon it."

"It has been found," continued Mr. Bamberger, "that many fail to react to the usual type of theatre advertising, especially since in so many instances the name of a book or play is changed and the title gives no inkling of the nature of the picture."

Many of the RKO branch managers follow through locally on what is started by the home office in the way of direct campaigns, Mr. Bamberger said. As examples he said that Fred McNamee in Philadelphia makes it a point to address the Women's Forum coincidentally with the release of a suitable picture, and that Jack Osserman in Chicago, Stan Jacques in Cincinnati and T. R. Thompson in Kansas City, among others, make special efforts to inform local groups.

School Study Guides Prepared

He said that M. A. Lightman of Malco Theatres in Memphis has been highly successful in this respect, working hand-in-glove with the Better Films Council, which represents 79 club groups, 11 Catholic schools, 14 private schools, the DAR and Catholic women's organizations. Monthly approved film lists are posted in the schools and libraries, and the Council is so organized that within a few hours it can reach 10,000 Memphis homes by means of a chain telephone system, if prompt action in support of a showing is needed.

Indicative of RKO's special campaigns is that 615,000 bulletins have been sent out to various groups and community leaders on 11 selected pictures on the 1934-35 release schedule, averaging 12,000 letters a week on special letter heads. Signed comments by preview groups or motion picture chairmen usually are attached. The size and direction of the campaigns vary with the picture, depending on whether it is a family type program, educational, historical and so on. School study guides prepared by the National Education Association have been distributed through high school English departments on various pictures.

SPOOR TO RETURN TO PRODUCTION AND EXHIBITION WITH OWN CIRCUIT

Founder of Essanay Will Supervise Pictures Using 70mm. "Third Dimension" Process and Other Spoor Patents

New Company Will Negotiate for Leases of Key Theatres in Six Large Cities as Starter, Says Attorney

George K. Spoor, who four decades ago stepped gingerly into the business when he financed—for $65—the launching of a newfangled contraption for projecting motion pictures and went on to the heights and to millions with Essanay, thence into Chicago lake shore real estate, is returning to exhibition and production.

Within a few weeks a new producing and exhibiting company will open negotiations for long-term leases of key theatres in six large cities, according to announcement.

In these cities will be shown productions made under Mr. Spoor's supervision and employing several patent features developed in the Spoor laboratories in Chicago but which are said to have been rejected by the large producers because of the cost that would have been entailed in substitution of new equipment.

The pictures will be made on large size film, a part of the "third dimension" process which Mr. Spoor has been developing for a decade or so. They will be projected by Spoor's special projector and the sound will be thrown to the audience from Spoor's patented sound board.

The project was made known by Edward H. Barron, personal attorney for the Spoor family, in Chicago. Mr. Barron at the same time said he expected that a trust agreement which has controlled the major Spoor properties for the last three years would be concluded and dissolved in about six weeks.

In the past week the following "Legal Notice" has appeared in the trade press: "George K. Spoor, Chicago, Illinois, under date of November 1, 1932, conveyed all his real estate and personal property to Albert W. Malone, Trustee. Any negotiations for the acquisition of stories, plays or any of said conveyed property must, therefore, be with or through said Trustee."—The notice carried the name of Lowell M. Birrell, Esq., as attorney for Mr. Malone.

"Friends of Mr. Spoor will be pleased to know that he is in better circumstances today than at any time in the last six years, and has associated with him in this new project some of the most able and influential men in the business," said Mr. Barron. He did not name Mr. Spoor's associates in the enterprise.

Placed Patents in Trusteeship

It was at the instance of the Continental Bank of Chicago and on the advice of friends, Mr. Barron said, that Mr. Spoor in 1932 had placed his patents and other properties, except such personal holdings as his home, bank account and personally owned effects, in a friendly trusteeship, with Mr. Malone, his one-time bookkeeper and certified public accountant, as the trustee. Mr. Barron estimated the assets at $3,500,000 and liabilities at $80,000.

"It was just too much for an individual to handle," said Attorney Barron. "There were accrued taxes on real estate and some foreclosure proceedings. John J. Berggren had an interest in the third dimension process which was not definite. J. F. Lindberg had a 25 per cent interest in the sound board. We let the State street leaseholds go and also the Fort Dearborn hotel. The major part of the realty holdings have been kept, however, and everything is just about straightened out. I expect that it will be wound up in from four to six weeks."

The sound board, Mr. Barron said, is a device to eliminate distortion by throwing the sound to the side and then the rear and thence back to the audience, instead of directly to the audience.

Cites Radio Parallel

A situation parallel to that which radio faced after it had been perfected today is being confronted by Mr. Spoor and his inventions, Mr. Barron said. Radio had to wait, he said, because the banks had millions invested in the phonograph business—hence the stop-gap introduction of the crystal set.

Application of the Spoor patents, he pointed out, would require an expenditure of millions in new equipment, from the camera through to the projector, as well as expensive remodeling or abandonment of hundreds of theatres with proscenium arches too small to accommodate the larger screen.

Mr. Barron said that in England there is more of a possibility of immediate utilization of the patents and that Mr. Spoor could get between eight and ten millions outright, but that he believes a greater return is to be had eventually in the United States, as he has patent protection meanwhile in England, France and Germany.

Mr. Spoor's original plan was to establish his special theatres in twenty cities, but on protests from production and distribution companies he had decided to limit the initial activity to half a dozen cities, said the attorney. The new company is awaiting a charter and approval of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Entered Business in 1895

It was in about 1895 that George K. Spoor first ventured into the motion picture business. He was operating a one-night roadshow at the Opera House in Waukegan, Ill.—he had a newsstand and lunchroom at the Northwestern Station in Chicago—when a certain Edwin Hill Amet came to the ticket window, in search of $65 to finance a projection machine he was inventing. Out of his decision that night Mr. Spoor went on to an accumulation of seven to ten million dollars. From his exhibition of pictures with the Magniscope came contact with George Kleine and William N. Selig,—and the birth of Essanay.

From Vitagraph had gone G. M. Anderson, to join Colonel Selig. Mr. Spoor had the Kinodrome Circuit, showing motion pictures in Orpheum vaudeville theatres, and became proprietor of the National Film Renting Company in Chicago. Anderson and Spoor organized Essanay Film Manufacturing Company in February of 1907 and started production. There followed a decade of warfare, with Spoor, Kleine and Selig standing shoulder to shoulder, with Edison, in defending the Patents Company, formed in the winter of 1908-09. Then William Swanson, Chicago exchangeman, and Carl Laemmle precipitated the rebellion that changed the entire scene.

The Chaplin Episode

On October 5, 1910, came announcement of The American Film Manufacturing Company, with 20 production experts, all called "formerly of Essanay." An injunction was obtained by Mr. Spoor to stop further raiding. Essanay took Charles Chaplin away from Keystone, only to lose him later to Mutual. Now Essanay began to fade. Mr. Spoor bought out Anderson, but an ill-fated attempt of the KESE combination—Kleine, Edison, Spoor and Essanay—to build up Max Linder to compensate for the loss of Chaplin, met its end with the suicide of Linder in 1925. However, Mr. Spoor had made his millions, which he placed in Chicago real estate.

Mr. Spoor continued with his interest in inventions in the field of the motion picture, however. One outstanding effort was with the socalled "third dimension" pictures, entailing use of 70 millimeter film. In 1929 at RCA-Victor's Gramercy studio, with the Spoor-Berggren process was made a full-length feature, "Danger Lights," starring the late Louis Wolheim. The project, and the experimental production, immediately ran into the obstacle of costs that would have been necessitated in making over studio and theatre equipment. Now Mr. Spoor hopes to solve that problem with a circuit of his own.

No Cultural Depression, Declares David Sarnoff

"There is no cultural depression in America," declared David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, in an address at Atlantic City last week to RCA Victor distributors, in which he discussed the increasing demand for those devices which contribute to cultural progress.

"Great economic upheavals may actually stimulate cultural progress," he said. "This has happened in America." He noted the marked advances in the appreciation of music in the past five years as indicative of the nation's cultural growth. He called the radio a contributing influence.

Allied Regionals Planned

A series of regional meetings will be held by Allied States Association through New England, beginning August 4 at White River Junction, Vt. Nathan Yamins is expected to accompany the group of national officials on their trip through the territory.

LOS ANGELES CLEARANCE SCHEDULE OFFERED AS MODEL TO OTHER AREAS

Code Authority, Closing Its Books, Reports Plan Being Continued by Fox West Coast —Accepted by Independents

General provisions of the schedule of clearance and zoning for the Los Angeles exchange territory, which were to have been made a part of systems for other areas had not the supreme court invalidated the NRA, now are offered by members of the Code Authority, closing its books this week, as a model for sectors which may desire to draft clearance agreements. (Complete text of the general provisions of the Los Angeles schedule appears on the following pages).

The Authority regards the Los Angeles plan as the only tangible result of two years of striving toward self-regulation under a code of fair practice and of more than a year's actual effort toward evolving a set of clearance and zoning rules that would be equitable, workable and acceptable.

The Los Angeles schedule entailed a tremendous amount of work, and in its final form is the consummation of a long series of conferences harmonizing the ideas of conflicting local interests and conforming local recommendations with the thoughts of the Code Authority. Five drafts were prepared before one finally was approved by the national board, and that was revised by the Authority before it went into effect.

FWC Continues Plan

After an initial test of two months, the plan is being continued voluntarily by Fox West Coast with one or two exceptions, and it also is reported to be working out to the satisfaction of a majority of independents. By realigning availability, the schedule has had the effect of increasing admission scales to a level commensurate with draw possibilities, and hence has jumped theatre revenue to a point where many exhibitors are showing a profit for the first time in several years. This, in turn, it is reported in New York, has increased distributors' income by several hundred thousands of dollars for the year, through the higher rentals which the exhibitors are able to pay.

Many subsequent runs in the Los Angeles sector which charged an admission of 15 or 20 cents have increased the tariff to 40 cents, because the schedule drastically sets back low-price houses in product availability.

Besides Los Angeles, the schedule is for the territory comprising southern California, Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico, embracing 214 cities and towns and affecting 450 exhibitors.

Local Board Precedents Followed

Generally throughout the country, clearance and zoning prevails, as far as legally and practically possible, in accordance with the precedents established through decisions of the local boards in hearing individual complaints and the decisions and principles laid down by the Code Authority. The usual dominant values—such as admission price, class of theatre and locality—still control, and there are no limitations, with the single exception that the distributors are continuing the cardinal principle promulgated by the Code Authority—that clearance is governed by the exhibitor's ability to bargain for product. In other words, while availability may be regulated by the admission price, the clearance in individual zones is a matter of buying power.

While the national situation is reported tranquil and is expected to continue so for a few months, it is anticipated that clearance and zoning again will come to the fore as a controversial issue early next year when the large circuits begin to negotiate new season contracts. The amount of protection a distributor is willing to grant a dominant circuit usually has a definite bearing on product deals, and the circuits not infrequently use this point to play one distributor against another.

It is when exhibitors in the field begin to discuss the drafting of clearance and zoning plans that the general provisions in the Los Angeles document will prove their usefulness, believe members of the retired Code Authority.

General Provisions as Basis

Not all the general provisions may actually square with all local conditions, but the proponents believe they are broad enough and reasonable enough to cover practically all situations. They were designed as the foundation, and the local interests were to work from there.

It is provided that the run a theatre shall have is "solely a matter of negotiation" between the theatre and distributor. A "continued first-run" is defined as one that upon its closing in one theatre is without lapse of time continued in another theatre having the same admission scale, within the same city, town or zone. The clearance is figured from the end of the run in the theatre last exhibiting the picture.

As to clearance within a zone, any subsequent-run theatre is permitted seven days' clearance over the next subsequent-run in every competitive theatre within the same zone. To obtain this clearance, a theatre must complete the run within 14 days after availability or within 14 days of the first date of exhibition. If these conditions are not fulfilled, the seven-day period of clearance is shortened commensurately.

Competition Defined

All theatres within a subsequent-run zone are deemed competitive, except those specifically designated as non-competitive, and no distributor is entitled to grant any clearance over non-competitive theatres. No clearance is permitted for any theatre outside of a particular zone. Admission prices, for the purpose of the schedule, shall be the net charge, exclusive of taxes or other fees.

Theatres are classified according to admission price, and it is provided that a theatre charging 40 cents or more as evening adult admission and not less than 30 cents matinee adult admission, is classified as a "forty cent or more theatre." Similar definitions range down to theatres charging less than 10 cents for anyone at any time, which are classified as "five cent theatres."

It is stipulated further that if a theatre lowers its price its classification shall be changed, even though lower admissions are practiced as a temporary measure, and its date of availability is set back for at least four weeks following the week in which the theatre's classification is placed in a lower bracket. In order to gain the benefits of a higher admission, the exhibitor must have the distributor's consent in writing to be placed in the higher category. However, the exhibitor is not prevented from increasing his price at his own will.

Admissions Reported Increased Under Plan with Exhibitors Showing Profit and Distributors Greater Rentals as Result

Can Purchase Any Run

Regardless of admission price, the exhibitor is given the right to purchase any run he may be able to buy in his zone, and the distributor is privileged to sell his product to any theatre for any run.

The general provisions conclude with a section specifying that nothing in the schedule shall be construed as obligating the distributor to have available a greater number of feature prints than was generally carried prior to adoption of the schedule, and that all dates of availability and their allocation to exhibitors remain at the discretion of distributors.

After a period of voluntary observance in principle by the exchanges during the time the schedule for Los Angeles was being drafted, the completed and approved plan legally went into effect May 15th. However, there was to be a 28-day interval before it would affect the first subsequent-runs, and the supreme court's NRA decision was handed down May 27, before the schedule could be practically enforced or officially published.

Made to Fit Code

The Los Angeles schedule was made to fit the NRA code, the Code Authority's rulings and the 12 principles enunciated by the Authority last September for guidance of local boards in the preparation of clearance and zoning rules. In a word, the schedule sets down for the first time all the procedure and decisions under the code as defined, refined and crystallized at the time the Blue Eagle was nullified.

The restrictions imposed by the Code Authority no longer hold, of course, including the one specifying that "the period of clearance shall not be affected by reason of any theatres using a double bill policy or stage shows." The distributors now can freely indulge in contractual clauses penalizing the showing of dual features, or anything else not specifically prohibited by law or court decisions.

As probably an afterthought to the general provisions, the Code Authority inserted a clause in the preface to the schedule to the effect that the local board should make such reasonable reduction of clearance as might be proper in the event of a reduction in admission prices by any first-run theatre.

This, it is generally conceded, would have solved the problem of low admission prices at first-runs as obtains in Kansas City and some other key cities. The Kansas City clearance and zoning board had approved this measure and asked the Code Authority to make it a part of the contemplated schedule for that territory.

After conferences with exhibitor factors in Kansas City and a survey of the theatre situation there, John C. Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority, reported to the board that the midwest center had one of the worst clearance and zoning situations in the country,

TEXT OF LOS ANGELES ZONING PLAN

GENERAL PROVISIONS

For the purpose of maintaining at all times a fair, just, reasonable and equitable schedule of Clearance and Zoning throughout the Los Angeles Exchange territory, the following general provisions shall be binding upon all distributors and exhibitors operating within the territory, and shall, unless otherwise expressly stated, govern the distribution, licensing for exhibition and exhibition of only feature length motion pictures:

Section 1. Effective Date of Schedule

(a) This schedule is hereby approved to become effective within such reasonable time as shall be fixed and published by the Local Clearance and Zoning Board for the Los Angeles territory.

(b) After such effective date, no feature motion picture shall be distributed, licensed for exhibition or exhibited within the Los Angeles Exchange territory, otherwise than in accordance with this Clearance and Zoning schedule.

Section 2. Definition of Terms

(a) The term "clearance," as used herein, shall be deemed to refer to that interval of time between the conclusion of the exhibition of a motion picture at a theatre licensed to exhibit such motion picture prior in time to its exhibition at another theatre or theatres and the commencement of exhibition at such other theatre or theatres.

(b) The term "zone," as used herein, shall be deemed to refer to any definite geographical area or areas embraced within the Los Angeles Exchange territory; and the area or areas of the various zones herein established are hereinafter defined, either by designating the name of a city or town or community, or by listing the theatre or theatres comprising the zone. Each theatre now operating within the Los Angeles Exchange territory and not specifically listed herein shall be deemed to be in that zone, as herein designated, comprising the area in which such theatre is situated.

(c) The terms "feature length motion picture," "feature picture," or "feature," as used herein, shall each be deemed to refer to any motion picture of a length, as nationally released, of thirty-five hundred (3,500) feet or more.

(d) The term "short subject," as used herein, shall be deemed to refer to any motion picture of a length, as nationally released, of less than thirty-five hundred (3,500) feet.

(e) The term "adult admission price," as used herein, shall be deemed to refer to any price charged at any time for the admission to any theatre of any person twelve (12) years of age or over.

(f) The term "evening," as used herein, shall be deemed to refer to that period of time commencing at the hour of 5 o'clock p. m. of any day and ending at the hour of 8 o'clock a. m. of the following day.

(g) The term "matinee," as used herein, shall be deemed to refer to that period of time commencing at the hour of 8 o'clock a. m. of any day and ending at the hour of 5 o'clock p. m. of such day.

(h) All other terms employed in this schedule and not elsewhere herein expressly defined, are used and intended to be understood and construed to have the meaning in which such terms are now commonly accepted and understood by motion picture producers, distributors, exhibitors and the trade generally.

Section 3. New Theatres

All existing theatres not now in operation, other than those of such theatres as are specifically listed herein, and all new theatres hereafter constructed, shall apply to the Local Clearance and Zoning Board for the Los Angeles Exchange territory for determination of proper zoning classification. Such application and prompt designation may be made at any time.

Section 4. Runs and Clearance

(a) The run which a theatre purchases from a distributor shall be designated in such theatre's license agreement and shall be solely a matter of negotiation between such theatre and such distributor.

(b) The number of days clearance between first run in any city and the subsequent run or runs shall be determined and regulated by this schedule.

Section 5. Continued First Runs

(a) A "continued first run" is hereby defined for all purposes of this schedule to be a run that starts in one theatre and upon the closing thereof in such theatre, is without lapse of time continued in another theatre operating under the same scale of admission prices as the prior theatre within the same city, town or zone.

(b) As to each picture which shall be exhibited on a "continued first run," pursuant to the provisions of this Section 5, clearance shall be dated from the termination of the exhibition thereof in the theatre last exhibiting such picture on such run; and such termination shall be deemed to be the "first run closing" of each such picture.

Section 6. Clearance within Zone

(a) Any theatre operating within any subsequent run zone established within the area of any city shall be permitted seven (7) days' clearance over the next subsequent run in every competitive theatre operating within the same zone. Any such theatre, in order to enjoy such seven (7) days' clearance must:

(1) Complete the run within fourteen (14) days after availability as determined by the annexed price of admission schedule, or

(2) Within fourteen (14) days of the first date of exhibition as such date is determined by the availability of the positive print pursuant to Section 12, of this schedule.

Where the run is not completed within fourteen days as above defined, (1) and (2), the seven (7) day period of clearance shall be shortened one (1) day for each day by which the completion of the run exceeds such fourteen (14) day period.

(b) All theatres within each subsequent run zone established within the area of any city, shall be deemed competitive for all purposes of this schedule, excepting those theatres specifically designated in this schedule as "non-competitive."

(c) All theatres within each subsequent run zone established within the area of any city, which have been determined by this Board, for all purposes of this schedule, to be non-competitive to one or more theatres within the same zone, are hereinafter designated as non-competitive to such one or more theatres; and no theatre operating within any such zone shall be entitled to buy or otherwise acquire, and no distributor shall be entitled to sell or otherwise grant to any such theare, any clearance over any other theatre or theatres, as to which such theatre is herein declared to be non-competitive, within the same zone.

Section 7. Clearance Outside of Zone

Except as otherwise expressly provided herein, no theatre operating within any subsequent run zone established within the area of any city shall be entitled to buy or otherwise acquire, and no distributor shall be entitled to sell or otherwise grant to any such theatre, any clearance over any theatre operating in any other subsequent run zone established within the area of the same city.

Section 8. Admission Taxes

Wherever an admission price is mentioned in this schedule, the amount stated shall be deemed to refer to the net admission price, exclusive of any tax or other charge of any governmental or administrative agency.

Section 9. Theatre Classifications

1. Any theatre charging forty cents (40c) or more evening adult admission price for each adult admission sold, and not less than thirty cents (30c) matinee adult admission, is hereby classified as a "forty cent (40c) or more theatre."

2. Any theatre charging forty cents (40c) or more evening adult admission price for each adult admission sold, and not less than twenty-five cents (25c) matinee adult admission, is hereby classified as a "thirty-five cent (35c) theatre."

3. Any theatre charging less than forty cents (40c) but not less than thirty-five cents (35c) evening adult admission price for each adult admission sold, and not less than thirty cents (30c) matinee adult admission, is hereby classified as a "thirty-five cent (35c) theatre."

4. Any theatre charging less than forty cents (40c) but not less than thirty-five cents (35c) evening adult admission price for each adult admission sold, and not less than twenty-five cents (25c) matinee adult admission, is hereby classified as a "thirty-cent theatre."

5. Any theatre charging less than thirty-five cents (35c) but not less than thirty cents (30c) evening adult admission price for each adult admission sold, and not less than twenty-five cents (25c) matinee adult admission, is classified as a "thirty cent (30c) theatre."

6. Any theatre charging less than thirty cents (30c) but not less than twenty-five cents (25c) evening adult admission price for each adult admission sold and not less than twenty cents (20c) matinee adult admission price is classed as a "twenty-five cent (25c) theatre."

7. Any theatre charging less than twenty-five cents (25c) but not less than twenty cents (20c) evening adult admission price, and not less than fifteen cents (15c) matinee adult admission is a "twenty cent (20c) theatre."

8. Any theatre charging less than twenty cents (20c) but not less than fifteen cents (15c) adult admission price for each adult admission sold at any time, either matinee or evening, for any seat, either balcony or lower floor, is classified as a fifteen cent (15c) theatre."

9. Any theatre charging less than fifteen cents (15c) but not less than ten cents (10c) adult admission price for each adult admission sold, at any time, either matinee or evening, for any seat, either balcony or lower floor, is classified as a "ten cent (10c) theatre."

10. Any theatre charging less than ten cents (10c) admission price for each admission sold, either adult or child, at any time, either matinee or evening, for any seat, either balcony or lower floor, is hereby classified as a "five cent (5c) theatre."

Section 10. Determination of Classification

In determining the classification, for the purposes of this schedule, of any theatre charging at any time two or more different evening adult admission prices, or two or more different matinee adult admission prices, the lowest evening adult admission price charged, and the lowest matinee adult admission price charged, at any time, shall govern.

Section 11. Change of Classification

(a) In order to avoid the "booking" confusion (both to distributors generally and to those exhibitors with theatres dating clearance from other theatres), necessarily resulting from "special" reductions in admission prices which may serve from time to time to place theatres resorting to such practices temporarily in a lower classification, it is hereby provided that:

Every theatre in the Los Angeles Exchange territory which shall, at any time after the effective date of this schedule, by reason of an change in its admission prices, be placed in a lower price of admission classification than that in which such theatre previously occupied in accordance with the provisions of this schedule, shall be deemed to remain in such lower price of admission classification, for all purposes of this schedule, and shall be accorded the clearance herein permitted for theatres of such lower classification, for and during the entire period in which each such change of price shall continue in effect, and in all events for and during the period of four (4) weeks next following the week in which such theatre shall have been placed in such lower classification.

(b) It is further provided that any theatre in the Los Angeles Exchange territory which shall at any time after the effective date of this schedule, by reason of an increase in its admission price, be entitled to be placed in a higher price of admission classification than that in which such theatre was previously placed, in accordance with the provisions of this schedule, shall remain in such prior price of admission classification for the pictures of such distributor who shall not have agreed in writing with such exhibitor for such higher price of admission classification. Nothing in the foregoing shall at any time prohibit an exhibitor from increasing his admission prices at the will of such exhibitor.

(c) Nothing in this schedule shall deny the right to any exhibitor regardless of his admission price, to buy any run that he may be able to purchase from any distributor in his competitive zone, nor shall it deny the right of any distributor to sell his product to any theatre for any run in any competitive zone, regardless of the admission price charged by such theatre.

(d) A subsequent run theatre charging the same or lower admission price than its competitor and buying a prior run, shall have a maximum of seven (7) days clearance over such competitor.

Section 12. Prints

Nothing contained in this schedule shall be construed as an obligation on the part of any distributor in the Los Angeles Exchange territory to have in his possession and available for exhibition, a greater number of positive prints of feature pictures than such distributor generally carried prior to the effective date of this schedule, pursuant to normal and generally accepted daily business practices of such distributor. All dates of availability in this schedule shall be subject to availability of positive prints and the allocation thereof to exhibitors in the sole discretion of distributors.

MUSIC LEADS RADIO PROGRAMS

The National Broadcasting Company, as the result of a survey of network programs during the first half of 1935, discovered that a larger part of broadcasting time is occupied by discussions of governmental matters than ever before, but that music still leads the parade of types of programs by a wide margin.

The percentage analysis of NBC network programs for the half year is as follows:

Type of Program	Percentage
Music	63.4
Literature	13.5
Lectures	7.6
Outstanding Events	0.8

Showings of Films of Mines Bureau Increase

Motion pictures of the United States Bureau of Mines were shown on 61,002 occasions during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935, according to figures just compiled. The total attendance at the bureau's films during the year was 4,970,000. The number of showings represents an increase of 23 per cent over last year and the attendance shows a gain of 22 per cent. The bureau has in its library 2,771 reels of film, according to M. F. Leopold, supervising engineer of the motion picture production section of the bureau.

Chicago Killing Laid To Local Union Fight

Chicago police last week declared that the recent killing of Louis Alterie was a sequel to the murder of Tom Maloy, head of the local projectionists' union, and was the result of a quarrel for control of the operators' and janitors' unions. All other theories relative to the killing were discarded.

Los Angeles Plan Offered As Model

and that the problem would not be solved until Loew's raises the scale at the Midland, the city's largest theatre. Mr. Flinn said this week that the Midland's scale of 15 cents for 1,400 balcony seats to 6 p. m. and 25 cents in the balcony after 6, is holding down tariffs at the other first-runs and is militating against price increases at the subsequent and neighborhood houses. The neighborhoods and subsequents, said Mr. Flinn, cannot be expected to charge more than 15 cents when pictures of a major caliber are exhibited at a theatre such as the Midland at a subnormal price.

The Kansas City clearance and zoning board attempted to effect stabilization and adopted a provision to be incorporated in the schedule providing that any first-run showing below 25 cents was to lose its protection and that the protection was to be increased if the price was raised. Loew's objected to these terms, and the Code Authority subsequently vetoed the plan.

Neighborhoods Blame Midland

The low tariff at Loew's Midland is blamed by the Kansas City neighborhoods for having to resort to extraneous box-office stimulators, such as bank nights, to hold their trade, and for the spread of 10-cent admissions. Loew's and other first-runs in turn justify their practices by the situation in the neighborhoods. A solution may be found in the fall when the circuits again may attempt to force up first-run tariffs.

New Orleans is considered another situation that requires attention. There, the first-runs have 60 days' clearance, and the drop next to the first-run top of 50 cents is the price of 15 cents uniformly in effect at all neighborhood theatres. Trouble began when the city was divided into zones, and United Theatres, an unaffiliated circuit having one or two theatres in every subsequent-run zone, obtained 50 days' clearance for its first-run in a zone and 60 days for its second-run. Individual operators are now forced to play as many as 250 days behind first-run in the city. The first-runs are not concerned, however, as they have no affiliated subsequent-run houses.

Systems in 12 Territories

In 12 of the 31 exchange territories in the field there are in effect by unanimous consent more or less uniform systems of run and clearance, whereby all theatres are subject to the same availabilities according to admission price.

In Detroit such a plan was upset by the distributors after several years of operation, but the city today is regulated almost by the same system as a matter of custom. Chicago zones follow this method as a matter of informal acceptance but not by official adoption. Kansas City and Omaha are other places which base run and clearance on admission prices under the plan generally known as the "week of release" system.

Operation of the local clearance and zoning boards had one effect admittedly beneficial to subsequent-runs. Through complaints filed by individual exhibitors and their later adjudication, clearance in many cities has been reduced to 7 or 14 days between neighborhood theatres. In a majority of key cities 14 days has been established as the maximum period between runs subsequent to first city runs.

Norton Sees Value In MPPDA Plan On English Scripts

The machinery set up in the east by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America for expediting the handling of British scripts and completed productions that are intended for this market was described as having "enormous value" to British producers seeking an outlet here, by Captain Richard Norton, executive and board member of British and Dominions Film Corporation, Ltd.

Captain Norton returned to London Saturday morning on the Ide de France. He had traveled to New York for a three-day discussion of policies and product with officials of United Artists, distributors of B. and D. product in this country.

Admittedly repeating the views of the Film Group of the Federation of British Industries, Captain Norton declared he was in complete disagreement with those London motion picture executives who have belittled the efforts of the MPPDA to aid British producers to effect conformity with American motion picture standards as set down by the industry's Production Code.

Nor does Captain Norton approve of the views of British producers and their representatives who, in their zealousness to arrange for distribution of product in this country, have eulogized all British pictures while at the same time they denounced all of Hollywood's product. "I do not believe that any one should come over here and 'demand' a market for his product," he added.

"Such outbursts are sour grapes," declared Mr. Norton.

"My own company feels that any help that is given to us by the MPPDA, or by any other American organization that will aid us in distributing our product in this country by suggesting how we might meet the full requirements both of the censors and the industry's own standards, has a very definite benefit and should not be snickered at, as it has been snickered at by some individuals."

According to Captain Norton, production in England has increased to such a marked degree within the past few months that there is practically no unoccupied studio space available. The number of independent producers in the field is greater than ever before, he said, and indicated the total of English pictures offered to the American market will be larger than ever, since most producers are working with the American market in mind.

"Unfortunately," said Capain Norton, "these independent producers probably will run into difficulties over here because of a lack of distributors for their product. Their distribution in England will be taken care of, however." Captain Norton said his company plans production of eight pictures for release in this country through United Artists.

Film Outing Scheduled

The annual outing of the New Haven, Conn., film industry will be held at Castle Inn, Saybrook, on August 8. Jack Bryne heads the committee in charge.

REDUCE CODE APPROVAL SEAL

The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America has announced that in the interest of uniformity the seal of approval of the Production Code Administration will appear on all features after August 1 in the same form as now employed on short subjects. The seal will appear as part of an introductory frame instead of on a separate frame as before, thus eliminating the additional running time.

Illness of William Fox Delays Court Examination

William Fox was temporarily excused from further questioning early this week in Nassau County supreme court at Mineola, Long Island, in an examination before trial of a stockholders' suit for an accounting pending against him. District Attorney Alvin N. Edwards, as official referee, was informed that illness made it impossible for Mr. Fox to submit to further questioning at present. Mr. Edwards agreed to an adjournment until next Monday, indicating he would appoint a physician to examine into Mr. Fox's condition.

Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swayne and Wood, attorneys, announced last week that action will be taken to attach the Woodmere, Long Island, estate of William Fox to satisfy a judgment of $297,412 filed against him in the county clerk's office in Manhattan and in Nassau County. The judgment is in connection with a breach of lease action brought by lessors of the Fox, Los Angeles. Mr. Fox confessed to the judgment in federal court last week. The Capital Company of San Francisco filed the confession of judgment in the United States district court, New York.

To Make "Lawrence of Arabia"

"Lawrence of Arabia," Inc., has been organized in Hollywood by British production people to produce a feature titled "Lawrence of Arabia," to be based on the activities of the late Colonel T. E. Lawrence in the Near East during tthe World War. The announcement was made by Hirsh, Newman, Reass and Becker, attorneys for William Fox.

"March of Time" Staff Is Increased

The production staff of the "March of Time," has been enlarged by Roy E. Larsen, president. New cameramen are Charles W. Herbert, Richard W. Maedler and Beverly Jones. D. Y. Bradshaw and Kenneth Hawk, sound men, have been added, and the personnel of the assignment desk, news desk and research and script departments has been increased.

McNutt Fox Producer

Patterson McNutt, screen and magazine writer, has been named a Fox producer, his first assignment, "Fly by Night," going into work this week. His brother, William Slavens McNutt, had worked on the script.

Most Theatres In Kansas City Using Giveaways

In Kansas City, probably 90 per cent of the theatres are giving away something, but outside the city not more than five per cent are using the business stimulating devices, in the opinion of R. R. Jersey, representing the Aluminum Goods Manufacturing Company in Kansas City. The use of the giveaways will increase during the next two years, he believes. In the Kansas City area Bank Night appears to lead the way among various devices, including Cash Night, Screeno, Jack Pot, Buck Night, Grab Bag and others which have become a definite element of exhibition in almost all sections of the country.

Mrs. A. Baier, operator of the Lindbergh, a suburban Kansas City theatre, declares she is the only suburban run exhibitor in her territory not employing giveaways, and that business is better now than it was at the same time a year ago.

Screeno has been ruled a lottery in United States district court, Milwaukee, and therefore illegal. Milton Harmon, manager of the local Saxe's Garfield has been fined $10 and costs for using Screeno.

The hearing of testimony on the appeal of the Fountain Operating Company, Cleveland, from the recent decision of Common Pleas Judge Frederick Walther denying a petition for an injunction to stop Bank Night at the Haltnorth theatre, was concluded last week. The court of appeals will reconvene to hear the case. Meanwhile seven Cleveland theatres are using Bank Night without interference. Cleveland Heights, exclusive residential suburb, has passed an ordinance prohibiting all forms of games of chance under penalties up to $500. A proposed use of Bank Night inspired the ordinance.

The Common Pleas court in Youngstown, Ohio, last week dissolved the temporary injunction against Bank Night at the State theatre, the stimulator having been resumed. Six local houses had filed a complaint charging unfair competition.

Jacob Schreiber, owner of the Colonial in Detroit, and George Buckley, employee, must stand trial on charges of operating a lottery in violation of state law in their policy of raffling cash prizes. Judge Thomas Cotter ruled there was cause of action, in reviewing the complaint.

George P. Hundling, owner of the Capitol, Newton, Iowa, has been convicted of violating the state lottery law in advertising Bank Night.

Advertisements and stories about giveaways are appearing in Denver papers, the Rocky Mountain News and the Denver Post.

The case brought by Bank Night in Boston against Gold Mine, another form of stimulator, for alleged infringement, starts this week. It was hinted by Federal Judge Brewster that the action may result in the outlawing of all cash giveaways in the area.

Bank Night has been started among the second run houses of Birmingham, Ala., and the Galax, first run, is using weekly jackpot drawings.

ASIDES & INTERLUDES

By JAMES CUNNINGHAM

The press has devoted much space to the hobbies of hobbyists. Some papers have even ventured forth with features about individuals who have established successful financial enterprises from an obscure hobby. Now comes Louis Shimon, assistant manager of Milwaukee's Garden theatre, with a 15-year hobby of collecting humor. And it's all clean!

Having been associated with the motion picture theatre for a decade and a half, from usher to manager, advertising manager and whatnot, Mr. Shimon has had the opportunity of compiling quite a collection. He has taken down in shorthand the cream de cream of Orpheum Circuit vaudeville acts, many editions of musical shows, also the best of what's been on the air the past six years.

Judging from the lack of quality of some of the jokes we've been hearing lately we at first suspected that Mr. Shimon's collection of humor would not be extensive, but he writes us that it really is large, sufficient for a book which he says he's going to publish.

About six o'clock in the sweltering heat of last Thursday evening, in the stuffy old post office building at Park Row in New York, grueling examination by the federal court of attorneys seeking to support their claims for $3,600,000 allowances and fees in the Paramount reorganization was proceeding, and the swarm of lawyers seemed exhausted and ready to quit.

One of the lawyers, called to present his claim, addressed the court as follows: "I would suggest we postpone this hearing, because my talk will take at least one-half or three-quarters of an hour; and since this has been a strenuous day, and the temperature is high, and the hour late, I suppose your honor is anxious to get home to his family after leaving this court room."

Whereupon white-haired Judge Alfred C. Coxe, perched upon the mahogany bench, retorted, with a twinkle in his eye: "I refuse to be cross-examined as to where I will go after I leave this court room." The pleadings continued.

The other day in Brooklyn, J. A. (S.O.S.) Tanney noticed this marquee oddity:

BLOCK AND SULLY
MISERABLES

"Just a race of palm-whammers. Vociferous approvers. Vehement applauders." That's what California's John Hanlon calls us.

"Possessing all the racial cultural appreciation of a vast aggregation of Andalusian yak-yaks," Mr. Hanlon says "we haven't the foggiest conception of the artistic merit of the unknown and unheralded, but how we do take to our bosoms the publicized and the ballyhooed. Just let (through the columns of the press) the lads and lassies whose business it is to put us straight concerning such matters, just let those boys and girls once tell us that so-and-so is good, and we will forthwith proceed to out-appreciate any cockeyed race of mortals on the face of the globe."

"As a result," he continues, "there appears a new 'crying need' of the nation—theatres with bigger and better swinging distance between seats. We culture-pursuers are, as an audience, too congested. That's our big handicap. We can't do our best work all jammed together as we are. We haven't anything like the swinging space we require for really effective palm-crashing. And in our assiduous approval we are constantly back-hand bashing one another in the pan."

Mr. Hanlon should appeal to Mr. Hays.

WE WERE PLEASED, although not surprised, to read last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD the reportorial account of Douglas Churchill of the improvement in motion pictures at the end of the first year of the Production Code.

The improvement over the old order was more forcibly brought out when, on the very day of the Code's anniversary, Pictorial Review magazine sent forth an announcement that Shirley Temple, age six—she probably can't even spell "cat"—had WRITTEN her autobiography for publication therein, and in this connection they disclosed this excerpt:

> "When I made my screen test I had to stand in front of the camera in my panties (you see, the pictures they were going to make were called Baby Burlesks and the whole cast—all little children—had to wear panties), and smile, and wink my eye, and shake my shoulder two or three times in a dance, and then say, 'Oui, mon cherie!' Can you imagine!) The first words I ever spoke before a camera were French!"

Can you imagine such a condition existing today!

A great calamity is about to befall the American theatre. M. S. Huntington Watts, self-admitted actor and blue-blooded—very blue-blooded—descendant of William the Conqueror, a Park Avenueite at heart, threatens to leave the stage flat, thus deflating it forever. He had tried his hand at summer stock on Long Island as a beginner and he apparently just couldn't begin.

"I may say in all frankness," said Huntington to Geraldine Sartain, news writer, "that I feel I really have something to offer the theatre, something in the way of presence, in the way of culture, diction, a certain experience gained through travel and association with people who mean something today.

"I feel somehow that I am just not wanted in the American theatre. That public does not really appreciate me or understand my art. Therefore I believe I shall turn my face away from the theatre."

Summer stock folk were emerging from the dressing rooms at Charles Carey's little theatre at Whitestone. A voice, evidently that of the director, came through the night:

"Now, Watts, you have your lines up by tomorrow night! Hear me? We don't want to have to drop half the last act again, as we did tonight."

Watts dropped his lines and they dropped Watts.

Indicative of the evasiveness and elusiveness of Howard Hughes, Robert M. Savini, long-drawling southerner, acquired distribution rights to a flock of already-used Howard Hughes productions, for reissue, without having once seen the oil millionaire. The closest Bob ever got to him was on the telephone—and that alone is quite an accomplishment.

Florida Motor Lines announces that since the appearance of the motion picture, "It Happened One Night," the number of its women passengers has increased 20 per cent.

Campbell Soup Company has engaged Lionel Barrymore for five years to enact each Christmas Day the role of "Scrooge" in Dickens' "Christmas Carol," starting next Dec. 25 on a nation-wide VBS hook-up.

Through the unusual contract, the actor will vie with Santa Claus for the public's attention each Yuletide. The contract came as a result of his portrayal of the cantankerous Dickens' character in the Nash Motors Company's "Christmas Party" program last year, broadcast over WABC and 90 stations of the Columbia network.

Commenting on his new contract, Lionel Barrymore remarked that the Campbell Soup Company was doing its Christmas shopping early.

Eugene Burr passes along the story about the embarrassing experience of Etiore Verna, who, twice during the singing of the leading tenor role of "Rigoletto" at the Boston Opera House, last week, sang himself out of his pants. Grasping his trousers firmly in one hand, Verna continued to sing valiantly. Then he forgot—or maybe he was immersed in his role. Anyway, down went the pants again. But Verna, a true artist, gathered them up and sang until the act curtain spared his further blushes.

There'll be many a heated argument over the authorship of "The Dark Angel" when Sam Goldwyn shows, soon, that remake of the old silent success. While both are from the identical story, Mr. Goldwyn's will credit Guy Bolton, whereas oldtimers will remember that R. B. Trevelyan received credit as author of the silent.

It seems that when the first one was made Mr. Bolton thought the story was a "palooka" and so used the nom de plume of R. B. Trevelyan.

Dr. William M. Marston, psychologist, writes about his new gadget, "a machine that reads your inmost thoughts," in Sunday syndicated rotogravure sections, telling about the "infallible record" he obtains thereby of the mind in action—its brainstorms, truths, falsehoods, health or illness.

The last time we heard from Dr. Marston was some seven years ago when Carl Laemmle's Universal Pictures employed him to analyze the potential psychological reaction of plots on audiences, and had invented a gadget for the purpose. The li'l ol' box office still is the best gadget.

"Dialogue is a great bone of contention," observes Paul Gerard Smith, writer. "Most of it is what is commonly called 'stilted.' The reason for this is that 90 per cent of the people think because they talk in dialogue they must necessarily be experts at it. The trouble is when they sit down to write it, they write what they think they say, rather than what they actually do say. Once upon a time I submitted a manuscript to a very fine Broadway producer. He read it.

"'It's good,' he observed, 'all but the dialogue. For instance, right here. You've got a line, 'I ain't going to do it.'

"What's wrong with that?" I inquired.

"Bum grammar. People don't say ain't. It ain't right."

Giveaways Called Direct Road To Cemetery of Showmanship

Paying patrons to view a program that cost hundreds of thousands is branded as insanity

By WILLARD HATCH

Publicity and Art Director

Hayward Theatre, Hayward, Cal.

The past few years will go down in motion picture history as The Era of the Great Change. I am just as certain that history will record it as a crisis which beset the pathway of sensible showmanship. I am referring to the policy of a goodly number of our brethren, the policy that demands that the public receive some remuneration for their trouble in coming to see their entertainment. I wonder what some of the older showmen think of that belief. I wonder if they don't think that we're all just a little bit daffy. I do.

It seems pointless to pay people to come and see product of the industry which is, as a whole, fine entertainment—and cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to conceive. It seems incredible that we should place such valuable product (which we are supposed to be in the business of selling), secondary to a comparatively cheap article of merchandise used to induce people to come and see the program. To me it's insane.

This giveaway creed may be the reason why showmanship is becoming a lost art. A lot of us are content to sit back and say, "What's the use of selling this picture—they'll come in to get their piece of chinaware." Besides, we are giving away so much money that we can't afford to spend anything on good, healthy advertising. Motion pictures have been indefinitely relegated to the back seat.

Follow-the-Leader

What was its cause? The depression is the most popular reason blamed for its start. Still, even prizes can't induce people to spend something they haven't got. It seems to be just another instance of follow-the-leader—wherein we all were afraid that someone would get the jump on us, and we all know the results.

What will we do when the present systems are passé? Even the latest innovations in giveaways are some day going to become overdone—what then? I predict that some enterprising (?) individual will find something to give. He'll have to. Otherwise he'll be forced to go back to the now old-fashioned system of selling pictures.

It is a most fantastic situation. But it was created by us and it is up to us to squelch it—if we be so inclined. After all, product which is so extensively and expensively exploited by its producers is worthy of more effort in its sale than that which it is getting in the hands of these prize-hounds. With double features what they are, we are offering to pay our patrons to come and see three or more hours of entertainment. I can't understand it!

The giveaway, whether it's cash or "a comparatively cheap article of merchandise," has an uncompromising enemy in Willard Hatch, publicity and art director of the Hayward Theatre at Hayward, Cal., one of the Golden State Theatre Circuit properties. Not only is the Prize Night undermining showmanship but it is cheapening product, raising a crop of disgruntled patrons—the 4,999 losers in a 5,000 to 1 lottery, writes Mr. Hatch, in the accompanying article.

Unconsciously we are cheapening our films in the eyes of the public. Nine times out of ten patrons believe that if you are giving them something you are also cheating them in the matter of entertainment. This is one of the many objections I have to "Prize Nites." Even if you pack them in on the night, many are the adverse comments you will receive about your show. This type of advertising is surely not going to do your theatre any good. It doesn't.

Cash Night Costly

Another bit of cost occurs on the Cash Event Nights. It isn't a visible one, and in all likelihood the majority of exhibitors won't believe it—but ask any advertising man about the effect of psychology and suggestion. We'll say, for example, that you are giving one hundred dollars on this particular night. You pack them in. Not even standing room on the sidewalk out front. Comes the drawing; expectancy hushes your house until you could hear a pin drop. The whole audience is breathless with hope and wonder. And then the winner.

One person out of that mob is satisfied—the rest subconsciously, are cursing their luck, and probably a few are murmuring something about "such things are put up jobs," or some similar phrase. Whether they admit it or not—way back in their minds they are disappointed and let down—dissatisfied with the whole thing.

They can't help it—perhaps they have been standing in your lobby, cramped and uncomfortable, for hours. They are bound to have a feeling that they have been "gypped." And believe me, nine times out of ten they will proceed to go out and tell everyone they know just how they suffered and how poor the pictures were. That is one of the benefits (?) derived from the Cash Night. And add to that the habit you are teaching the patrons, a habit which, when broken off, is bound to have unsatisfactory results. When you teach people to expect something and then suddenly cease giving them that something you are going to get into hot water.

For an example of selling pictures and only pictures, I give you my own case. The manager and I have always been firm in the belief that we were in the business of selling the people entertainment plus certain services and comforts, and that is exactly what we have done. And we have generally met with success. We have implanted firmly in the minds of our patrons that at our theatre they could expect only the best entertainment that we could give them.

Public Pays the Theatre

We have convinced them that at the Hayward we give them something in service and comforts that they were not getting elsewhere. And most important of all, they have become Hayward Theatre minded because we do our level best to live up to every statement we make. We give them plain facts about our show—no exaggeration—no stretching of the truth. We have proved to them that we honestly want them to feel that we are here to see that they are entertained and served by us to the best of our ability. They come to our show with that thought in mind—and they pay us for the privilege. That is as it should be.

We have a cash event once a week, as have the rest of you. (For two and a half years we were without any prize night of any kind and we resisted competition very satisfactorily.) Prior to our having a cash event about 25 theatres within a 20 or 30 mile radius of us had similar Nights for some months. If we suffered any ill-effects from this competition it was not noticeable.

In all the time that we were without it, only one patron asked us why we didn't have it! We explained our thoughts in regards to the matter and he agreed with us that we were right; and I am convinced that he thought more highly of the theatre than before. This, to my way of thinking, substantiates my statement that people primarily come to a theatre for entertainment.

If the system continues, I am at a loss to say what will be the final results. What really should be done about it I don't know either. There must be some way, though, that we can cease this idiotic policy and really do that which we are supposed to do. I mean—run a motion picture theatre and not a series of lotteries.

We here are going to stand by our statements and continue to believe that we don't have to pay people to come to our theatre.

This is what we unconsciously are telling our patrons: We'll give you a chance (of about 5,000 to 1) to win the grandiose sum of fifty or more dollars—if you will just be patient and sit, stand, or be squeezed through hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of entertainment first! That is what gets me!

RENTAL PRICE FIXING IN NEW CELLER BILL

Measure to Bar Blind and Block Booking Would Give Trade Commission Court Writs

by FRANCIS L. BURT
Herald Washington Bureau

Legislation providing for a strict federal control of the motion picture industry, but one step removed from censorship, may be a major pre-campaign issue in the next session of Congress.

Introduced by Representative Celler of New York as a "revision" of the bill he submitted at the opening of the session, a measure to prohibit blind and block booking and arbitrary allocation of films by producers to theatres in which they have an interest, little interest was displayed until comparison of the two bills showed that it contained new provisions which might make necessary almost complete reorganization of the industry's methods of doing business.

Four major points are embodied in the measure, as follows:

1. Block booking and blind booking would be outlawed.

2. Distributors would be forbidden to discriminate in favor of theatres in which they have an interest, in the distribution of films.

3. The Federal Trade Commission would be empowered to pass on the "reasonableness" of rentals.

4. The Federal Trade Commission would be authorized to issue orders and regulations to make the act effective, which would be given the support of the courts through injunction proceedings to prevent possible future violations.

The measure is so written as to make violators subject to tremendous penalties.

Contrary to his original measure, the new legislation would cover all motion pictures through elimination of the word "copyrighted." The bill is also so written as to make practically every film a subject of interstate commerce. This is accomplished by the following section:

"For the purpose of this act (but not in anywise limiting the foregoing definition of interstate commerce) a transaction in respect of any motion picture film shall be considered to be in interstate commerce if the film is a copy or reproduction of a negative or positive film and is part of that current of commerce usual in the motion picture industry whereby films are sent from one state to another with the expectation that they will circulate in two or more states, being leased first to one exhibitor and then another until the film has been exhibited such number of times that the public demand for exhibitions thereof has been met, including in addition to cases within the above general description all cases where films are shipped by distributors located outside a state into that state to any branch or agency owned or controlled by such distributors. Films normally in such current of commerce shall not be considered out of such commerce through resort being had to any means or device intended to remove transactions in respect thereto from the provisions of this act."

The bill carries an explanation of block and blind booking identical with the original measure, but adds: "Because of its function of representation of events, the transmission of intelligence, its service as an instrument of education, its capacity for good and evil, and in the interest of the public morals and welfare, the motion picture industry is hereby declared affected with the public interest."

As in the original measure, block and blind booking are prohibited and administration of the act is vested in the Federal Trade Commission. The penalties of the original bill—a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both—are eliminated, however, and the penalties of the Federal Trade Commission Act are made to apply.

From this point, the revised bill consists of new matter, and starts off by giving the Commission the authority to prosecute any inquiry necessary to its duties under the act in any part of the United States.

Taking up the question of differentials between the prices for blocks and for single films, the bill provides that whenever the Commission, after hearings, finds that the price charged for a film which is part of a block "is or will be unjust or unreasonable or unjustly discriminatory or unduly preferential or prejudicial, the Commission shall prescribe the reasonable price for such separate film in such manner as, in its judgment, will remove such advantage, preference or discrimination." The price so set must be observed while in effect by the producers, distributors or exhibitors affected by the proceeding.

Commission Also May Appeal

Provision is made for appeal to the courts by any party affected by any order of the commission, but if any producer, distributor or exhibitor fails to obey an order the Commission also may appeal to the courts for enforcement, through injunction or other process.

Any producer, distributor or exhibitor failing to obey an order of the commission would be subject to a penalty of $500 for each offense, with each distinct violation being considered a separate offense and in case of a continuing violation each day to be deemed a separate offense. Proceedings for recovery under the forfeiture provisions would be brought by the attorney general.

Further, it is provided, if any producer, distributor or exhibitor violates the provisions of the act, he shall also be liable to the person or persons injured thereby for the full amount of damages sustained in consequence of such violation, which liability may be enforced by suit. This section is not in any way to abridge or alter the remedies now existing at common law or by statute but is to be in addition to such remedies.

No effort will be made to obtain consideration of this measure during the current session of Congress, but early next year Representative Celler will seek hearings.

Designed apparently to protect the independents in the industry, the measure is seen as giving the Federal Trade Commission that control which it unsuccessfully has sought in the past under its enabling act, notably in the ten-year Famous Players case.

While leaders in the industry have not yet made their views known, it is not denied that those provisions of the measure prohibiting block and blind booking, denying to distributor owned theatres any advantages from their affiliation, and giving the Trade Commission authority to set the prices for rental of individual films from blocks, would necessitate a general reorganization of methods of doing business, from the studio right through the exchange.

Bills seeking to eliminate blind and block booking and discrimination in favor of distributor-owned houses have been introduced in the past, but the provision for price fixing is new, and is seen as eliminating block booking as completely as would a flat ban upon that practice, it being a foregone conclusion that the prices set by the Commission for single pictures would be based on mathematics rather than box-office value.

Dickstein Sees Early Action

A special rule will be sought by Representative Dickstein of New York to obtain prompt consideration of his bill to limit actor immigration.

"Most deliberate and mendacious misstatements concerning the Pettengill bill" are being made in a "Dear Mr. Exhibitor" letter being circulated by M-G-M through its managers, Allied States Association charges in its latest bulletin.

National Allied Independent Theatre Day, for the pledging of funds toward a "war chest," has been changed from August 5th to a date to be set probably in the fall.

Other Developments

Legislative developments of the week in other territories follow:

Governor Merriam of California has signed the unfair practices act, designed to extend the existing state fair trade laws to apply to the service of commodities as well as their sale.

The Kansas legislative council, planning a group of special taxes to be considered by the September session, is reported to be discussing a 10 per cent tax on amusements. If a sales tax is passed, however, observers doubt there will be a special amusement tax.

All motion pictures exhibited in Louisiana after July 28th will be required to bear the censors' perforated seal regardless of playing time left after that date, but a reduction of fee is considered likely provided the playing time left is short. The fee is $4 a thousand feet or fraction, with newsreels having precedence and trailers not taxed for the time being. John Klorer, censor, who with Ellis Irwin met with exhibitors and exchangemen Friday, asked for a list of releases with playing time left and said he would seek a reduction of fees. Films uninspected on July 28 may run 10 days under special permit if the board is unable to view them.

In North Dakota, a 2 per cent sales tax for relief was voted in last week's referendum.

Tax on Children's Free Tickets

In Ontario, when an exhibitor at Windsor was warned that a five-cent tax ticket must be sold for each child admitted without admission charge, it was decided to sell a one-cent admission ticket, whereupon the Government ordered addition of one cent for the tax. The needy juveniles coul dnot afford the two cents.

Donora, Pennsylvania, was the first municipality to petition the Washington county commissioners for a Sunday show referendum. In Philadelphia, Councilman Clarence Crossan's bill was passed, which will force the issue on the ballot in the November election. As a result of its passage, it was pointed out, getting of 5 per cent of last year's electorate to sign petitions now is not necessary. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware issued copies of forms for petitions, also applications for permits under the new tax act which became effective Monday. The law requires a tax of one cent on every 25 cents (or fraction) of admission and each theatre had to buy a $1 permit to operate.

ZANUCK, HEADING 20th CENTURY-FOX PRODUCTION, AUGMENTS HIS STAFF

Net Income of 20th Century for Past Year $1,409,277; Consolidated Earnings of Fox $700,000 Second Quarter

Zanuck to Give Time to Combined Schedule; 20th Century-Fox Will Be New Name of Fox Film Corporation

With Darryl F. Zanuck, who last Thursday succeeded Winfield Sheehan as general manager of production for Twentieth Century-Fox, busy transferring physical assets of Twentieth Century from the United Artists lot to Fox Movietone City, there came the following developments after Mr. Sheehan's resignation:

Details of stock distribution under merger, to be voted on by Fox shareholders August 15th, were revealed.

Twentieth Century-Fox is the new name of Fox Film Corporation.

Mr. Zanuck and Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Fox, took over complete charge of production.

Mr. Zanuck will give his entire time to the schedule as a whole, without screen credit for product to be made under his regime. His contract has seven years to run.

Bearing out announcement that augmentation of producer, writing and player rosters would be undertaken at once, word came forth on Monday that Mr. Zanuck had signed George Jessel as a writer, Victor McLaglen to star and Tay Garnett to direct, on a one-year contract. Jessell starts at once on the script of McLaglen's first picture under the new agreement, "Professional Soldier," based on Damon Runyan's "Gentlemen, the King." Mr. Zanuck has shelved "Fly by Night."

Entire Staff Joins Fox

The entire Twentieth Century staff is joining Fox.

Sol M. Wurtzel continues in charge of the Western Avenue studio for Fox, said Mr. Schenck. It was reported from Hollywood that Jesse L. Lasky, who has completed his contract with "Gay Deception" and "Here's to Romance," may remain with the company, though no steps toward a new contract were made known.

Harry Brand has been named publicity head at the studio, with Gabe Yorke in charge of the newly created department of advertising and exploitation.

Mr. Schenck is returning to New York shortly, but will make his headquarters in Hollywood, with production duties similar to those he held at Twentieth Century.

The Merger Provisions

Financial aspects of the merger of the two companies were revealed Wednesday in a letter to Fox Film stockholders notifying them of a special meeting August 15th.

"The merger takes the form of acquisition of all the assets of Twentieth Century Pictures, Inc., by Fox Film Corporation in exchange for the issuance to Twentieth Century Pictures, Inc., of 132,513 shares of the new $1.50 dividend cumulative preferred stock of Fox Film Corporation and 613,264¾ shares of its new common stock," said the letter. The name of Fox Film Corporation will be changed to Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation.

"As a part of the transaction, the existing capital stock structure of Fox Film Corporation will also be simplified, all of its present Class 'A' common stock and Class 'B' common stock being reclassified into shares of such new preferred and common on the basis of one-half share of such new preferred and one-quarter share of such new common for each share of said Class 'A' common and one share of such new preferred and one-half share of such new common for each share of said Class 'B' common.

DARRYL F. ZANUCK

"Upon consummation of the reorganization, the capitalization of Fox Film Corporation will consist of 1,329,042½ shares of preferred and 1,226,529½ of common.

"The new preferred is convertible into common at the rate of 1¼ shares of common for each share of preferred, with appropriate provisions for the protection of these conversion rights.

$2,000,000 Dividend Requirements

"Dividend requirements on the new preferred stosk to be issued to existing stockholders of Fox Film Corporation and to Twentieth Century Pictures, Inc., will be approximately $2,000,000 per year. According to the certified net income and surplus statement of Twentieth Century Pictures, Inc., its net income for the period from June 1, 1934, to May 4, 1935, was $1,409,277.71, and, on the basis of Fox Film Corporation's figures, the consolidated earnings of that corporation and its wholly owned subsidiaries (including proportion of profits and losses of controlled subsidiaries not consolidated) for the first quarter of 1935 amounted to $616,800 and for the second quarter are estimated to have amounted to approximately $700,000."

Schenck, Zanuck and President Kent will be placed under seven-year contracts.

"In connection with Mr. Kent's employment," said the notice, "it is proposed that the corporation give him certain options to purchase up to an aggregate of not exceeding 60,000 shares of its new common stock."

Statistics on 20th Century presented to the Committee on Stock Listing of the New York Stock Exchange showed a total capitalization of $701,000—10,000 shares of 4 per cent cumulative preferred at $100 each with 7,000 shares outstanding, and 100 shares of common at $1,000. A surplus of $1,440,553.82 was accumulated. Gross income from sales and rentals of "film and literature" was $8,287,668.08. Operating expenses of exchanges, head office and admission were given as $2,708,892.83. Amortization of production costs totaled $4,069,372.42.

Sheehan's Fox Holdings

Winfield Sheehan held only 1,125 fewer shares of Class A Fox Film stock than Sidney R. Kent, it was revealed when the company filed its registration statements with the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington on May 7th. Mr. Sheehan was listed as holder of 10,244 2/6 shares of "A" and 166 4/6 of "B." Mr. Kent was shown to have personally 1 1/6th shares of "A" and his personal holding company, Berkshire Finance Corporation, 11,369 shares.

Darryl F. Zanuck, the new production head of Fox, stands 5 feet 7½ inches high. He was born at Wahoo, Neb., the son of Louise and Frank H. Zanuck. He attended high school at Oakdale, Neb. He married Virginia Fox and has three children. In 1928 he became associate executive in charge of Warner Brothers Pictures, in the season 1929-30 was made general production chief of Warner pictures and the next year rose to chief executive in charge of all production of Warner Brothers and First National, in association with Jack L. Warner. He resigned in 1933 to become associated with Mr. Schenck in formation of Twentieth Century and was first vice-president in charge of production. In 1935 he became a Fox vice-president when Twentieth Century affiliated with Fox.

Schools to Use Sound Pictures

The board of education of New York City plans to experiment with sound motion pictures in 10 schools next year. The budget commitee of the board will recommend an increase of $10,000 to the appropriation for visual education, bringing the total in that phase of teaching to $45,000. Of the total $15,000 is to be earmarked for film and sound apparatus.

Although silent films have been used in the school system, this is the first appropriation ever asked for sound pictures. According to associate superintendent Joseph M. Sheehan 16 mm. apparatus will be used in three elementary, three junior high schools and three high schools. A 35 mm. projector will be used at the Washington Irving High School.

Consolidated Net For Quarter $265,120

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., has reported net profit of $265,120.66 for the three months ended June 30, 1935. The profit is equal to 50 cents per share on 400,000 shares of preferred stock outstanding, and 12 cts. per share on 524,973 common shares.

VOLUNTARY PRESS AD CENSORS ASKED

Dry Goods Association's Promotion Chairman Says Plan Would Avoid Legislative Action

Warning that unless advertising is "universally freed from abuse through voluntary censorship, public pressure will eventually impose a legislative censorship to accomplish that end," Paul E. Murphy, chairman of the sales promotion division of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, this week in New York declared the time is ripe for a movement "to clean up all advertising, national as well as local, through means of a voluntary censorship."

While other business groups are discussing the need for restraint in advertising, the motion picture industry is conceded by the press and former critics to have accomplished great strides in raising advertising standards under its Advertising Code, which is administered by the Advertising Advisory Council and imposed on film companies and the large circuits. More recently, the large broadcasting networks promulgated rules designed to eliminate objectionable material from commercial programs.

Mr. Murphy praised the progress achieved by leading newspapers in various parts of the country in censoring advertising copy and barring dishonest and misleading representations from their columns, and those in bad taste. He placed particular stress on achievements of New York City newspapers in setting up standards for approval of advertising copy.

Public Belief Essential

"What our group recommends is voluntary censorship of all advertising, both national and local," said Mr. Murphy. "The progress that has been made to date by newspapers has been largely in the censorship of local copy. Naturally, if local advertising is to be censored and national advertisers at the same time permitted less restraint and less limitation as to accuracy and honesty, all advertising will suffer by those abuses which have not been eliminated. In view of the fact that advertising censorship has been placed very stringently on local advertisers by many newspapers, it seems to us that the same principles should be maintained over all advertising and all media.

"We believe that advertising will be effective only to the extent that all people believe in all advertising."

Single Standard Urged

Voluntary advertising censorship, applied alike to local and national copy, can hardly be expected to be successful if varying standards are adopted by groups of newspapers and publications in different cities, according to Mr. Murphy. He said this was a problem for the American Newspaper Publishers Association, and it should find a way to set up standards of censorship for all forms of advertising by papers throughout the country. "Once such standards were put in practice by newspapers generally I have no doubt that other advertising media would line up with them," he added.

The advertising executive declared the public is becoming more and more conscious of misleading and false statements in advertising, and will not tolerate "any amount of deception or inaccuracy."

Mr. Murphy expressed the belief that voluntary censorship of local copy by newspapers in every city should be possible.

Typical of what newspapers can do in protecting readers from undesirable advertising claims and statements are those which Mr. Murphy cited as already in force in newspapers with censorship standards. Included in these are bans on advertising containing attacks of a personal character; making false or unwarranted claims about goods or services; unfair attacks or references to competition; holding out the prospect of large guaranteed dividends or excessive profits; advertising which is indecent, vulgar, suggestive, repulsive or offensive.

Pathe Injunction Denied by Court

The application of Pat Casey, a stockholder in Pathe Exchange, Inc., for an injunction to restrain the directors from placing in effect a reorganization plan as of December 18, 1934, and from selling anv part of Pathe's 49 per cent interest in du Pont Film Manufacturing Company stock, was denied this week by Supreme Court Justice Lauer in New York.

Mr. Casey is asking permission in state supreme court to reargue on petition for a restraint injunction. If that is denied he will appeal to a higher court.

The court said the papers failed to disclose any basis for criticism of the Pathe directors and officers and that there was "nothing in the papers from which the court could conclude that the price of the sale of du Pont stock is not fair and adequate." The court said he "does not feel justified at this time in interfering with the reorganization."

The court indicated that the main affidavit in the case was made by Edward B. Derr, former Pathe president, who owns 100 shares of eight per cent cumulative preferred stock. Justice Lauer said he beleived the report on the reorganization plan "is not as frank and full as in his opinion it should have been in advising the stockholders with respect to holding stock in the du Pont Company and facts connected therewith." Further, he said, "while of the opinion that the plan is more favorable to the eight per cent preferred cumulative stockholders," he did not feel justified in interfering.

Psychiatrist Gives Lie to Charge That Film Incited Crime

Charges that gangster pictures abet youthful criminality, as voiced by Judge Jacob Panken of the Queens children's court on June 17th, and echoed in daily press and editorial comment, are found not to be based on fact, by Dr. Carleton Simon, psychiatrist and a former deputy police commissioner of New York.

Judge Panken denounced gangster films after a Queen's county grand jury had refused to indict Frank Damato, 13, his brother Julius, 11, and Lisbon Lawrence, colored, 13, in the slaying of William Walsh on June 15th. They were turned over to the children's court. Judge Panken said: "One of these boys went to the moving pictures three times in one day, always selecting a gangster picture. The combination of street life with the viewing of gangster pictures in which the gangster was glorified has had its effect upon the mind, the psychology and the principles of the boy."

Dr. Simon was requested by the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America to investigate the case. He called on Acting Deputy Chief Inspector John J. Gallagher, who is in command of the Detective Division of the Borough of Queens and who was quoted by the New York Times of June 17th as follows: "This is one of the most unusual cases that has ever come to my attention," he declared. "It is certain that the movies taught these boys some things. The movies taught them how to wipe fingerprints from the revolver and also how to hold a revolver with a handkerchief so that no fingerprints would be left on the gun."

Chief Gallagher, shown a copy of the Times issue, emphatically denied having made such statement.

Richard Kerwick, counsel for the Damato boys, in a letter to Dr. Simon said: "In the course of preparing this matter for proper trial my investigation disclosed the complete habits and home life of these children and I am entirely familiar with all the evidence in connection with the matter and all of the facts that were necessary to properly present their defense. I am therefore in a position to definitely state that motion pictures were not responsible for or in any way a contributory factor in the anti-social behavior of these boys."

Counsel for Lisbon Lawrence in a similar statement addressed to Dr. Simon said that in his opinion the delinquency of this minor was in no way attributable to the influence of motion pictures.

CLAIMANTS AGAINST PARAMOUNT FACE SHARP CUT OF FEES BY COURT

Judge Coxe Rebukes Attorneys, Challenges Authority in Incurring Expenditures and Insists on Detailed Expense Accounts

Thacher as Special Counsel for Paramount Tells Judge That Many Claims Should Be Thrown Out; $3,222,315 Asked

Contesting many of the 51 applications for fees totalling $3,222,315 sought for services in the receivership, bankruptcy and reorganization of Paramount Publix Corporation, Thomas D. Thacher, former U. S. district judge, retained as Paramount's special counsel, on Thursday began his attack before Judge Alfred C. Coxe in the U. S. district court in New York.

The hearing had been adjourned from Thursday of last week when a score of the country's leading corporation lawyers consumed a 10-hour session in pleas on behalf of themselves, the receivers and trustees, accountants and others for allowance of the claims.

As the hearing progressed, Judge Coxe's frequent rebukes to the claimants, his challenge of their authority in incurring expenditures, his insistence on detailed expense accounts and his manner of questioning and comment gave unmistakable indication that some of the claimants were due for surprises.

"Many claims should be disallowed in toto and many are excessive in amount," Mr. Thacher told the court. "I represent all the security holders who must pay those bills."

Indicating time and again that he was not impressed by some of the claims, Judge Coxe on several occasions cut short the lawyers' explanations to remark:

"I found nothing in the statute which authorizes such a payment," or "These disbursements seem a little steep to me," or "Nothing has been shown that the claimant is entitled to such an amount."

Marshaled by Alfred A. Cook, of Cook, Nathan & Lehman, counsel for Paramount in the reorganization proceedings, the attorneys presented their arguments in detail. More than 50 lawyers jammed the attorneys' enclosure.

Judge Coxe's comment about disbursements being "a little steep" came as Mr. Cook launched his explanation in support of his firm's claim for $250,000, plus expenses and disbursements of $3,759.

Assailing the New York American for its characterization of the total of $3,650,000 fees, granted or requested as a "melon splitting," Mr. Cook declared: "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but words can never hurt me. If there is a melon it will be cut by the stockholders and trustees."

Exhibiting an article from the American, in which Senator Gerald P. Nye charged that the Paramount bankruptcy case should be investigated by Congress as a "national racket," Mr. Cook cried:

"I accept that challenge right here and now in Your Honor's court.

"I am reminded now of what Priscilla said to John Alden—'Why don't your speak for yourself, John?' and that's what I'm going to do.

"In spite of what our critic, the New York American, said, we labored in the vineyard without partaking of the wine of the vineyard."

APPEALS COURT CUTS ALLIED OWNERS FEES

The U. S. circuit court of appeals in New York on Monday handed down a decision cutting heavily into allowances granted by Federal Judge Inch in Brooklyn to trustees, attorneys, receivers and others in reorganization and equity proceedings involving Allied Owners' Corporation and New York Investors, Inc.

The court reduced allowances of $90,000—or $30,000 each—granted by Judge Inch to three trustees, to a total of $14,628.50. An allowance of $75,000 to the receivers' attorneys was reduced to $50,000. Theodore Stitt, referee, received $25,000 by Judge Inch's decision, but the higher court ruled he was entitled to $15 only.

Allied Owners' Corporation, a building and investment organization, was a minority creditor of Paramount.

Turning to Irwin Langbein of the counsel for the Securities and Exchange Commission, who was present as an observer, Mr. Cook asked why the commission had been tardy in permitting Paramount to list 1,610,000 shares of stock on the exchange, thus, Mr. Cook charged, delaying the reorganization.

Later in the day Mr. Cook apologized for his attack on the commission, saying that its representative was not there in an official capacity. He and Mr. Langbein seemed on friendly terms.

Another "unofficial" observer was Irwin Kraushaar, representing the Sabath Congressional committee which is investigating corporate reorganizations and, according to reports from Washington, is to delve into the Paramount fees and other matters pertaining to the company's revamping.

Caustic on Erpi's Position

The court's most direct criticism was leveled at members of creditors' committees who, Judge Coxe said, "give very little time" to the work and attend infrequent meetings "to have a good time and discuss reports put before them by lawyers."

This criticism of protective committees' membership was launched during a plea by Nathan Burkan, counsel for the merchandise creditors' committee, for the applications of members of that committee for fees. Burkan's plea also elicited caustic comment from Judge Coxe concerning Erpi's position in this committee in the face of an application from R. E. Anderson, former Erpi treasurer and now financial vice-president of Paramount. Anderson asks $7,500 as chairman of the merchandise creditors' committee.

Erpi, it was brought out, had a claim against Paramount of $1,800,000, which was ultimately settled for something more than $1,100,000. Total claims held by this committee were given by Burkan as $2,400,000. From this, Judge Coxe drew the conclusion that the committee was engaged primarily in representation of Erpi's interest.

"It seems too obvious for discussion," the court remarked, "that Anderson was working for his own company. Why should Erpi be paid by this estate for pulling its own chestnuts out of the fire?"

Mr. Burkan, whose firm is asking $50,000 for itself for legal fees, replied that all Paramount merchandise creditors were invited to join the committee and to be represented by it.

The applications of the receivers and trustees, Adolph Zukor, Charles D. Hilles, Eugene W. Leake and Charles E. Richardson, for a total of $351,545, and of Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, their counsel, for $700,000, were pleaded by Arthur A. Ballantine and Grenville Clark, partners in the law firm, in addresses to the court lasting one hour and 35 minutes. The work of the petitioners over the two-and-one-half-year period was detailed, and the law firm's application, the largest single fee sought, was defended on the grounds that it represented remuneration of $13.17 per hour for more than 79 partners and associates of the firm who put in a total of 72,113 work hours on Paramount.

Mr. Clark said that in arriving at the amount of the fee his firm was guided by the importance of the case, the biggest his firm had ever had; the kind of legal problems involved and the quality of work performed. The firm has received $250,000 in interim allowances heretofore.

The court sharply questioned the application by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., bankers, for $114,287 for services and expenses, and one by Cravath, De Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood, as attorneys for the banking firm, for $150,812. These applications were pleaded by Robert T. Swaine, who detailed the guiding part taken by both applicants in the receivership and reorganization.

Mr. Swaine recalled that from 1929 to 1932 Paramount lost heavily despite efforts to reduce fixed charges.

"This is a business peculiarly sensitive to receivership," he told the court, "not only because it is an artistic enterprise, but because of its far-flung subsidiaries."

Mr. Swaine related there was "much confusion and guerrilla warfare" during the formulation of a reconstruction plan and pleaded it was a "24-hour job" to represent the trustees in examining the various reorganization proposals, all of which were to lay a basis for a new structure. He said the reorganization was a "matter of teamwork" between Sir William Wiseman and himself.

Prompted by Judge Coxe to reveal further details, Mr. Swaine said Kuhn, Loeb was appointed by the principal creditor committees to formulate a plan. The court inquired whether the banking house did not "sponsor the securities." Mr. Swaine insisted "they definitely were requested by the main committee and the debenture creditors' committee to prepare a plan."

The court questioned the right of Kuhn, Loeb to apply directly for remuneration, remarking that unless they were "reorganization managers," their application should be sponsored and declared "indispensable" by the Vanderlip bondholders' and bank group committees.

COURT DEMANDS EXPENSE VOUCHERS

Saying he realized "it would be whittled down," Theodore Kiendl of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Vanderlip committee, urged payment of a fee of $150,000 to his firm and an additional $222,000 in fees and disbursement to the committee members. He termed these claims "fair and reasonable," and said the committee, representing $15,000,000 of the $20,000,000 outstanding debentures, helped by efforts of its own to "appreciably increase the value of the bonds." He informed the court the reorganization was one of the most successful in history.

Judge Coxe was not satisfied with the presentation in behalf of Julius Klein, assistant secretary of commerce in the cabinet of President Hoover, who seeks $52,000, included in the expenses and disbursements of the Vanderlip committee. The court was informed Mr. Klein was employed at a salary of $2,000 a month "to study the Paramount situation from beginning to end" and to keep the committee informed of ramifications, at the same time being a member of the committee.

Demands Vouchers

At this juncture Judge Coxe served notice upon the claimants that he wants all applications for expenses supported by actual vouchers, showing not only payments but reasons for the payments.

Morton Bogue spoke in support of applications for $75,000 fees and disbursements for the bankers' committee and a $75,000 fee for his firm, Beekman, Bogue & Clark, as committee counsel. Robert Szold, of Szold & Brandwen, championed that firm's application for a $75,000 fee and $7,945 for the debenture bondholders' committee of which Lloyd Munger is chairman.

A harangue by Malcolm Sumner seemed to weary the court as the lawyer spoke of the "iniquities" of the Kuhn, Loeb group. He was cut short with an observation by Judge Coxe that "we have already gone into that." Mr. Sumner represents three petitioning bondholder creditors owning $15,000, and has applied for $150,431 for services and fees for accountants and experts totalling $23,500. Twice the court interrupted him to inquire what services he had performed, the second time remarking that "up to now you haven't said one thing that would justify paying you a dollar."

Mr. Sumner said something about it being his "duty and obligation" to fight some one or other, presumably the majority creditor groups, and added that while he represented only $15,000 in bonds, his function was a "representative one generally" in behalf of other bondholders as well. Upon the court's insistence that he get down to cases, Mr. Sumner finally recounted that he was active in connection with the Saenger circuit reorganization and in opposing Kuhn, Loeb.

"Saving the Company"

A. M. Frumberg, attorney, who announced himself as "Judge Frumberg," told the court he and three other lawyers were entitled to $75,000 plus $7,868 expenses for "saving the company and making the reorganization possible." He said that in 1932, a year before the Paramount bankruptcy, he filed suit on behalf of a group of western bondholders to recover $10,000,000 diverted to the banks, this representing 23 feature prints the company had assigned and $3,666,000 in cash. He said the supreme court of New York appointed a receiver and restrained the company and the banks from dissipating the assets.

SEES PRECEDENT IN PARAMOUNT RULINGS

The court's action in the matter of the Paramount fees will probably set a far-reaching precedent, on other corporate reorganizations, this week commented the New York American, which has been liberal with its space in calling public attention to what it terms "Paramount's $3,600,000 melon." Said the American:

"Universal interest in the huge fees asked by the attorneys and others in the Paramount-Publix bankruptcy is based not only on the millions involved. More importantly to many other corporations now in process of 'reorganization' is the fact that the court's ruling on the Paramount fees is likely to set a precedent which will be followed by other courts. The Paramount case is the largest yet under the 77-B statute. If it will cost other corporations a similarly heavy toll of bankruptcy expenses, creditors and stockholders will come to realize that the supposed 'advantages' of voluntary reorganization accrue wholly to the legal fraternity rather than to those involved as holders of claims or stocks. In Wall Street, however, the expectation is that the Paramount claims, which in all aggregate over $3,600,000, probably will be reduced by the court."

"If it wasn't for the fact we kept this money intact there would not have been a reorganization," said Mr. Frumberg. "We are directly responsible for preserving the fund, which was brought into the reorganization."

Court Challenges Claim

The court appeared skeptical, and challenged Mr. Frumberg to show by what authority he could approve the claim. Mr. Frumberg replied the court was empowered by the general bankruptcy act to authorize payment to anyone who brings anything of substance to an estate. Later, Mr. Frumberg privately said: "The judge is just like any other lawyer. He doesn't know all the law."

Sol Stroock of Stroock & Stroock argued his firm was entitled to $100,000 for its services to the Paramount-Broadway Corporation Bondholders' Committee, with $56,000 as expenses and salaries for committee members.

Sam Spring, representing four groups of creditors and $2,000,000 in claims, including Sam Katz and the Boston Olympia stockholders, asked for "compensation on the basis of what I contributed to the reorganization and preservation of the estate."

Jacob L. Lesser, saying he represented 42,000 shares, contended he should be compensated to the extent of $37,500 because he felt the company benefited by "constructive service to his clients."

The court repeatedly questioned Saul E. Rogers, as attorney for debenture and stock owners, who seeks a fee of $10,000.

A note of levity was injected into the tedious proceedings when Archibald Palmer directed a semi-facetious address to the bench in which he quoted the Scriptures in connection with an allegory about Paramount "now being cleansed." He gave notice that at the adjourned session he would read a poem pertinent to the occasion, an original poem, he added, something having to do with Wall Street and bondholders' committee. The court gave its permission.

Mr. Palmer told reporters that he and other attorneys for minority creditor groups would oppose the large claims. He has an application in for $15,000, as representative for stock and bondholders and for a committee of bondholders of Allied Owners' Corporation.

$9,450,000 Erpi Profit in 8 Years

Electrical Research Products, Inc., motion picture equipment subsidiary of Western Electric and in turn of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, made a net profit of $9,450,000 from the time of its organization in January, 1927, to the end of 1934, it was indicated in the investigation of A. T. & T. by the Federal Communications Commission to determine what effect Erpi has had on telephone rates.

It was revealed that Erpi has paid back to Western Electric the $5,750,000 in research and development expenses incident to its business. Of the $9,450,000 net, $4,000,000 went to Western Electric in the form of dividends. In addition Erpi has paid directly to A. T. & T. $5,700,000 as royalties under patent licenses.

Year Net of Roxy Equals $130,519

A net operating profit of $130,519.23 for the year ended June 13, 1935, has been reported by Howard S. Cullman, trustee of the Roxy theatre in New York. The net compares with a loss of $59,341.59 for the preceding year. The report was filed with Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey. An increase in attendance of more than 39 per cent for the year was indicated in the report.

"The gains made at the Roxy during the first year of trusteeship under Section 77B (of the bankruptcy law)," said Mr. Cullman, "must be credited first to advantageous picture contracts; second, to our policy of providing popular entertainment at popular prices."

Mr. Cullman recently signed a contract giving the Roxy first choice of all Universal product for the new season, and had signed previously for Gaumont-British pictures.

PARAMOUNT NET PROFIT $2,411,000 IN QUARTER; HIGHEST SINCE 1931

Cash on Hand $20,776,000, Compared with $5,209,000 in January of 1933 When Company Went into Receivership

Fixed Charges Are Reduced $11,000,000; Atlas Says It Has No Intention of Going into Motion Picture Business

That the rejuvenated Paramount Publix Corporation has been restored to an improved earnings position is evidenced in a report by the company showing a net of $2,411,414 in the first quarter of this year after depreciation, federal taxes and amortization of bond discount. This compares with a net profit of $5,469,512 for the entire year of 1934, net earnings of $5,076,317 for 1933, and a loss of $19,945,569 in 1932.

(Financial tabulation is on following page).

On the basis of the net returns for the first quarter, Wall Street observers forecast a profit for the company this year in the neighborhood of $8,000,000, reflecting the completion of the reorganization.

As compared with the present report, the first six months of 1934 showed a profit of $3,144,947, and the last six months of the same year a net of $2,324,565.

The amount earned in the first quarter is applicable to interest and preferred dividends on the securities of the newly reorganized company, subject to any additional provisions that may be required for reorganization expenses.

The report was filed in the federal court in New York by Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, counsel for the Paramount trustees, in support of their application for fees for their services in reorganizing the company. The report is for Paramount Publix and subsidiaries, including all companies wholly owned or substantially wholly owned, directly or indirectly, by the trustees, exclusive of certain affiliates and subsidiaries in process of reorganization.

Cash on hand on June 22 last, the report said, was $20,776,000, of which $7,577,000 was in the hands of the trustees. This was exclusive of cash held by subsidiaries still being reorganized. On June 25, there was paid to banking creditors $5,194,000 of the cash, under terms of the reorganization. The company will be reimbursed for this from proceeds of the sale of second preferred stock to common stockholders next month.

The company's cash position compares with $5,209,000 reported by Paramount and subsidiaries Jan. 28, 1933, when the company went into receivership.

Fixed Charges Reduced $11,000,000

A reduction by $11,000,000 in fixed charges since 1932 is shown, the charges for the company and subsidiaries in 1935, principally rents and interest, amounting to $21,000,000, as against the 1932 total of $32,000,000. The improvement in this respect was brought about through abandonment of unprofitable theatre properties, through readjustment and reorganization.

Comparative values of the company's securities at the time of the receivership two and one-half years ago and on July 1, 1935, were cited as evidence of the company's recovery. It was shown that the 5½ debentures were quoted on July 26, 1933, at 8⅛, and on July 1 this year at 96½. Respective figures for the 6 per cent debentures were 10 and 94½, and for the company's stock 1⅜ and 4⅜.

The report referred to the large number of claims filed, and gave the aggregate total as $60,859,242.

A move to compel issuance of new Paramount securities in the reorganization to Sidney R. Kent, former Paramount executive, now president of Fox, and to Jules E. Brulatour, Daniel Frohman and William H. English as executor of the estate of the late William H. English, was planned this week by Hughes, Schurman & Dwight, attorneys.

The securities are being withheld because the individuals are defendants in suits brought by the Paramount trustees, and at the direction of Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe. Counsel was preparing to ask the court to strike out that portion of the order confirming the Paramount reorganization plan which provided that new securities in exchange for the old or allowed to claimants shall be withheld from defendants in two pending suits instituted by the trustees. It is understood the action on behalf of Mr. Kent and the others will serve as a test case for defendants in similar suits.

Atlas Denies Going Into Films

Atlas Corporation, large investment organization which has become an influence in the industry in the past year through acquisition of security holdings in Paramount, Fox and Warners, has no plans or desire to go into the film business as such, according to an official of the company. He said Atlas had invested in Paramount solely for investment purposes, buying the company's bonds at around $30. Paramount's bonds are now selling at approximately $97.

Atlas is headed by Floyd B. Odlum, a member of the Paramount board, and is affiliated with the socalled Fortington creditor group in Paramount, which in turn is represented by three additional Paramount board members and includes Lehman Bros., investment bank, which has two representatives on the board of RKO. These circumstances, together with an interest displayed recently by Atlas in acquiring an RKO investment, gave rise to reports that Atlas would occupy a dominant position in industry finance.

The Atlas statement denying such objectives follows a denial by John D. Hertz, partner in Lehman Bros., who also is a Paramount director and a member of the Fortington creditor group, that the Lehman organization entertained similar ideas. That denial was made before the Securities and Exchange Commission hearing on the Paramount reorganization.

Sam Katz Files Exception

Exceptions to the report disallowing the contract claim of Sam Katz for $281,734 against Paramount were filed with the federal court, and a hearing will be held before Federal Judge Coxe. The report disallowing this claim was submitted to the court by special master John E. Joyce last week and held that under the stock corporation laws a contract employee could be dismissed without any liability on the part of the company for the balance of the employee's contract.

Judge Coxe on Tuesday upheld the report of Mr. Joyce holding that Lawrence Berenson probably had no legal grounds for his $35,000 claim against Paramount. Expunging of the claim will be asked. Mr. Joyce's ruling was made in connection with a petition from the Paramount trustees for leave to settle the claim for $20,000. It was filed for services rendered a Paramount stockholder who sought to prevent stock repurchase agreements.

Application for private sale of the personal property and equipment of the Paramount theatre, Fremont, Ohio, for $1,500, and for settlement of all claims against Allied Owners Corporation and its trustees, will be heard in federal district court at Toledo next Tuesday. The application was requested by Fred H. Kruse, referee in bankruptcy.

In a settlement effected with the Salem Realty Company, Salem, Mass., Paramount acquires the fee in the Paramount theatres in Lynn and Newton, Mass., and a new lease on the Colonial, Haverhill. The realty company agreed to take back four Salem houses, Federal, Empire, Salem and Paramount. As a consideration of the settlement, Paramount's half interest in stock in Salem properties is transferred to Liberty Holding Company, owner of the other 50 per cent.

Paramount theatres in Lynn and Newton, Mass., and the Colonial, Haverhill, are being turned over to Olympia Theatres, Paramount subsidiary.

REPORT THACHER TO BE PARAMOUNT COUNSEL

Appointment of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, law firm headed by former Federal Judge Thomas D. Thacher, as special counsel for Paramount Pictures, Inc., is expected to be announced shortly, according to New York reports.

The firm of Cravath, de Gersdorff, Swaine & Wood held the post for more than 10 years preceding Paramount's bankruptcy, and was succeeded in the reorganization proceedings by Cook, Nathan & Lehman.

Paramount's retention of former Judge Thacher to oppose applications for fees and allowances considered excessive in connection with the Paramount reorganization is believed foreshadowing the appointment of his firm as the company's special counsel.

Abernathy President of Bill Posters' Organization

Leo Abernathy of Pittsburgh last week was elected president of the International Alliance of Bill Posters and Billers of the United States and Canada at the organization's annual convention held in Boston by his defeat of Robert Walker of St. Louis. Mr. Abernathy retired as treasurer to take the place which was occupied by his father. Arthur Thomas Noonan, retiring president, was elected treasurer.

More than 100 delegates to the convention represented the 25,000 members of the union. Coincidentally with the convention the Massachusetts House of Representatives killed a bill for the regulation of billboard advertising in the state.

(E) Includes reserve provided by Paramount Publix Corp. for investment in and advances to Publix Enterprises, Inc., $14,709,039.

(F) Interest on Paramount Broadway bonds has been included on the following basis:

1935—January 1 to March 30, 1935 at 3% per annum on $8,875,000, as per Plan.

1934—May 1 to Dec. 31, 1934 at 3% per annum on $8,875,000, as per Plan.

1933—No interest included as interest for 1933 was not paid and is not payable under Plan.

1932—Interest was paid and is included for the entire year.

Notes:

The results shown for the year 1933, 1934 and the first quarter 1935 include the following:

Paramount Publix Corporation (as per books) including, for the period subsequent to Jan. 26, 1933, the operations of its Receivers and Trustees. Operating results included are after deducting, in the period during which such items were paid, allowances for Receivers, Trustees, counsel and auditing fees, and other administrative expenses of the receivership or bankruptcy. No provision has been made for fees or expenses incurred but not paid.

All companies wholly owned or substantially wholly-owned, directly or indirectly, by the Trustees (exclusive of Olympia Theatres, Inc., Saenger Theatres, Inc., and Minnesota Amusement Co., each in receivership, and their respective subsidiaries, and certain indirectly owned subsidiaries in bankruptcy or receivership).

Trustees' share of net earnings (excluding capital gains and losses) of all partly owned subsidiaries, directly or indirectly owned, (exclusive of certain companies for which data was not available, principally companies involved in receivership, bankruptcy, or reorganization, or the future status of which is uncertain).

The results for 1932 include Paramount Publix Corporation and all wholly-owned or substantially wholly-owned subsidiaries (directly or indirectly owned), including dividends from partly-owned subsidiaries and share of undistributed earnings or losses of subsidiaries 65% to 85% owned, also after providing reserves, to October 1, 1932, for losses of certain subsidiaries less than 65% owned, similar reserves not having been provided for the fourth quarter of 1932.

Programs Seen as Television Problem

The question of program material is probably the most difficult problem yet to be solved by television, according to Andrew W. Cruse, chief of the electrical equipment division of the Department of Commerce.

Returning from a trip to Europe, made for the purpose of studying television development in England, France and Germany, Mr. Cruse reported that this question bids fair to be one of perplexity to the British Broadcasting Company, which plans within the next twelvemonth to initiate a regular television service of three hours a day.

In its experimental picture broadcasts the B. B. C. has used live talent exclusively, but 21 hours of transmission a week bids fair to put an unsupportable burden upon any casts which could be organized except at tremendous expense.

Distance Record in Canada

Using the William H. Peck television system in Canadian tests recently, engineers succeeding in spanning a distance of 72 miles, said to be the first time a vision signal using an ultra short wave of five meters has succeeded in reaching beyond the horizon from the transmitter.

Despite vigorous protests, the Federal Communications Commission has granted to the American Telephone and Telegraph Company permission to build a television coaxial cable between New York and Philadelphia. The grant was made with restrictions looking to prevention of a monopoly in television by the company. The cable is to be used experimentally only.

Members of the commission are said to have been greatly impressed on a recent visit to Philadelphia to look over various systems of television being tried out in laboratories there. They declined to comment for publication on what they saw, however.

International Group Meets

Two new television companies, Majestic Television Company, by John L. Strong, and Yankee Television Company, by George Yankee, have been organized in Detroit.

The Coordinating Television Committee, formed at the suggestion of the International Institute of the Educational Cinema, held its first meeting at Nice, France, recently. Many international television authorities are included.

In Germany television interests plan to erect a station on the Brocken Mountain and connect it with Berlin to serve the western portion of central Germany. Organized opposition by radio set makers is said to be responsible for the fact that France appears to be lagging behind in the development of television.

Color Device Reported

Two Washington scientists, Dr. H. B. Maris and Robert H. Worrall, have developed what is reported to be the first device to apply color to transmitted moving pictures.

Television theatrically is likely first to develop in England, in the opinion of W. P. Lipscomb, 20th Century writer and playwright, on his return recently from a trip abroad. He bases his conclusion on the fact that broadcasting in England is controlled by the British government, which is in a position to coordinate all activities in the desired direction.

Television in the theatre is a development of the future, and for many years will not affect the attendance or the standing of motion pictures, recently declared Harry R. Lubcke, director of television for the Don Lee Broadcasting System on the Coast.

JERSEY CITY PROTESTS ITS SECOND-RUN STATUS

George Skouras Endorses Jersey Journal's Campaign to Lift Community from "Hick Class"

By A. D. MACKIE

Dramatic editor, The Jersey Journal

With film contracts about to be signed for the new season, Jersey City people are anxiously awaiting a reply from film executives and distributors to the city's request for a New Deal in Films—the showing of the same picture at Jersey City ace houses at the same time as these films are presented in New York City theatres.

The public has been generous in the backing of this movement. There has not been a single objection raised toward the goal sought. Citizens voted by ballot and organizations endorsed the campaign. Jersey City theatre managers likewise are anxious to see that the demand is met by the film officials.

Mayor Frank Hague wrote: "I heartily endorse the movement and am of the opinion that the theatre-going public is entitled to this consideration by the distributors." The Chamber of Commerce, with a membership of 1,400, headed the list of organizations fully supporting the campaign.

The whole campaign has now been thrown into the laps of the local theatre men, the film executives and motion picture distributors. The campaign has been laid before all the film companies. These letters read:

"Jersey City people are demanding a New Deal in Films. Your attention is called to a campaign launched by The Jersey Journal for the showing of the same films in Jersey City ace playhouses at the same time as these films are offered in first run theatres in New York City.

"Jersey City, with a population of over 300,000, desires to get out of the "hick class" when it comes to presenting films. The city feels that it is the only city of its size in the United States which is compelled to show 'second run' features.

"Loew's, Fox and Warner Bros. have their own playhouses here. Jersey City theatre patrons can see no reason why these companies cannot present their films at these theatres at the same time as the films are shown in New York theatres. Jersey City does not ask for showings before New York. It will be content with day and date showing.

"Frank Hague, mayor of Jersey City, has backed this New Deal in Films movement. Organizations with memberships of about 135,000 have passed resolutions also endorsing the movement. Citizens have balloted for first run films here. The entire city is in accord with the movement.

"Film contracts for the year are about to be signed. It is now up to you to answer the people of Jersey City.

Are Jersey City first run theatres to be given the opportunity to display the same films in their playhouses at the same time as these films are offered in New York playhouses?

"Jersey City will not stop its clamor for this New Deal in Films. Theatre managers here are wholly in support of the movement. That 'protection clause' demanded by New York should be destroyed. Oft times New York and Brooklyn show the same films at the same time. Why not Jersey City?

"The answer is up to you. This appeal has been sent to the heads of all film companies, to exchange leaders and other theatre executives.

"Jersey City people anxiously await your reply."

George P. Skouras, theatre operator, was among the first to reply to the letter. He backed the movement. The letter from Mr. Skouras read:

"I was very happy to receive your letter referring to the run of motion pictures in Jersey City. I certainly agree with you that a city of 300,000 population should not be placed on a second-run basis and I don't believe there is another town in the country of half its size that is placed in that category.

"The fact that Jersey City happens to be so close to New York should not make any difference, and your example of Brooklyn is proof that it does not make a difference. Furthermore, the fact that Jersey City is not a part of New York City is an additional reason why it should be given the same consideration as is given to other cities of its size.

"I know by experience that the New York theatres which demand and get protection over Jersey City receive no material benefit from their action. As a matter of fact, I don't believe that any citizen of Jersey City, from the economical point of view, would take his car and pay tunnel, bridge or ferry tolls in order to go to New York and see a motion picture. Even if they didn't have to go to this expense I don't believe they would go from the point of view of pride alone.

"Therefore, I consider that this demand for protection is absolutely imaginative and unnecessary. But in my position I fear that I cannot bring any help, for I have been fighting to get this privilege since I took charge of the State theatre in Jersey City and I must confess that I have failed. Before I close I want you to know that as a taxpayer and as the operator of one of the first-run theatres in Jersey City, I personally appreciate your efforts."

RKO to Appeal Award Of Arbitration Board

RKO lost its appeal in the state supreme court, New York, to have set aside the arbitration award found against it in the lease case brought against it by the lessors of the Hollywood and Apollo theatres in New York. An appeal from the court decision is planned.

The arbitration board directed a $40,000 award to the two theatres and ordered specific performance of the lease.

SCHINE, MAJORS SUED IN MONOPOLY ACTION

Lockport, N. Y., Theatre Asking $250,000 Damages; Detroit Suit About to Be Dismissed

Reliance Theatre Corporation, of Lockport, N. Y., has filed suit in the United States district court at Buffalo, against the Schine Circuit, Meyer Schine and associates, and eight major distributors, asking damages of $250,000. The action charges monopoly in restraint of trade, contending that the defendants have conspired to prevent the Palace in Lockport from obtaining first run pictures. Triple damages are sought under that provision of the antitrust laws.

The Schine houses in Lockport are the Rialto and the Hi-Art. The Palace and the Schine houses were before the Buffalo grievance board on several occasions in the past. Last year a settlement was reached, providing that the Palace was to get 17 pictures. Early this year new complaints were dismissed by the grievance board, which was upheld on appeal.

Eight Distributors Named

Defendants are the Schine Chain Theatres, the Dominion Operating Company, Schine Theatres Company, J. Meyer Schine, Louis W. Schine, John A. May and Columbia, Fox, MGM, Paramount, RKO, Universal, Warner and United Artists.

Master in Chancery William S. Sayres recommended to Federal Judge Monet in Detroit last week that the complaint of Jacob Schreiber against Cooperative Theatres of Michigan and Detroit exchanges, charged with conspiracy against the Schreiber theatres, be dismissed. The recommendation was made on the ground that the case was improperly filed as it was not in interstate commerce. The court is expected to hand down a formal verdict at once.

Case Came as Surprise

The case was filed in August, 1934, one month after the booking combine changed from Midstates Theatres, Inc., to Cooperative Theatres of Michigan. At the time Ray Moon, general manager, said the combine was proof against legal actions since all of its members were stockholders and the combine was a stockholder in all the theatres, with complete booking and buying power.

The case, a surprise, charged the combine and local exchanges with conspiracy to prevent the Colonial and other Schreiber houses from buying in open competition with the Roxy, and cited particularly Ben and Lou Cohen, operators of the Roxy, and Mr. Moon. The hearing was started several months ago, but was interrupted by illness of the master in chancery.

The filing of the action followed the withdrawal of several others brought against Cooperative, among them those of Al Ruttenberg, the Iris and the Mayfair, charging conspiracy, and that of Sam Brown, who asked damages of $180,000 in a federal court action. Mr. Ruttenberg and Mr. Brown have since become members of the combine, and the Mayfair has been taken over by the Cohens, who are members.

Mr. Schreiber is said to be considering the possibility of filing the suit again, this time in the state court. Attorneys are said to feel there is little hope of winning there, however, since a recently passed law, under which Cooperative is now incorporated, permits combines for the purchasing and selling of various commodities.

Nebraska Hearings Begin

Argument in the State theatre's $444,000 suit against Lincoln Theatres Corporation, J. H. Cooper, Robert Livingston, Paramount, Warner, Universal, Fox, RKO Distributing, United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was heard before Federal Judge Munger in Lincoln, Neb., last week. The court ruled that most of the matter of striking parts of the plaintiff's petition, could come up as admissible evidence when the trial opens, and said he would rule on others when he returns from his vacation in August.

The defendants asked that 34 allegations either be stricken or made more specific in a recently filed motion. The plaintiff's petition claims the Lincoln Theatre Corporation was organized by defendants Cooper and Paramount, each owning equal shares, for the purpose of controlling exhibition of films in Lincoln and to eliminate competition. The petition also says that this corporation, with others named as defendants, controlled 75 per cent of the total film product.

Kromocolor Building Plant in New Jersey

Construction has begun in Paramus, N. J., on the first building of the new plant being developed by Kromocolor, for the processing and printing under a chemical process which is said to develop the latent color in ordinary black and white negative. The first building is expected to be completed in September.

The company is headed by Dr. Julius Minez of Montclair, as president, and C. D. Brown of West Englewood, N. J., as treasurer. It is said to be building its own color developing machines under its own patents. The company is understood to have contracts for a series of "Mutt and Jeff" cartoons. Hollywood business is being sought, and the company is expected to produce color films for the educational and advertising fields.

Equity Suggests New Players' Salary Plan

Actors Equity, through its official organ, Equity, last week suggested a graduated salary scale for players as a means of preventing worthy plays, in financial trouble, from closing. It is proposed that "after the first two weeks of a play's run all salaries should be on a sliding scale proportionate to the total receipts of the production." At some point of the scale, it was indicated, all players would receive their contractual salaries.

TO NAME ROGERS FOR PRESIDENT

Aden Sheriff, of Norfolk, Neb., who recently attempted to organize a third political party, said last week that Will Rogers, humorist and film star, will be drafted as the organization's presidential candidate at a meeting on August 21.

"It is quite apparent that neither the Democratic nor the Republican parties can stay in control of the people any longer," said Mr. Sheriff. "What we need right now is statesmen, not politicians."

Loew, RKO Set In New York Area

Loew and RKO, with 70 and 40 theatres respectively in the Metropolitan New York area, and the two largest circuits in the territory, are expected to complete purchase of product necessary for the new season without the difficulty which was encountered during last season. Both circuits require a minimum of 156 pictures.

Loew has already closed for 188 films and has an additional 30 films available, representing half of the Warner schedule, not yet disposed of for the metropolitan area. RKO has closed for only 115 thus far, but has available an additional 80 pictures, providing the circuit with 195 as against the 188 for Loew.

Loew has closed with Universal for half of its new season schedule, or 18 features, which, according to James R. Grainger, general manager in charge of Universal distribution, is one of the most important Metropolitan deals Universal has ever concluded with Loew. Last season Loew had a selection of six Universal films, with 30 going to RKO.

The Loew lineup for next season includes: MGM, 52; United Artists, 14; Paramount, 64; Columbia, 40; Universal, 18. RKO has closed for: Radio, 50; 20th Century-Fox, 65, and available are one-half of the schedules of Universal and Warner.

Fox West Coast Unit Plans New Profit Contest

The Intermountain division of Fox West Coast plans a new profit-sharing contest, in which the managers in the division will engage. Under this new plan each manager competes only with the past records of the house, not the phenomenal business done by other houses. The prize is a percentage of the profits. Rick Ricketson, manager of the division, has discarded the old system of spotting definite prizes.

The circuit announces the following manager changes: Carl Smith, manager of the Rialto, Sterling, Colo., and Harold Jones, manager of the Fox, Sidney, Neb., have exchanged places. A. J. Hamilton, manager of the Strand at Rawlins, Wyo., has resigned and is replaced by John Taylor, former assistant in North Platte, Neb., and Billings, Mont.

Warner Budget Up $2,500,000

An increase of approximately $2,500,000 in Warner's production budget for the season of 1935-36 over the budget for 1934-35 was announced this week by H. M. Warner,, president, in Hollywood.

"We are definitely expanding our production activities," said Mr. Warner. "This is a continuation of the policy we have pursued consistently since conditions began to warrant a resumption of the forward policy of our organization. The budget for the production season of 1934-35 was $2,000,000 above that for the preceding year, and for the season of 1935-36 we have appropriated an additional $2,500,000."

A film deal involving close to $1,000,000 in rentals has been concluded between Warner, Balaban and Katz and Great States Theatres Corporation in Chicago. Said to be one of the largest deals closed in Chicago in a number of years, it guarantees the first run showing of all the Warner product, including First National, Cosmopolitan and Vitaphone short subjects.

Involved in the deal are 36 houses in Chicago and 60 located in 22 towns in Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. The Chicago houses are operated by Balaban and Katz and the others by Great States, affiliated with B. & K. Gradwell Sears, Warner western sales manager; Carl Lesserman, district manager, and James Winn, Chicago branch manager, represented Warner in the deal, while Walter Immerman represented B & K, and Jules Rubens acted for Great States.

Japan Is Turning To Sound Pictures

Slowly, but certainly, Japan is turning from silent pictures to sound, and the production of domestic sound pictures has taken a definite upturn, while production of silent films has fallen off correspondingly. Thus does the Japan Advertiser, in its Annual Review of 1934-35, sum up the film situation as a result of a survey of the industry in that country.

It is indicated that the average theatre in Japan grosses approximately 36,000 yen ($10,800) a year, accounting largely for the continued use of silent films, which cost less. In 1934 the country produced 400 feature pictures, 103 of them using sound.

There are 1,718 theatres in Japan, Formosa, Korea and Kwantung leased territory. Of the total 710 theatres are wired for sound, providing a reasonably large market for sound films, since most of the wired houses are in the larger cities. It is also indicated that the trend is away from American films and in the direction of European product. In 1933 American product provided 91 per cent of the importations and in 1934 only 85 per cent.

Harry Hicks, 49, formerly chairman of the Los Angeles clearance and zoning board and part owner of the local Arlington theatre, died at his home there last week following a heart attack.

CODE AUTHORITY TO RETURN $24,000

Liquidation Completed; New NRA Expects to Make Survey of the Film Industry

While it was learned in Washington this week that the new NRA expects to conduct a statistical and marketing investigation of the motion picture industry along with others, the Code Authority in New York announced Tuesday liquidation of its affairs had been completed and that a surplus of almost $24,000 remaining from its operations will be returned to code assenters in good financial standing as of May 27, when code operations were terminated by the supreme court decision. Undeposited checks totaled $7,874.16, cash $15,999.50.

The Code Authority will vacate its quarters in the RKO building next Wednesday, and the following morning John C. Flinn, executive secretary, who has been supervising the windup with a reduced staff, will join Variety, amusement publication, in an executive and editorial capacity.

It was learned also that distributor sentiment does not point to general adoption of a contract rider such as proposed by Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, as a substitute for the regulatory provisions of trade practices in the defunct code. Its adoption, if any, would depend on local conditions, if legality were established, to regulate reduced admissions, double featuring and giveaways.

Examination of the financial operations to July 13 has been completed by Price, Waterhouse & Company, certified accountants.

$341,880 Received

Contributions since Dec. 7, 1933, amounted to $183,089.37 from the producer-distributor group, and $158,791 from the exhibitor group, a total of $341,880.37. In surplus cash, therefore, producer-distributor members will receive $8,567.96 and exhibitor members $7,431.54.

Contributions by industry members between January 1 and June 29, 1935, aggregated $101,709.37, and the proceeds from the sale of furniture, fixtures and equipment totaled $3,632.65.

Though 8,486 exhibitor members, or about 95 per cent of those who had assented to the code, paid assessments for the full year 1934, only 509 exhibitor members had paid a total of $4,284 this year up to May 27, when code operations ceased, though $6,762 was received after that date.

Seven members of the producer-distributor group paid a total of $32,625 on account of 1935 assessments, indicating a sharp reduction from the first year of the Authority's operations.

Expenses for the first half of 1935 exceeded receipts by $13,367.05, which amount was deducted from the credit balance of Dec. 31, 1934.

Mr. Flinn reported the total of individual complaints heard by the 62 local boards was 3,431, and appeals to the Code Authority totaled 536. The standing committee for extras in Hollywood adjusted 981 cases out of 1,065 complaints submitted, and the studio labor committee in Hollywood disposed of 258 cases of a total of 263 complaints.

Meanwhile from Washington comes word that records of the Code Authority and of the local boards, which are to be stored, and other industry data may be requested by the new National Recovery Administration in a complete survey of the motion picture industry with a score of basic industries. This was indicated by William P. Farnsworth, in direct administration of all matters pertaining to the amusement industries, who would conduct the study.

First Agreement Submitted

The Federal Trade Commission announced submission of the first trade agreement, in the wholesale tobacco distributing industry. The commission made public the rules suggested by the industry, which were divided into two groups, one consisting of provisions, the violation of which would constitute an infraction of the law, and the other consisting of voluntary rules, for violation of which no penalty could be imposed. In the last named group was an expression of approval of the labor provisions of the former code.

Some of the distributors again this year are including minimum admission and anti-dual clauses in contracts, but company policy in most instances is reported as flexible.

The grievance board of the Kansas-Missouri Theatre Association at Kansas City received its first complaint, that of R. H. Montgomery, operator of the Mainstreet, Independence, Kan., involving availability of first-run product, a problem resulting from the opening of a fourth theatre in the town.

Elsewhere in the Middle West, code interest was reported at a low ebb, and both in Des Moines and Minneapolis, a majority of independent exhibitors expressed themselves against any new form of regulation, voluntary or not.

Arbitration proceedings in New York resulted in an award for Fox Film against the Bridge theatre for unplayed pictures. Deciding the case were Leo Abrams of Universal, Henry Randall, Len Victor and Sam Reiss.

Legal Committee Planned

Members of industry generally are preparing trade agreements, the Council on Trade Agreements reported in New York this week. The Council, established by the Trade Association Executives of New York City and the American Arbitration Association, recently proposed a model voluntary code, the text of which appeared in the HERALD for June 6.

The Council now finds that while the basic provisions are generally acceptable, some uncertainty exists as to special provisions affecting trade practices that can be included in voluntary agreements, viewed from the standpoint of legality. The Council has decided to create a voluntary legal advisory committee, composed of attorneys in the trade association field.

The Voluntary Industry Committee of the motion picture is deferring action until NRA procedure has been set and code efforts of other industries have been studied.

Dr. Fishman of MPTO Honored Before Trip

Dr. J. B. Fishman, president of the MPTO of Connecticut, was tendered a testimonial party last week in New Haven by 50 members of the MPTO, local exchange managers and other friends, before he sailed for a six-weeks' trip to Europe. Edward G. Levy presided and Barney Calechman of the Howard theatre presented Dr. Fishman with a motion picture camera on behalf of the guests. A farewell dinner also was tendered Samuel Calechman of the Howard, who sailed also.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Curly Top

(Fox)

Comedy Drama

From a viewpoint of commercial showmanship and audience entertainment worth, but few pictures have ever offered as much as does "Curly Top." In most cases the answers to "What makes an outstanding picture?" are illusive and indeterminate. It is not so here. They leap at you with outstretched arms to embrace you like long lost friends.

There is one dominating answer. That is Shirley Temple. There is a host of others. As an example of sound practical showmanship application, it is a convincing demonstration that its producer is not only cognizant of the many problems confronting exhibitors in pleasing the public, but that, in this picture, he knows how to include solutions to them that may be of the greatest value.

Worthy in every way of the great prestige of the amaxing little trouper, there's a story to warm anyone's heart. Shirley and her older sister, Rochelle Hudson, are adopted from an orphan asylum by a kindly, sympathetic John Boles. The children are brought to live in the gentle luxury of a refined home—a veritable heaven on earth to two who had known only the rigid discipline of a charitable institution. Shirley completely captivates the souls of Boles and his aunt, Esther Dale. Boles and Miss Hudson fall in love, a situation tinged with light dramatic fineness as Rochelle becomes engaged to Maurice Murphy. In an inspiring climax Shirley brings the real sweethearts together.

The story is both entertainment and showmanship. There are more of the same qualities in the accompanying production effects. Shirley sings and dances; she acts with convincing artistry. One song, "When I Grow Up," predicts her future career—when she plays adolescent, bride, matron and grandma roles. She mimics the ages in grand style.

Another feature is the child bringing the famous masterpieces of art galleries to life, showing Boles that she really is the little girl who in his dreams brings so much happiness into his life. Boles also sings, as does Miss Hudson.

Yet as Shirley indelibly stamps every sequence with dignity and character, breathing life and gayety into an attention catching story, with its force of intelligent and understanding direction and inspired acting, so, too, should she stamp every bit of all the showmanship that is available with which to quicken patron interest. —McCarthy, Hollywood.

Smart Girl

(Paramount)

Comedy-Drama

Where the principal entertainment, as in this picture, is centered in the work of a supporting character actor and there is comparatively little additional entertainment value in a picture, showmanship necessary to inspire enthusiastic selling becomes a difficult proposition. In idea, "Smart Girl" is a dramatic romance. As it emerges upon the screen, one comedy character performance becomes that audience interesting element.

The yarn has a lost fortune-depression motivating premise. Kay and Pat are sisters. Nick maries Kay. Nick gets a job with an unscrupulous stock promoter. Pat becomes a model for Karl Krausmeyer, wholesale milliner. As she's in love with Nick, Kay starts chiseling with Nick's boss, Courtland. As Krausmeyer's comedy dominates, Nick is made the fall guy for Courtland's illegitimate promotions. Inspired by Krausmeyer, his son Harry is the spearhead of a stunt to double-cross a double-crosser. The oil stocks dealt in, out of which Harry tries to outslick Courtland, turn out to be valuable. Fleeing the wrath of government investigations, Courtland skips to Canada, taking Kay with him. There being legitimate ground for divorce, Pat will marry Nick.

Only of average value as an audience attraction, the name worth of its principal trio being hardly strong enough to create much interest, the comedy provided by Joseph Cawthorn establishes itself as the sole attention stirring angle.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Alibi Ike

(Warner)

Comedy

Typical Joe E. Brown comedy material, with Joe where he prefers to be, on the baseball diamond, this picture combines two outstanding showmanship elements, the comedy with Joe Brown and baseball. Striking directly in the center of the baseball season, there is something for the exhibitor to sell in that element.

The big-headed big shot pitcher from Sauk Center, in the sticks, Joe comes to the big league with a bang, almost passes out when he is ensnared by a clever crooked gambling mob, falls in love and comes through in a big way at the end with game and girl. En route there are laughs aplenty, mostly supplied by the wide-mouthed comedian, of course, but with a number from Roscoe Karns, the catcher. The fact that the film is adapted from a Ring Lardner story should be of selling value.

Olivia de Havilland is the other half of the romantic aspect of the yarn, with Ruth Donnelly, who has appeared in numerous Warner films and is popular, and William Frawley the other two in chief support. There should be fun and laughs and enjoyment for the whole family in the film. There is the baseball theme for small boys, comedy, game and romance—with complications—for men and women.

Frawley, team manager, is in a bad spot, his continuance in his job depending largely on whether he can bring the team out of the cellar, where it has rested so long. He needs pitchers badly, and has hope for the much heralded Brown, star in the small time. Brown comes crashing into the ball park, late, and driving an old car which he cannot stop. He is about as boastful as anyone could be, has a freak and funny windup, and displays an uncanny ability in the strikeout direction. Excuses fall thick and fast and the nickname of Alibi Ike becomes permanently fastened to him.

He meets Frawley's sister-in-law, Miss de Havilland, Frawley's wife being played by Miss Donnelly. Brown immediately proceeds to fall in love with the girl, despite all his earlier protestations that he cares nothing for women. His efforts to buy a ring, meet the girl and the like without suffering the kidding of his teammates, led by Karns, are amusing.

By playing on his vanity, the hick from Sauk Center is taken in by the gambling ring, and he is forced to promise to throw an important game under threat of physical violence. The team owner and Frawley are about to fire him, when he convinces them of his innocence and a trap is set for the gamblers. But Brown opens his mouth too widely, the gang understands and Brown is kidnaped immediately before the game. A hectic few minutes while the team is losing the vital game, then Brown escapes and in car and truck crashes into the ball field to save the day, with a weird home run. The quarrel with Miss de Havilland, the result of Brown's inadvertent remarks to the kidding Karns, while she was listening, is cleared and the romance has an open field.—Aaronson, New York.

Woman Wanted

(MGM)

Melodrama

This is based on an exciting premise. It's 10, 20 and 30 cent melodrama, making use of the theatrical effects that made that type of legitimate entertainment so popular, but produced on a somewhat higher scale. In idea, "Woman Wanted," the title being of definite exploitation quality, is a romance with a gangster menace background which is not lacking in comedy or the madcap adventure ingredients that delight the thrill fans.

In idea the show is of the "gimme the girl, she's got the papers" mode. In that spirit, the plot is cleverly contrived and so developed that the element of suspense tinging the romantic and dramatic phases precludes anticipation of exactly what is going to happen. Lawyer Tony flirts with a girl across a courthouse light well. It develops that she has been framed and convicted of a murder of which she is innocent. Instigators of the dirty work, led by Smiley, want her out of the way, but they also want the papers they believe she has hidden. A thrilling auto crash is framed and as Ann escapes in the excitement, Tony finds the girl with whom he flirted sitting beside him in his car.

From then on it's a series of conflicts among Tony, Ann and the girl Betty, who has engaged herself to Tony, and the gangsters, with melodrama the keynote. When Tony, learning Ann's identity and believing her innocent, keeps her under cover, he gets himself into a jam with the district attorney, which leads to the revelation, following a series of hectic auto and speed boat chases with their accompanying gun battles, that Smiley did the crime for which Ann was convicted.

Built of the materials that usually interest the masses, its particular appeal being directed to those who enjoy tingling action entertainment, a campaign which seeks to stir the curiosity of that class and uses the other romantic, comic and semi-mystery features to intrigue the run-of-the-mill fans, looks to be the best selling medium.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Redheads on Parade

(Fox - Jesse Lasky)

Satire

Although the motivating story is of but ordinary entertainment worth, the feature is an exploitation show of high rank insofar as title, name players, music, uniquely contrived rhythmic dance numbers and spectacular production effects are concerned.

Basically, with the required romantic, dramatic, comic and relative contrasting qualities included, the story is a picture of picture making. As such, in portraying the difficulties sometimes encountered in such an activity and the wiles and strategems created to overcome them, it is quite a ribbing satire of some of the methods in which producers sometimes may indulge. In doing so, it gives many behind the scenes glimpses of the mechanics of picture making. This, ordinarily, and properly publicized, should be an additional interest-stimulating showmanship feature.

Here's how it goes: Magnus' Movie Town Productions meets with financial disaster just as it's in the midst of a super-colossal production. Magnus, the star, Bruce, and publicity director Mathews, are in a swank cosmetic shop when Bruce suddenly has the idea of getting the manufacturer of a brand of red hair dye to finance the defunct production under a cleverly concealed advertising gag. Love interest awakening between Bruce and the shop's attendant, Ginger, Mathews quickly sells Twill on the idea. Everything goes swell until Twill wants to change the story because the script calls for too much romancing between Bruce and Ginger, of whom he is very fond. As Twill bows out, enter another pair of dye manufacturers whose business has been wrecked by the platinum hair mode. Then to the tune of much Kunkel-Redfern comedy, plus romantic complications between Bruce and Ginger and a little dirty work on the part of Twill, production goes ahead. As the lovers are on the outs, Twill minions steal the film on the night it is scheduled for its world premiere. As the audience threatens to tear up the seats, Ginger rescues the print and rushes it to the theatre. There, a digest of what has been seen in the making is projected on the screen, with the romantic song dance numbers and the spectacular parade of red heads. The show is a sensation that makes millions for the producer and backers and reunites the lovers.

In addition to the exploitation features mentioned, interest-stimulating material should be found in the presentation of the red heads, one for each of the 48 states, which provides a localized feature. Naturally Boles and Dixie Lee's singing and dancing should be given the widest possible advertising, as should the spectacular silhouette and reverse dance ensemble numbers.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

We're in the Money

(Warner)

Comedy

"We're in the Money" is the title and about all that is necessary to have every one who plays saying that when box office grosses are checked up, is proper commercializing of its more than ample treasure of comedy entertainment.

Funnier than any of the previous features in which Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell have been teamed as get-their-men maidens, here is a rip-roaring laugh in situation comedy. Fast moving farcical treatment embellishing every word, gesture and bit of action, in which much old-fashioned hokum is combined with plenty that's new and novel, it's the type of funfest that can be presented to patrons with the iron clad promise that the whole is one scream of merry mirth.

This time the girls are a pair of process servers, working for the absent-minded and very much batty lawyer specialist in breach of promise suits, Homer Bronson. Assigned to tab the principal and witnesses in such a suit before a newly enacted statute outlaws such get-rich-quick schemes, Ginger is very much in love with one whom she thinks is a chauffeur. That establishing the romantic contrast, the rest is devoted to wild and wooly foolishness. The manner in which they serve subpoenas on Ryan, flirtatious singing darling of the night clubs, and tough mug Butch are only samples of the hectic stuff that is to follow. The wrestling match between Man Mountain Dean and Chief Pontiac is a wild burlesque of mayhem, Pontiac obligingly dumping Dean into the girls' laps to be served with the papers.

Then, although he has contributed much to the previous gayety, comes Bronson and his hectic auto ride with Courtney, now identified as the principal, and Dinsmore followed by Bronson's crazy trip in a speed boat. With more of the same roaring speed he takes his pair of process servers to Courtney's yacht, where that gentleman, finding out just who Ginger is, sets the situation so that she spends most of her time geting tossed off the yacht and being hauled back again. When the last bit of foolishness has been perpetrated, the show has one of those light dramatic it-was-all-a-mistake endings.

As a key to the show's exploitation potentialities, the limits of which apparently are only one's ingenuity and resourcefulness plus desire to work, presenting Blondell and Farrell as the funniest women on the screen today should be able to arouse an initial interest which word-of-mouth advertising should support in convincing fashion.—McCarthy, Hollywood.

Welcome Home

(Fox)

Comedy

Funny comedy, merged with appealing romantic love interest, all moving to the gala natural tune of a typical small town homecoming celebration, is the material of which this pleasant midsummer entertainment is woven. Wholesome and pleasingly familiar, it has a full quota of laughs in story content, dialogue, situations and action.

The idea of the story, cleverly contrived, smartly acted and directed, is as valuable from an exploitation point of view as it is from an amusement one. In title, locale, cast names and the manner in which it inspires reminiscences, it's something that any aggressive alert showman can sink his teeth into and come up with a unique business stimulating campaign.

After preliminary character identifying sequences, all the action takes place in a small town, Elmdale. Foster, Giltedge and Painless are a trio of sharpshooting financial promotors who have an easy manner of extracting money from the suckers. Foster gets an invitation to attend an old high school reunion. Paced by the atmosphere in which all small towns indulge at such celebrations, Giltedge and Painless see in the populace's exuberance a swell chance for some quick money. But Foster, instead of paying attention to business, goes romantic about Gorgeous, an incident which the jealous machinations of Susan make complicated. Painless and Giltedge manage to get themselves in a jam with the townsfolk which looks pretty threatening until, in the old swimming hole, Foster meets Anstruther, a cross, crabbed old tightwad whom everyone would like to see taken. The trio get together, Anstruther is

Don't Bet on Blondes

(Warner)

Comedy-Drama

With comedy and drama, studded with good dialogue, moving at a fast tempo throughout, this story of the big time bookmaker, who turns from betting to freak insurance and becomes tangled with a girl, romantically and in a sense in a business manner, provides considerable amusement and not a little entertainment.

The cast has good and salable names, headed by Warren William, and supported by Claire Dodd, Guy Kibbee, William Gargan, Vince Barnett and Hobart Cavanaugh, which should give some indication of the comedy material to be expected. The picture has a novel theme, one with which the alert showman should be able to do much in attracting patronage, both masculine and feminine.

A selling campaign which indicates the lively comedy aspects of the story, makes the most of the good cast names and tells something of the romantic complications which develop under extremely novel circumstances, appears to be the type most likely to attract patronage. In that connection clever use may well be made of the picture's title, when it is indicated that the big-time "insurance-gambler," undertaking a policy which insures a girl's father against his daughter's marriage, suddenly discovers that the only way to take her out of circulation is to pursue her himself, and finds that that task is not too difficult.

William quits the betting business, of which he is the kingpin, when he finds crookedness creeping in, especially when Clay Clement, wealthy lawyer, almost costs William $50,000 in bets when he dopes a horse, pepping it up to the point where it wins. Then William turns his attention to freak insurance, on the order of Lloyds, famed English firm, but going that company one better. Kibbee, father of Miss Dodd, is an old southern colonel, a sympathizer of the South, who is writing a book to prove that the South did not lose the Civil War. The income of his daughter, a well-known actress, is important to his work.

Clement, in love with Miss Dodd, persuades Kibbee to take out a policy with William for $50,000 against his daughter's marriage in three years, as a means of vengeance for the manner in which William caught him in the horse doping trick. Clement feels sure he will marry the girl before the allotted time. With the aid of Gargan and Barnett, his two chief assistants, William sets about frightening off every man who comes near Miss Dodd with serious attentions. Finally William decides to take over the matter personally, but before he has reached the point of proposing she discovers the existence of the policy and tells him what she thinks of him and his methods when he does propose.

She decides to go through with a marriage to Clement, and William gives up hope of preventing it. But Kibbee comes to him at the last moment, tells him Clement urged him to take out the policy and that Miss Dodd knew nothing about it before, and William goes into action. He "arranges" that Clement shall be late for his wedding, and as the girl waits for him at the altar William walks in to take his place for the expected conclusion.—Aaronson, New York.

Comedy-Drama

The new child star, Jane Withers, without the physical beauty of Shirley Temple, but with virtually as much ability, naturalness and a definite appeal and attractiveness, scores roundly in a picture which should be especially suitable for children and hence the family, and of a dramatic, comedy character for adults.

In support are another well-liked child player, Jackie Searl, and O. P. Heggie, oldtimer who fits his role as a glove fits a hand. Katharine Alexander and Walter King are the only other players listed in the cast.

The picture is wholly Jane Withers', and the child makes the most of her opportunity. Tears and laughs alternate as she plays, with the ease of a veteran, the role of a hard little West Side New York girl, who steals to help her old guardian, whom she calls uncle, out of a jail sentence, rebels at attempts to make a "young lady" out of her, and finally is reconciled, having both home and uncle.

The selling, which should be directed at the entire family, may well make the most of the child star, stressing her loyalty to her "uncle" and her dramatic attempts to help him and take care of him, her spirited defense of him, and the picture's rollicking comedy.

Jane, a leader of her West Side "gang," goes her merry way, taking care of Heggie, a supposedly once-great Shakespearean actor, who carries a large scrap book attesting to past glories, who spends a large part of his time at various bars, and quotes Shakespeare in lordly manner at great length. Jane, for her part, plays hookey from school consistently. When the truant officer appears, Jane promises to go to school, and Heggie promises to get a job in order to keep her. Then they resume their entertaining rendition of Shakespeare. Heggie, unable to get any other job, takes that of street man at a film theatre, dressed as a general of the Foreign Legion. Insulted by the manager, he fights, is jailed for inability to pay a fine. To raise the amount of the fine Jane steals petty things, and is arrested.

A kindly judge, who understands the case, is visited by Miss Alexander, wealthy woman with bookish ideas on child raising. He persuades her to take Jane. She goes and meets Searl, the pampered, spoiled and too well mannered "experiment" in the upbringing of a child. Under the treatment of Miss Alexander, meaning well but failing to understand the child, Jane is heartbroken, and finally finds solace in the understanding of King, the father. Together they plan to effect the release of Heggie, while Jane works a remarkable reformation in the character of young Searl.

Heggie is released, realizes that the child's future is safer in the fine home than with him, and leaves. The child is stunned, and is comforted by King. The search for Heggie is unavailing. Finally, visiting the old neighborhood, Searl beats the gang's leader, and Heggie is found in the old flat. King and Miss Alexander arrive on the heels of the children, Miss Alexander having learned a lesson in child raising and a bright future being assured for Jane and Heggie.

The picture is packed with human interest material, with laughter and tears.—Aaronson, New York.

McGlusky the Sea Rover

(Associated British Pictures)

Adventure Drama

A. G. Hales created in McGlusky, hero of a long series of stories widely read in England, a romantic "tough" of the Flagg type and, with an equally tough but somewhat more bland sea captain to supply the Quirt element, the film is a British variant on a theme of long established appeal.

Definitely in favor of the picture are its shipboard backgrounds. The he-man stuff of the skipper and the husky stowaway bashing each other, until mutual respect is established, is in its right setting. When the action takes the two into the desert, on a gun-running expedition, realism declines; there is yet another fight in the surf of an incoming tide which is extremely well done, but the Arabs, and the Arab maidens, are not too convincing.

McGlusky, a rover of the world, who depends on his fists and his willingness to tackle any risk for a livelihood, stows away on the ship, Sea Lion, with his dog and a boy protegé. The boatswain ill-treats the dog and McGlusky lays him out, is himself beaten up by the apparently "easy" Captain Mazarin, and gets the boatswain's job. The captain confides to him that, while he is officially carrying arms to a European power at war with Arab tribes, he is unofficially taking machine guns for delivery to the rebels. McGlusky becomes his very efficient ally in hoodwinking Customs officials, but becomes insubordinate when his chief acquires a harem beauty, with whom he himself has fallen in love, and brings her aboard. In a brawl in an eastern port, the girl is killed; McGlusky quits the ship.

The friendship of the two "toughs," persisting alongside their rivalry for the girl, is a story angle, and as a sea story, sparing nothing in the red-bloodedness of its detail. it can be sold to another public. Henry Mollison's acting as the captain is very good, indeed, and Jack Doyle, well known as a boxer, makes McGlusky a convincing fighter.

It is programmer, likely to appeal to those who rate color of individual incident above dramatic values and the niceties of direction.—Allan, London.

Norwegian Sketches

(Phil Brown)

Interesting

There is general interest in this pictorial sketch of the Norwegian country, as the camera moves about over the land, touching upon points of interest in various of the chief cities, then moving to the countryside, there to picture scenes, people, dress and architecture typical of the country. Beautiful scenic effects are achieved in the views of the famous and seemingly unending fjords which are a geographical characteristic of the country.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Who Killed Cock Robin?

(United Artists)

Entertaining

Unusually clever and entertaining is this "free translation" for the screen of the immortal story of the robin and his sudden demise, as prepared by Walt Disney as one of his Silly Symphonies series of cartoons in color. When the foppish Robin, serenading the Mae Westian Jenny Wren, is slain by an arrow, the crowded trial is held with the owl on the bench. This trial is extremely entertaining material. For the juvenile patronage it develops that Robin was shot by the arrow of Sparrow Cupid, is not dead at all, but merely fell for Jenny Wren and landed on his head. Worth special attention.—Running time, 8 minutes.

My Girl Sally

(Universal)

Fair

Only fair comedy material, with a few laughs, this finds Sterling Holloway, lank and lean-voiced, a boy from the farm, called to the big city and the girl he loves by her father, once himself a farmer, who refuses to see his daughter married, under an ambitious mother's compulsion, to a nobleman he does not like. Sterling is sent to get the nobleman for the ceremony, while the father arranges to have the bridegroom-to-be arrested on a fake charge. But Sterling is mistaken for the prince, is taken to the hospital, and only in the nick of time does the girl arrive, where the father arranges a hasty marriage and the prince is proved to be a fake. Average or less.—Running time, 19 minutes.

The Wishing Stone

(Vitaphone)

Tuneful

There is tuneful entertainment of a sort in this number of the Melody Masters series, in which is featured Dave Apollon and his orchestra. Supposedly marooned in the crash of an air liner, one of them uncovers a wishing stone, through the use of which they are transferred from place to place about the world. Mexico, Cuba, New York and elsewhere are their stopping places, in each of which, dressed appropriately, they play the music peculiar to that locality. The result is entertaining.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction No. 11

General Appeal

There should be general appeal in this, as in other numbers of the series, with James Wallington rendering the explanatory dialogue. Oddities the world over are pictured and explained, among them a woman bird doctor in Philadelphia, two Austrian children, phenomenally corpulent, new "buoyancy trousers" for the fisherman, the one-armed typist who breaks all sorts of records for speed, the cat which, as mascot of a fire company, slides down the pole, rides to all fires on the shoulder of the driver.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Amusing

Oswald, in this cartoon, starts business in his service station, with the "assistance" of his young nephew, who arrives on his kiddie-car. He sends his first customer aloft when he gives him gas, the nephew blows up the tires on the stout woman's car until they burst, trails oil all over the place, which is designed for the big car of the plutocratic customer, gives Oswald a shock, and finally shoots car and Oswald into the air on the elevator, which comes down with a bump which junks the car. The customer, undismayed, rides away on the kiddie-car. It is amusing cartoon material of average quality.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Sing, Sister, Sing

(MGM)

Amusing Moments

There are entertaining and amusing moments in this comedy, featuring Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly, as two girls, on their first day—and night—as roommates. Miss Kelly is invited to stay with Miss Todd, who lays down certain rules, among them that each, when she becomes angry at the other, shall sing a little song. Miss Kelly finds first one thing, then another, wrong with the arrangements Miss Todd has made for her "comfort." When Miss Todd walks in her sleep it is the last straw, at which point Miss Todd declares that they cannot make a go of it.—Running time, 21 minutes.

Going Places No. 11

(Universal)

Interesting

Unique among others of this series, this number devotes its entire footage to one subject, a pictorial tour of Rome, the Eternal City. With the clear and interesting explanatory accompaniment of Lowell Thomas to enhance the effectiveness of the tour, the camera shows the recently excavated ruins of the ancient city of Rome, the relics of what was once mighty along the banks of the River Tiber, a galley which has been brought from the bottom of the sea. Contrasts are shown throughout, the old of the Caesars and the new of Mussolini. Also seen in Vatican City, the self-contained city of the Popes. Interesting material.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Los Angeles, Wonder City of the West

(FitzPatrick-MGM)

Interesting

Interest and appeal are in this number of the FitzPatrick Travel Talk series, partly by reason of the unusual facts and odd innovations seen as highlighting Los Angeles and partly because of the excellent use of color in the subject. Picturing variously the interesting and unusual in this fourth largest city in the country, which grew from a tiny settlement in a comparatively short time, the camera shows its odd restaurants, the city's unique architecture and something of the spacious development which is Hollywood.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Double Crossed

(Universal)

Fair

A fairly amusing comedy, in part, featuring the ungainly Sterling Holloway, as the driver of a Hollywood hotel bus who is fired, with buddy, Joey Ray, after an unfortunate incident. Thumbing their way to town, they are given a lift by a girl whose mother owns a hotel in which business is not too good. Ray tells her that Sterling knows all the stars and will bring them to the hotel. The two employ two agents, but when they discover what Sterling intends to pay they send the stars' doubles. The result is success for the boys, since the patrons do not know the difference in any case. The comedy ends rather pointlessly as Sterling is kissed vehemently by Mae West's double.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Three Lazy Mice

(Universal)

Effective

Effectively done in color, this number of the Color Cartune series tells the story of the three mice in the mouse kingdom who hated work, pretended they were blind and were excused. But they wandered too far, were pursued by a ferocious cat, and just in time made their escape to the safety of their kingdom, but without their dark glasses, to find the king waiting for them. The result is dishwashing in the king's kitchen as punishment for their attempt to avoid working. An entertaining cartoon.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Main Street Follies

(Vitaphone)

Good

Tuneful and effective as a short subject musical, this picture features Hal Le Roy, the young tap dancer of the amazingly nimble feet. A musical show author is berated by his producer because the rival has signed Le Roy. He tells the author not to return until he has thought of a book better than the rival's. Finally, giving up in disgust, he returns, and repeats his own book, which the producer had not read. As he talks, the scene, with Le Roy as the driver of an old horsecar of the nineties, is enacted, telling of his romance and the inherited dancing feet of his grandson, Hal playing both parts. With the appropriate costumes and music, the subject is entertaining.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction No. 12

(Universal)

Of Interest

The usual interesting material is to be found in this number of the series, with James Wallington handling the narration. Highlighting the film are seen the catching of large salmon by hand as they fight their way to the spawning ground, the huge new power switch at Boulder Dam, the world's champion chinner, the fire warden's watchtower set in the top of an old tree trunk, the Texas man who has a traveling circus, small but complete, for no other purpose than to entertain children in institutions, without charge.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Catches Holdup Thief

Jack Harber, assistant manager of the Capitol theatre, Atlanta, last week pursued and captured a thief who had held up and robbed the cashier at the box office of $50. The man, Bert Fleming, was held on suspicion of robbery.

Warner Changes Titles

The Warner-First National production, "The Real McCoy," has been changed to "The Payoff." The film stars James Dunn. The Joe E. Brown film, "Broadway Joe," has been changed to "Bright Lights."

Voted Life Membership

G. H. Foster, manager of the Kenton theatre, Kenton, Ohio, has been voted a life membership in the Marion lodge of the Elks, in recognition of 32 years of continuous membership.

HOLLYWOOD CAN'T SEE BURLESQUE $2 TOP
SHEEHAN WINDS UP WITH THREE BIG FILMS
WRITERS GUILD AND ACADEMY IN FINISH FIGHT
56 PICTURES IN WORK; 12 BEGIN, 11 FINISHED

IF the plans of H. K. Minsky go through according to his golden dream, the Pacific Coast soon will be enjoying the somewhat raucous delights of a burlesque wheel.

Last week he opened "Life Begins at Minsky's" at the Hollywood Playhouse, renamed Minsky's Music Hall for the event. The press turned a cordial eye to the new venture, though it shook a reproving finger at the gags.

Minsky, however, is undaunted by criticism. His show, which has been playing on the road, did eight weeks in Miami. With that happy memory in the bank, he feels that all he has to do is to give the Pacific coast time and perhaps a few more strip acts.

His plan is to move "Life Begins at Minsky's" to San Francisco when the run here is completed, and then on to Portland and Seattle, bringing in new shows from New York as they are needed.

The skid road here has supported two burlesque houses, The Burbank and The Follies Burlesque, more or less continuously for some decades. They have weathered numerous campaigns from "reformers," routine police raids as well as a complete indifference from Hollywood.

Whether Minsky's Music Hall in the heart of Hollywood will draw by playing material which has been frowned off the screen is yet to be seen, but so far Hollywood as a whole feels that burlesque isn't burlesque at a two dollar top.

It has been the privilege of but few men, in leaving posts, to indite such valedictories as the last three pictures produced by Winfield Sheehan for Fox Film—"Farmer Takes a Wife," "Curly Top" and "Way Down East."

The first two have been previewed. Both won the sincere acclaim of critics and patrons. "Way Down East," still in production, gives promise of being just as valuable as the others. Its production hampered by a series of unforeseen and uncontrollable incidents, the most discouraging of which entailed the spotting of Rochelle Hudson in place of injured Janet Gaynor, Mr. Sheehan rose to the occasion and inspired his coworkers on the picture.

Writers, producers and executives here are watching with keen interest the Rachel Crothers-Samuel Goldwyn percentage deal, in operation.

Miss Crothers receives no salary or advance from Goldwyn for the screen play. Instead, she will share in the gross when the picture is released, and all through the filming she will have the final say on matters of casting, production and direction. She returned here with the completed script last week. The picture will be called "Splendor."

Her first move was to sign as director Elliot Nugent, who has had considerable stage experience. With Nugent's aid, she is now selecting her cast. Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea will have the top roles, but they were Goldwyn's choice and Miss Crothers wrote her script with their talents in mind. The balance of the players will be cast as she sees fit.

News Flashes

Undercurrent rumblings forecast a fight to the finish between the Screen Writers Guild and the Academy Writers Branch for an inside track with producers on employment squabbles. The Guild has mailed detailed letters to all major studio heads charging as illegal present negotiations being conducted between the academy and producers. The Guild classed these negotiations as in direct violation of the recently passed Wagner bill for collective bargaining. . . . Several thousand dollars worth of RKO property was destroyed in a fire which razed the property department at the Radio ranch. This was the second fire in the same place within a week. Officials are making an investigation. . . . Indications that Judge Paul J. 56 Pictures in Work

With 56 features actually in work, production schedules hit an all-time high record the past week. The pace promises to continue indefinitely with all studios, following the example of 20th Century-Fox, planning to keep busy at a capacity rate. Twelve pictures were started in the week and eleven were finished.

Starting four pictures, 20th-Fox topped all studios for new production. In "Bad Boy," James Dunn has the lead, supported by Dorothy Wilson, Edna Bennett, Tammany Young and Margaret Bloodgood. John Blystone is directing. "Ball of Fire" will present Alice Faye, Raymond Walker, Bebe Daniels, Rosina Lawrence and Mitchell and Durante. George Marshall is directing. The cast for "Beauty's Daughter," which Alan Dwan is directing, will include Claire Trevor, Ralph Bellamy, Ben Lyon, Warren Hymer and Jane Darwell. "Charlie Chan in Shanghai" will again present Warner Oland in the character role, supported by Irene Hervey, Charles Locher, Russell Hickd, David Torrance, Keye Luke, Torben Meyer and Halliwell Hobbes. James Tinling is directing.

Warner started two. "Moonlight on the Prairies" the first western feature attempted by this organization in some time. The cast will be headed by Sheila Mannors and Dick Foran, and will include Joseph Sauers and Ronnie Cosby. D. Ross Lederman is directing. Also underway is "In Love with Love," in which Dolores Del Rio, Everett Marshall, Verree Teasdale, Frank McHugh, Don Alvarado, Jane Froman, Miki Morita and Robert Greig will be seen. Busby Berkeley is directing.

Two pictures likewise began at MGM. The cast for "The Bishop Misbehaves" lists Edmund Gwenn, Norman Foster, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lucille Watson, Reginald Owen, Dudley Rigges, Melville Cooper, Lumsden Hare and Lilian Bond. E. A. Dupont is directing. In "Robin Hood of Eldorado," Warner Baxter has the star role, supported by Ann Loring, Bruce Cabot, William Henry, J. Carroll Naish, Francis MacDonald, George Regas, Bradley Page, Soledad Jiminez, Eric Linden, Edgar Kennedy, Jason Robards and Paul Hurst. William Wellman is directing.

A pair also started at Universal. "The Throwback" will star Buck Jones, with Muriel Evans and Paul Fix in the principal supporting roles. Ray Taylor is directing. In "Alone Together," which Kurt Neumann is directing, Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell and Walter Catlett are the principals.

Reliance's "The Melody Lingers On" completes the dozen starters. Josephine Hutchinson and a newcomer, George Houston, have the lead roles. Other names are Helen Westley, William Harrigan, David Scott, Ferdinand Gottschalk and Laura Hope Crews. David Burton is directing.

Three Studios Complete Two Each

Of the eleven pictures finished, three studios each completed two. MGM's pair are "Here Comes the Band" and "O'Shaughnessey's Boy." In the first-named, which Paul Sloane directed, will be seen Ted Lewis, Virginia Bruce, Harry Stockwell, Ted Healy, Nat Pendleton, Donald Cook, Addison Richards and Spanky MacFarland. "O'Shaughnessey's Boy" has Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper for its principals with Spanky MacFarland, Sarah Haden, Leona Maricle, Clarence Muse, Granville Bates, Willard Robertson and Ben Hendricks in support. Richard Boleslawski directed.

Paramount finished "Annapolis Farewell," in which Guy Standing, Rosalind Keith, Tom Brown, Richard Cromwell, Louise Beavers, John Howard, Minor Watson, Dorothy Vaughn, Benny Baker, Samuel Hinds, William Collier, Sr., Ben Alexander and Wheeler Oakman will be seen. Alexander Hall directed. Also in the cutting room is "Here Comes Cookie," formerly titled "Soup to Nuts." Burns and Allen are featured, with George Barbier, Betty Furness, Andrew Tombes, Rafael Storm, Lee Kohlmar, Jack Powell, Arthur Housman, Edward Gargan and Duke York. Norman McLeod directed.

Universal's pair are "She Gets Her Man" and "Storm Over the Andes." The first-named will present Zasu Pitts, Hugh O'Connell, Helen Twelvetrees, Lucien Littlefield, Eddie Brophy, Warren Hymer, Ward Bond, King Baggott and Louis Vincenot. William Nigh directed. In the second are Jack Holt, Antonio Moreno, Mona Barrie, Gene Lockhart, Juanita Garfias, Grant Withers and Barry Norton. Christy Cabanne directed.

At 20th-Fox, "Here's to Romance," a Jesse Lasky production, was completed. The cast includes Nino Martini, Anita Louise, Genevieve Tobin, Ernestine Schuman-Heink, Maria Gambarelli, Elsa Buchanan, Keye Luke, Reginald Denny, Miles Mander and Pat Somerset. Alfred Green directed.

Radio finished "Old Man Murphy." It presents James Barton, Margaret Callahan, Addison Randall, William Harrigan, Maureen Delaney, Marjorie Gateson, Ray Mayer and Ferdinand Munier. Charles Vidor directed.

"Cappy Ricks Returns" was moved to the cutting rooms by Republic. In it are Robert McWade, Ray Walker, Florine McKinney, Lucien Littlefield, Lois Wilson, Bradley Page, Oscar Apfel and Kenneth Harlan. Mack Wright directed.

Warner finished "Doctor Socrates." Paul Muni is starred and the cast includes Ann Dvorak, Barton MacLane, Grace Stafford, Mayo Methot, Helen Lowell, John Eldredge.

SPECIAL AGENT

Warner

This is a powerful and interesting topical dramatic story being directed by William Keighley, the man who made "G Men." With a gripping, danger packed, romantic element incorporated, it's a combination gangster-undercover federal man production.

It includes much that is promising of smash screen entertainment and available showmanship. It is adapted from a recently published Saturday Evening Post story by Martin Mooney. The screen play is by Laird Doyle, recently associated with "Bordertown," "Oil for the Lamps of China" and the current "Front Page Woman." It deals with the activities of a smart newspaper man, a powerful, ruthless gangster killer and a girl who, while working for the menace, is loved by the hero. It plunges into the G-man theme, when the reporter turns secret Government investigator. While maintaining a semblance of friendship with the gangster, he gets the goods for a recent killing on him by having the Treasury Department set its income tax specialists on his books. Believing them safe, though the reporter and girl have made photostatic copies, the surprise sprung in court is only a meek forerunner of that taking place in the climax when the gangster's henchmen kidnap the girl, following which the Government forces round him up in spectacular, thrilling fashion.

George Brent is the reporter hero, Ricardo Cortez the gangster and Bette Davis the girl. Supporting players include Jack LaRue, Joseph Crehan, Joseph King, Paul Guilfoyle, Robert Strange, J. Carroll Naish and William Davidson.

A unique blending of two kinds of screen material that have demonstrated their entertainment and commercial value, the title is suggestve of the applicable exploitation, with name values of the principal players also serving as an additional feature.

Tentative Titles

Warner

A service story of the Naval Academy, this picture presents again the stars of the West Point backgrounded "Flirtation Walk," Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler. For the most part it was filmed at Annapolis. To a certain extent it is a musical romance; Powell will be heard singing and Miss Keeler seen dancing. However, it is more serious drama with many tense and thrilling moments, through which runs the love story and into which is incorporated the patriotic appeal usually inspired when midshipman student life and parades of the navy are featured.

Story and screen play are by Delmer Daves; music and lyrics by Harry Warren and Al Dubin, and Frank Borzage, who made "Flirtation Walk," is directing.

In the story, Powell, who comes from an old naval family, is a successful radio favorite with little liking for the service or the sea. As the President is shown reviewing the U. S. fleet on its recent visit to New York, Powell's father, Lewis Stone, who is commanding officer, is retired, and Powell meets Ruby Keeler, daughter of another old navy family. Though spoiled by fame and money, Powell, inspired by Miss Keeler's love and wishing to obey his father, enters the academy. With little love for his lot, he becomes a disliked lone wolf and as years pass Miss Keeler becomes a famous dancer. During the final cruise, prior to graduation, Powell so heroizes himself following an accident that he becomes company commandant and wins the sword of honor as the highest type of midshipman. His experiences, which bring about understanding and appreciation of his forefathers, cause him to consecrate his future to the navy.

Players who will be seen in support of the three principals are Ross Alexander, Dick Foran, Robert Light, John Arledge, Eddie Acuff, Martha Merrill, Mary Treen, Howard Wilson, Frederic Burton and Joseph King.

HERE COMES COOKIE

Paramount

Cyclonic, bizarre comedy being the theme of this production, it is also the key to its showmanship. As it is being made, and with any sizeable part of all that is being included in production being retained in the final film, exploiteers are assured of more than enough suggestions for slambang wild and wooly stuff to accommodate all available outlets.

George Barbier leaves control of his money to daughter Gracie Allen while he takes a vacation. Kindly Gracie, first reducing George Burns' wages to eleven cents a week, reads that a lot of actors are out of work. Her tender heart-strings jerked to the limit, she fills the mansion with all kinds of good, bad and indifferent vaudeville acts and has them all rehearsing with the idea of staging the show of shows. All the money is spent and sister Betty Furness is compelled to bring father Barbier back by the hitchhike route. They find Gracie putting on "Romeo and Juliet" before a gang of thrilled producers. They offer her a Hollywood job. Barbier is glad that she can take it, takes Burns along with her, as long as he can stay in New York.

In addition to the names mentioned, the show presents Jack Powell, world's champion trap drummer, along with Andrew Tombes, Rafael Storm, James Burker, Lee Kohlmar, Duke York, Arthur Housman, Edward Gargan and Eddie Dunn.

Shaping up as a ridiculous funfest in every phase, the production is adapted from an original story by Sam Mintz and Don Hartman, with Hartman credited with the screen play. Direction is by Norman McLeod, a specialist in comedy production with such features as "Horsefeathers," "Monkey Business," "It's a Gift" and "Many Happy Returns" to his credit.

PURSUIT

MGM

"Pursuit" is the title and the literal meaning of the word is what this picture is—a series of exciting and dangerous chases, all serving as a background for the production's romance, drama, comedy and suspense, none of which qualities is being ignored.

The yarn is an original by L. G. Blockman, the screen play by Wells Root with added dialogue by Robert Benchley. It is being directed by Edwin L. Marin, who has made several of MGM's less pretentious but fairly popular attractions.

For the type of story and the character of the parts played by the two leading players, their casting has a unique showmanship angle. It presents the star of "Public Hero," Chester Morris, with Sally Eilers, who, despite more recent credits, is always remembered as the star of "Bad Girl." The remainder of the supporting cast, while boasting no outstanding box office names, does include many favorably known players such as Henry Travers, C. Henry Gordon, Scotty Beckett, Dorothy Peterson, Granville Bates, Minor Watson, Dewey Robinson and Erville Alderson.

Morris is an aviator whose specialties are such undercover things as flying cargoes of bootleg liquor and smuggling aliens. Sally Eilers is a woman detective. They are engaged by his mother to take a little boy, Beckett, out of the country. She will pay a large sum to get him out of his in-law's clutches. Their experiences while attempting to do so are packed with action, which brings the lovers into romantic conflict. When there is a much larger reward offered by the in-laws to deliver the boy to them, Morris and Miss Eilers seek to doublecross each other until rough and tough Morris, putting the question up to the boy himself, turns softie and carries out his original assignment.

SHE GETS HER MAN

Universal

In essence this story is a hectically atmosphered gangster comedy being played to a production tune of ridiculous satire and burlesque. The yarn is an original by Abel Kanel, who also adapted, and by David Diamond. It is being directed by William Nigh, who numbers among his recent pictures "Monte Carlo Nights," "Two Heads on a Pillow" and "Sweepstakes Annie."

A glance at the cast is illustrative of the production's comedy flair. The heroine is Zasu Pitts, recently in "Ruggles of Red Gap" and "Going Highbrow." She is supported by Hugh O'Connell, Helen Twelvetrees, Lucien Littlefield, Edward Brophy, Warren Hymer, Ward Bond, Bert Gordon, Virginia Grey, King Baggot, Phil Dunham, Lola Nesmith and Louis Vincenot.

Zasu Pitts, cook in a wayside restaurant, accidentally frustrates a bank holdup when, fainting, she falls on a button that sets off all manner of siren, tear-gas and gun signals. The gangsters, thinking they are confronted by a new kind of G-man, dub her the Tiger Woman. Reports of her exploits reach O'Connell, imaginative but temporarily at liberty publicity agent. Signing her up, he gives her a prepared speech which, when delivered to clubs and organizations, plays hob with the gangsters' rackets. They decide to kidnap her, but she's missing anyway, causing her manager and the mobsters no end of worry. Finally chief mobster Brophy gets hold of her and, as he makes love, tries to sell the frightened woman, the idea of becoming the mob's moll. With her to organize, as she has organized its foes, everything will be grand, but she delivers the only speech she knows to the assembled thugs,

STORMY

Universal

As a showmanship feature the motivating premise of this story, the wild horse idea, has long been dormant. In substance this is an action adventure story, supplemented by the usual romantic accompaniment, and vividly colored by bad man melodramatics. It's the yarn of a young man and his great love for a domesticated colt, son of a famous race horse, that, following a train wreck, went wild. As the human element of the production concentrates on developing a promising human interest story, which causes a wide breach between two brothers and brings love to the boy and daughter of one, the picture moves to the pace of a series of spectacular horse stampedes, in the climax of which the boy saves the villain, after the girl has frustrated her uncle's plot to kill Rex and his wild mates.

Picture is adapted from the novel of the same title by Cherry Wilson, with screen play by George Plympton and Ben Kohn. Direction is by Louis Friedlander, who, though recently credited with "The Raven," has specialized in outdoor action pictures.

Noah Beery, Jr., making his first real starring appearance, will be seen in the title role. Another young player, Jean Rogers, has the romantic lead, J. Farrell Macdonald appears as the kindly brother who took the homeless Beery under his wing, and Fred Kohler is the villain. The famous Rex, King of Wild Horses, will be seen as the animal hero in whom as much if not more interest is centered than in the humans, Also to be seen are a number of western actors including Raymond Hatton, James Burtis, Cecil Kellogg, Ken Cooper, Jim Phillips, Jack Sanders and Jack Shannon, in addition to the Original Arizona Wranglers, hillbillies of radio note.

RED SALUTE

Reliance-UA

In relation to story content, despite the controversy that it is quite apt to arouse, this title is of unique value. Fundamenally, the yarn, backgrounded by a graphically produced modern topical situation, is a dramatic romance. It is the story of a college girl who, becoming saturated with the idealism of new economic-political thought, causes no end of trouble to her deeply rooted American family, friends and particularly herself. Involved with a classmate whose radical tendencies have made him a sensational headline figure, she is compelled to flee the country. The manner in which she surreptitiously returns precipitates a situation wherein the typical American youths, aided by the man who helped the girl back into the country, make short work of the radicals. Out of her experiences the girl gets a full realization of the value of America's most sacred heritages.

The yarn is an original screen play by Humphrey Pearson with added dialogue by Elmer Harris and Manuel Seff. It is being directed by Sidney Lanfield.

Barbara Stanwyck is the central character. The supporting cast includes Robert Young, Hardie Albright, Ruth Donnelly, Cliff Edwards, Gordon Jones, Purnell Pratt, Arthur Vinton, Nella Walker, Paul Stanton, Edward McWade and Henry Otho.

The idea of which this story treats looms as showmanship material that is both interesting and provocative. Several similar incidents, in which the collegiate and high school youth of the country have been involved recently, give it the value of headline topicalness seldom available to screen attractions. While it undoubtedly will serve as a preachment, there is no question that there is also a novel entertainment quality, the combination of which automatically suggests the type of exploitation necessary.

ANNAPOLIS FAREWELL

Paramount

This picture, most of which was filmed at the Naval Academy in Annapolis, thus guaranteeing authentic actual background color, heroizes the old seadog. It's the yarn of a veteran naval officer, Guy Standing, to whom the navy and all its proud traditions are the most sacred thing in life. While he endeavors to instill his high idealism into Tom Brown, a young middie, he also lends a helping hand to the youth's romantic inclinations. These prove a disappointment to both. The old man sees in Annapolis Harbor his old ship, the one on which he fought during the Spanish War. He boards it, to renew old memories. It is made the target for gunnery practice. The old man, living his exciting war life over again, takes command of the deserted, shell drenched ship and goes about the business of giving orders to officers and crew as though he was in a major naval engagement, going down with his pride, the old Concord, as it sinks under a deluge of fire.

The picture adapted from a short story by Stephen Morehouse Avery, included picturizations of all the colorful naval student life during their most colorful graduation days. The screen play is by William Slavens McNutt, Grover Jones and Frank Cravens. Direction is by Alexander Hall.

With the locale and character of the story promising much unique and high interest-creating exploitation, the cast also lends itself to showmanship attention. In addition to the principals, Standing and Tom Brown, the production features Rosalind Keith and Richard Cromwell, about whom the romantic conflict centers. Others who will be seen are John Howard, Benny Baker, Louise Beavers, Samuel Hinds, John Darrow, Ben Alexander, Minor Watson, William Collier, Sr., Dorothy Vaughn, Brady Kline and David Newell.

Illinois Theatre at Macomb to Be Remodeled

Contracts have been awarded for extensive alterations to the Illinois theatre, at Macomb, Ill., which is owned and operated by A. L. Hainlane. Included in the remodeling are to be a completely new front to the theatre, a larger lobby, more conveniently placed box office and a new balcony and lounge. The house will be reopened following the renovation the first week in September. The orchestra floor will also be reseated.

Kipling Approves Script, Says Producer Hornblow

Arthur Hornblow, associate producer for Paramount, who returned last week after two months abroad, declared he had conferred in England with Rudyard Kipling relative to Sidney Howard's script on "The Light That Failed," Kipling book. Mr. Hornblow will produce it as the first of six he will produce under a one-year contract. He said Mr. Kipling has approved the script and that Gary Cooper will be starred.

King Wins in Managers' Drive of Warner Theatres

Jay King, manager of the Yorktown theatre, last week won the first prize in the Philadelphia Managers' Parade, drive for business conducted in the Philadelphia zone of Warner theatres. The award was made by Ted Schlanger, circuit head in the territory. Nineteen other managers received prizes contributed by various distributors for the best work, with respect to gross and exploitation, on the pictures of the various companies.

BRITISH TIGHTEN BARS ON PERCENTAGE SALES

Warn Exhibitors Planning to Buy Theatres to Be Certain Owner Has Clean Slate

by BRUCE ALLAN

London Correspondent

A sidelight on the business situation created by percentage booking is provided by a special announcement from the Kinematograph Renters' Society this week. Exhibitors are warned that any individual found making false returns, or retaining a six-day booking for Sunday, will be "barred from further trading."

The significance of this statement rests in its postscript. It is pointed out that cases have arisen of "barred" halls changing hands. The Society therefore announces that "removal from the barred list is not a necessary consequence of a change of proprietorship," and suggests that intending purchasers of halls shall first ascertain from the KRS that the old owner has a clean slate.

The annual report of the KRS made it plain that, since percentage became standard practice, a whole lot of the energy of the headquarters staff had been devoted to the discovery and punishment of box-office fraud. But the new announcement shows that KRS thinks it necessary to employ special means to stop up the loophole of a quick theatre sale.

Rentals Again a Problem

One of the most important factors is the enormously greater proportion of receipts which goes to distributors. At the same time the KRS was issuing its warning, branches of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association were considering the General Council resolution passed at Cardiff in favor of reduced rentals and a maximum of 40 per cent. Although the Council has refrained from publishing the results until complete, there can be no doubt that exhibitors, by a very big majority, will endorse the Cardiff policy. Whether they will stick together and make its application possible by entrusting the Council with punitive powers is another matter.

The point at the moment is that theatre men declare they cannot pay present percentages and remain in the business, while distributors warn them that if they try to evade payment they will be put out of business. This might be an instance of an irresistible force encountering an immovable obstacle if one had any faith in irresistibility of CEA resolutions.

Exhibitors and the Quota

While they chew the hard nut of percentages, exhibitors also are engaged with the somewhat more digestible problem of the British film quota. Here again they are likely to be in direct opposition to another section of the trade, but the British producers are scarcely so formidable a body as the distributors, and it may be that in this case the CEA really will be able to influence events.

Producers want an intensification of the quota provision of the Films Act, aiming to eliminate the "quickie" by a £10,000 minimum cost clause. Exhibitors also want to get rid of the "quickie," but it seems very doubtful that they will accept the producers' remedy. At present, official CEA policy looks like settling down to the demand of a reduction of the exhibitors' quota to 10 per cent, against the 20 per cent carried by distributors.

The most important factor in this situation was pointed out by Thomas Ormiston, a member of the General Council who is also a Member of Parliament. The only chance of an act amending the Films Act was, he said, that all the sections of the trade should agree upon a suggestion for the President of the Board of Trade. This, obviously, rules out the exhibitors' hopes of relief as well as the producers' wish for increased benefits. The only individual who is likely to find consolation in the situation is the distributor, who may find in the Ormiston reading of the situation a promise of an indefinite postponement of Films Act revision in any form.

Whatever else the act has done, in its current form it has created an unexampled demand for British studio space. It is practically impossible to book a floor for use before October.

Kalmus Sets British Plant

Herbert T. Kalmus sailed from London Tuesday after having formed Technicolor, Ltd., a wholly owned American company. Finances for the British plant will come from Sir Adrian Baillie, Alexander Korda, and Gerrard Industries, with Mr. Kalmus providing the technical staff. Operation is to start in early 1936, with the companies' facilities available to all producers. Mr. Korda said that the Denham Studios, built for color work, also will be open to all producers. Mr. Korda's first color film, to start in September, probably will be "Elizabeth the Queen," with Natalie Talmus color director.

Herbert Wilcox also is planning a color film.

Tax Relief Celebrations

The trade signalized the successful Entertainment Tax campaign on Wednesday last by a luncheon at the Trocadero at which Alex King, the Scottish circuit chief who acted as chairman of the Tax Committee, was guest of honor. His big share in a campaign which succeeded in freeing the sixpenny seats was recognized by the presentation of an album, signed by his coworkers, and a cheque for £565. Mr. King gave silver cigaret boxes to members of the committee and a silver cigaret case to W. R. Fuller, general secretary of the CEA. Another gift was a silver tea service to Mrs. King. Altogether, the testimonial fund totaled over £1,000, a remarkable tribute to Mr. King, who is one of the hardest workers in the trade in all communal matters.

General Theatres Plan Opposed

The opposition of a section of preference shareholders to the plan of reconstruction of General Theatres Corp., Ltd., was, as had been expected, carried into court this week, when the necessary application for sanction was made before Justice Eve in the Chancery Division.

The official plan provides for a reduction of capital from £2,000,000 to £549,000. The opposing shareholders dispute the reality of this loss and demand an investigation by independent auditors. They declare that the theatres have not been properly valued, question the efficiency of the Gaumont-British management, which it is proposed to continue, and claim that the general effect of the plan is to extinguish £1,500,000 of capital in a competitor of Gaumont-British, in the interest of that concern. The application was adjourned.

Goldwyn Owner of U. A. Coast Studio

Samuel Goldwyn, through the purchase last week of 20th Century's 50 per cent interest in the United Artists Coast studio, has become sole owner of the plant. He is expected to put Abe Lehr, his general manager, in charge of the studio and to lease space to producers releasing through United Artists. The studio corporation is separate from the United Artists company.

Mary Pickford has been named first vice-president of United Artists, succeeding Joseph H. Moskowitz, who is expected to join 20th Century-Fox. Miss Pickford, it is indicated, will take an active part in the distribution affairs of the company. Arthur W. Kelly and Harry D. Buckley have retained their positions as vice-presidents. Harry J. Muller has been named treasurer, replacing William P. Phillips, resigned. Lloyd Wright has been named secretary, replacing Bertram S. Nayfack. Edward C. Raftery has succeeded Mr. Muller as assistant secretary. The new board of directors includes Miss Pickford, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Mr. Goldwyn, James Mulvey, Dennis F. O'Brien, Nathan Burkan and Mr. Raftery.

Miss Pickford will produce five or six pictures. She is in the East to confer on her first novel, "Demi Widow," as a possible vehicle.

Al Lichtman, president, has named Harry Gold, formerly eastern sales manager, as assistant general sales manager; Paul Lazarus, former western sales manager, as assistant to Mr. Lichtman in charge of exchange operations. Charles Stern, formerly assistant to Mr. Gold, is now eastern sales manager, and Jack Goldhar, former assistant to Mr. Lazarus, is now western sales manager.

David O. Selznick has signed George Cukor to a long term contract as a director, the first to be signed to direct for the new Selznick Productions, which will release through United Artists. Mr. Cukor will begin work when he completes "Sylvia Scarlett" for Radio and "Romeo and Juliet" for MGM.

The first nine releases of United Artists will be: August 9, "Call of the Wild;" September 6, "Dark Angel;" Sept. 13, "Red Salute;" Sept. 27, "Barbary Coast;" Oct. 4, "The Man Who Could Work Miracles;" Oct. 11, "Charlie Chaplin in Modern Times;" Oct. 25, "The Melody Lingers On;" Nov. 8, "100 Years from Now;" Dec. 25, "Shoot the Chutes."

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Cora Sue Collins, Jimmy Butler and Jimmy Baxter for roles in "Dark Angel," playing the child parts for Merle Oberon, Fredric March and Herbert Marshall. United Artists will release the film.

Theatre Stench-Bombed

The Tower theatre in Kansas City was the object of a stench-bombing last week just prior to the last show of the evening. Joe Redmond, assistant manager in charge, was able to clear the house in a short time with the use of perfume, and most of the 300 to 400 patrons who had left returned to see the film. No reason could be assigned for the attack.

TECHNOLOGICAL

By F. H. RICHARDSON

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 275 (A) What effect will low line voltage have on the amplifier? (B) What will be the effect of high line voltage? (C) What three general methods of coupling the photo-cell (P. E. Cell) to the main amplifier are in general use?

Note. In the new Bluebook the term "photo-electric cell" has been shortened to "photo-cell," hence hereafter we shall refer to it either as the P. E. cell or the "photo-cell."—F. H. R.

Answer to Question No. 269

Bluebook School Question No. 269 was: (A) Should the projectionist wait for an exciter lamp to burn out before replacing it? Just at what point should it be replaced? (B) Explain why it is of importance that the horizontal position of the exciter lamp filament be exactly correct with respect to the optical system light slot. (C) How often should the exciter lamp be cleaned?

The engineers answer thus: (A) An exciter lamp should be replaced when the interior of its glass envelope begins to show discoloration. When this condition occurs, the light emitting efficiency drops while the current consumption remains about the same as that of a new lamp. Also there is the possibility that the lamp may fail during a show, which is of course a thing to be avoided. (B) If the position of the filament be too high or too low, the amount of light falling upon the optical slit will be reduced and in consequence the light at the photo-cell also will be reduced. This will cause reduction of input signal to the amplifier, and it will be necessary to increase the volume control setting of the amplifier to compensate for the reduction of input power. The projectionist therefore should check the filament position very carefully. (C) The exciter lamp bulb should be cleaned every day, preferably before the start of the day's performance. A piece of clean cloth or Kleenex paper should be used."

The following projectionists made acceptable answers: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; D. Danielson; A. F. Sprafke; R. J. Arntson; H. Edwards; C. Oldham; T. Van Vaulkenburg; B. DeVietti; F. G. Paulsen; M. and J. DeVoy; O. Allbright; P. and L. Felt; D. Goldberg and L. Hutch; N. L. Haynes and A. Richardson; F. H., S. and P. Dalbey; P. Itt; B. L. Korda, R. S. Danielson and R. D. Jackson; T. N. Onby; L. Klar and F. H. Klar; H. Pitchkey and C. Mellinger; L. R. Doty; B. T. Hawkins; E. Hodson and J. Johnson; L. M. and C. B. Traxler; G. Thompson; R. D. Lanning; F. L. Savlor and G. N. Guidotti; A. L. Dodson and F. L. Benton; H. T. Anderson; E. Mantol and H. Hughes; B. S. Howard; L. R. Stanley; H. Davidson; T. Turk; B. H. Sanders; J. Gensen; K. Y. Spencer and D. L. Lode; L. H. Joy and B. Emmerson; M. and S. T. Gibson; R. and K. Wells; R. D. Oberleigh and J. Lansing; D. Howard and J. Jurts; K. Kirkpatrick, J. Willis and T. L. Stein; N. C. Bandman; B. H. Thaller and S. Spooner; R. Carmody and P. L. Stone; D. L. Sinklow; T. Tomlinson; U. J. Jackson; L. M. Evans; D. Lally and F. Ferguson; O. T. Stone.

(A) Messrs. Rau and Evans say: "No, the projectionist should not wait for an exciter lamp to burn out before replacing it. A new lamp should be installed as soon as (a) the filament is not perfectly straight, or (b) the bulb becomes noticeably darkened on its interior surface, or (c) the bulb becomes in any degree loose with respect to its base, or (d) any bright spot or spots develop in its filament. Bright spots indicate the filament is at the point of burning out. In general an exciter lamp should be replaced with a new one when its condition indicates likelihood of sound suffering in any degree because of that condition."

Which is an answer I cordially invite the engineers themselves to read. However, I understand. They had one thing in mind and did not stop to consider the other things which they of course knew perfectly well and would call for the installation of a new lamp.

In his answer Brother Sprafke says: "The projectionist who waits for an exciter lamp to burn out is merely looking for trouble," which is very true. The wise projectionist avoids trouble by preventing its arrival.

Paulsen says: "To permit an exciter lamp to remain in use until it is in danger of burning out is exceedingly poor practice. What small percentage of saving in cost is effected by so doing is more than absorbed by loss in prestige in the mind of the disgruntled customers. . . . Personally I have noticed that shortly before reaching the burning out stage the filament will assume a distinctly crystalline appearance, in which condition it is so brittle that a sharp tap of the finger on the lamp will cause it to break."

F. H. RICHARDSON'S NEW BLUE BOOK OF PROJECTION

A new edition of this famous book is now on the press. Projection, sound reproduction and trouble-shooting all in one compact, handy volume of 700 pages, including 153 illustrations of hook-ups, wiring diagrams and schematics.

Experts consider it the most up-to-date and practical projection manual on the market. Contains an extremely simple index system for instant use in emergency breakdowns. A book that should be part of every projection room in the country. Order early and get an original author's autographed copy.

Paulsen has been on vacation. He sent an excellent answer to our last question, but it came too late.

(B) Sprafke says: "There is no choice with regard to the vertical and horizontal position of the exciter lamp filament. It must be in perfect alignment with the optical slit both ways, or maximum results cannot be expected. The output of the photo-cell depends entirely upon its condition and the amount of light reaching it from the exciter lamp through the slit. The adjustment of the filament is very fine and must be perfect."

Very many misunderstood this question. The vertical position was meant to indicate the height of the filament with relation to the optical axis, not its own position, which is of course horizontal.

DeVietti says: "The exciter lamp filament must be exactly at the right position vertically with respect to the optical system light slot. If the slot is to be illuminated evenly throughout its length (as it must be for perfect results), it stands to reason that the filament must be at the exactly right point vertically."

(C) More than 600 answered "once a day," or in words to that effect. Danielson elaborates thus: "Once each day, or more often if signs of dirt appear."

G. E. Doe gives perhaps the best answer, as follows: "The exciter lamp globe should be cleaned thoroughly before starting each day's run. It is my practice to use a soft, clean cloth upon which a bit of talcum powder has been dusted. The powder I find does one of two things. It removes any possible faint finger marks, or if they are "burned on" it makes them visible, whereupon they may be removed by a bit of pure alcohol mixed 50-50 with clean water and kept in a bottle for such purposes. It is highly essential that the exciter lamp be perfectly clean."

New 16mm. Projector

The S. O. S. Corporation, sound equipment manufacturer, has announced a new 16mm. sound projector, called the Cinemaphone 16, and designed for use in schools and other non-theatrical locations as well as theatres.

Expansion Reported

It is reported in Cleveland that Schine Enterprises plans the acquisition of eight or 10 more theatres in towns of over 10,000.

INTERCINE COMMENTS

LEAGUE MAGAZINE ON SCREEN "ART"

To the Editor of the Herald:

The current issue of the League of Nations magazine, Intercine, makes the following comment on my article, "The Fallacy of the Art Theatre," which appeared in the March 30th issue of Motion Picture Herald.

"It is very rare today that a renter's good sense is disproved by the unreasonableness of the big public. In Griffith's country (meaning America) motion picture art is now considered as a tiresome article for the European export trade, something which has had its day and has been liquidated by American sound technique.

"A characteristic symptom of this may be found in the article by Herman G. Weinberg, 'The Fallacy of the Art Theatre,' published in Motion Picture Herald. Weinberg is the manager of a small cinema in Baltimore."

Then they go on to quote two paragraphs of my article, as follows:

" 'There is no such thing as the "art" theatre, though the word is bandied about a good deal still. That term died with the passing of the silent film. The sudden advent of the talking pictures spelled once and for all the doom of that plucky litte group of intimate theatres that comprised "the little cinema movement" in America between the sadly lamented years of 1927 and 1931-32. Then, anything that came from Europe bearing the label "Made in France," "Made in Russia" or "Made in Germany" was treasure to be gobbled up by the cinema elect, the so-called high-brows, the intelligentsia (horrid word!).

" 'A lot of celluloid junk was palmed off in those days under the hallowed aegis of art. It was comparatively easy to make a small fortune running these films, usually obtained at cheap rental, and sometimes running two, three, four and five weeks with almost no effort. Advertising space was cut to an absolute minimum. A personally subscribed mailing list took care of the minority clientele anyway. And the critics, fed up with the sameness of the Hollywood opera, were most kind. The result was a boom time in miniature for those half dozen or so entrepreneurs (easily recognizable but most of them since fallen into a kind of disrepute) who fostered this enterprise.' "

"Those unhealthy conditions were later eliminated, as Mr. Weinberg assures us," the Intercine writer goes on. "We must remember that Hollywood, which was absolutely incapable during the period of the silent film of rivaling the art of the Germans in camera work and lighting, or the art of the Russians in dramatic power, had now beaten everyone in the field of sound reproduction. The European films cannot compete in this department today, not even the 'specialized halls.'

"If we have understood rightly, then, art has been vanquished by technique. Thus, if in the near future the teaching of cinema art becomes a subject in school curricula—and we learn that Dr. Johannes Eckardt and Frank Beberecht are preparing for the German high-schools an introduction to the study of cinema art with a sub-standard film full of examples of 'cinema-art'—the pupils will understand from the beginning that it is a matter of historical principle."

Thought this reaction to my article would interest you.—Herman G. Weinberg, Little Theatre, 523 North Howard Street, Baltimore, Md.

PROTESTS CRITIQUE ON "BECKY SHARP"

To the Editor of the Herald:

"Life," as you are probably aware, publishes a "Stop-Go" guide to the movies, theatres and sports. I just picked up its August issue and find it lists "Becky Sharp" with a yellow caution sign and marks it suitable for children.

Of "Becky Sharp" Don Herold says:

" 'Becky Sharp,' all colored up and no place to go, but if you are clinically interested in colored souvenir post card art as applied to moving pictures, don't let me stop you."

I have written Don Herold a letter, a copy of which I enclose.

This movie guide that "Life" publishes is taken seriously by "Life's" readers throughout the country and if Don Herold is going to continue to publish this kind of rot he sometimes does, I should like to start a court action to compel him to change his first name.—Don Holbrook, Trade and Technical News Service, Albany, N. Y.

Mr. Holbrook's letter to Don Herold follows:

Dear Mr. Herold:

Your criticism in August issue of "Life" of "Becky Sharp" is terrible. You have lost sight entirely of the dramatic perfection of this comedy. It's a pleasing play if you like that sort of comedy. It requires a certain amount of literary education to be able to enjoy it. I personally viewed "Becky Sharp" at Radio City Music Hall. Here is what your criticism should have said:

" 'Becky Sharp,' English comedy done in Technicolor; well acted; lines follow original story. Life of cultured English adventuress living in Napoleonic era. Gorgeous depiction of ball at Waterloo on eve of battle. Actors wear little too much makeup and brief intermission between reels might ease eye tension of audience. Technicolor has great possibilities for musical comedy and grand opera productions.

"Not suitable for children."

I am sending a copy of this letter to the editor of Motion Picture Herald, which publication I happen to represent at Albany. Many, many years ago, about 25 to be exact, I was writing dramatic criticisms of theatrical productions, and what appealed to me about "Becky Sharp" was the superb acting of the various characters—they were English characters depicting refined barber shop comedy.—Don Holbrook.

Weld Erpi Officer

Lincoln H. Weld was named assistant treasurer of Electrical Research Products, Inc., at a meeting of the board of directors last week. He succeeds F. B. Foster, Jr., who recently became treasurer.

Nichols, McLaglen Take Awards for "The Informer"

"The Informer," written by Dudley Nichols, was voted the best screen play of the 38 features released on the Coast during June, by writers and artists of the screen, as recorded in the July issue of the Screen Guilds' Magazine, official publication of the Screen Actors' Guild and Screen Writers' Guild. Victor McLaglen's performance in the same picture was voted the best acting.

Honorable mention for performance went to Elisabeth Bergner, in "Escape Me Never," and Pat O'Brien for "Oil for the Lamps of China." Laird Doyle took second writing honors for "Oil for the Lamps of China," and Carl Zuckmayer and R. J. Cullen, British writers, were awarded third honors for the screen play on "Escape Me Never." Beginning with the July issue awards for performance and writing will be announced each month.

Dr. May Praises New High Standards of Screen

Dr. Mark A. May, head of the Institute of Human Relations at Yale, declared the "successful adventure into new high standards by the entertainment motion picture has resulted in many plus values on the screen," at a luncheon given for him by Will Hays in Hollywood last week. Leading film executives composed the audience.

"Among the plus values on the screen today," said Dr. May, "we might include information, because the studios go to great lengths to make pictures historically and biographically accurate. We certainly can include dramatization of many human problems that come to all of us, stimulating thought. We can further include a vast outreaching into new fields of literature and musical appreciation."

"Family" Type Pictures Increase, Louisville Report

Motion pictures shown in Louisville, Ky., are climbing to a new level of wholesomeness, as judged by the standards of the Better Films Council, Margaret Flynn, secretary, said recently. The number of pictures suitable for recommendation as "family pictures" has more than doubled since the council began compiling suggested lists last December. At that time, it was difficult to find enough pictures to recommend for family, adult and young audiences, she said.

The council's first list contained only eight recommended pictures. The weekly list now includes that many for family groups alone in addition to an average of four each for "adults" only and for "adults and young people." Each week the council receives an average of ten calls from parents asking for the name of suitable picture for children of various ages, Miss Flynn said.

Sonotone Stock Approved

Stockholders of Sonotone Corporation have approved the issuance of 50,000 shares of cumulative preferred stock. Dr. Hugo Lieber, president, explained the new issue is to give the company strong working capital. Sales for the first half of 1935 were $870,000, a gain of 37 per cent over the same period last year.

SECRET

TO write about any one feature of THE MARCH OF TIME as the secret of its development is absurd. Its greatest strength comes from directing all its features at one target, the public's fast-growing passion of curiosity. This has won for THE MARCH OF TIME a unique audience in a very few months—an audience that feels spiritedly about each new edition.

This audience does not always agree with what happens in the events presented. It welcomes, though, the authentic, unbiased manner in which THE MARCH OF TIME ferrets behind the news. It writes letters to the producers, to the theatre managers. The dramatic photo-reporting becomes a topic of its every-day conversation. In the theatre the subject gains tense attention, the audience breaking into applause or expression of disapproval as the hidden beginnings and startling developments of today's history appear.

Such was the case with the story of Germany's rearming, on the screen two days before the newspapers headlined the story. With the first transpacific passenger flight pre-enacted and shown three months before the actual flight. With the inside story of the Navy's war games. Even more keen was the reaction to such "scoop" pictures as those of Europe's mystery munitioneer Sir Basil Zaharoff and Louisiana's "Kingfish" Long.

This, we believe, is the most robust, honest kind of Audience Reaction and (if public interest and press comment are an indication) one of the strongest Box Office potentials any exhibitor can work with.

What issue No. 5, released by RKO on August 16, will contain, what news will be the biggest before the month is out, cannot be foretold. But this much is sure: it will be an uncommonly fast, courageous presentation of newsworthy events that will make audiences talk and think and feel.

Dear Mr. Knight:

I just thought I would write you and let you know that I watch for your articles in Better Theatres when they are issued. They are certainly great and get a lot of good meat out of them, and I know a lot of the other managers think they are great and get a lot out of them. I was planning on saving them from each issue but Henry Sheils likes to read them so I send it along to him when I am through with it. I do not know what your plans are but if all these articles were put into a book form and I know you would find a good market for them in this section. They would be great to have in the office for a quick reference on any subject you wished information on. I know myself I would like to have them, and if there is any way where as I can purchase from you copies of the articles I would like to have them.

Yours Very Truly,

J. C. JENKINS--HIS COLYUM

Storm Lake, Iowa

Dear Herald:

While in Des Moines we met C. A. Pratt, who is connected with his brother, Clyde Pratt, in the operation of the two houses in Washington, Iowa. We were very sorry not to be able to get down to Washington to see the boys, for we've got them catalogued among our best friends in Iowa, and say, Mabel, we've got a lot of 'em.

C. A. Pratt has been salesman for Warner-First National ever since there was any Warner-First National and maybe that's why Warner-First National is so well represented here in Iowa. Maybe it's partly on that account and maybe it's because Warner-First National has the service the boys all want. Anyhow, we had a good visit with C. A.

Fishing in a Cornfield

Jevver spear fish out in a cornfield? Well, they have been doing that out north of Des Moines, where the river overflowed and the fish ran out in the fields looking for grasshoppers, and then the water ran down and left them stranded in the puddle-holes.

You have no doubt heard a lot of fish stories, but we doubt if you ever heard one that would beat this one here. They have caught carp, buffalo, bass and pike out in the corn fields and one can get fresh fish in the cafes every day. It will be Andy Anderson's turn next.

There is one thing about a jazz orchestra that we always admire, and that is that sometimes they all run out of wind at the same time.

If you want to see good crops of wheat, oats, rye and alfalfa and your ticket don't take you to Nebraska, you should come out here to Iowa and see the crops here. As we have previously informed you, we never speculate (otherwise known as gamble) on the grain exchange, but if we were so inclined we'd go to it, whole hog or none, as the saying goes, and sell September wheat, oats and rye. But this isn't to be construed as advice to anybody, for we have a reputation of being a mighty poor guesser, but we know good crops when we see them and we are giving it as our best judgment that we have never seen better prospects for these grains than right now, and when Uncle Josh can bring a load of wheat to town this fall he is going to bring Aunt Lucy and the kids along and take in the movies; that is, provided he has been released from the relief rolls.

But speaking of being on relief. There's this about it: We'd sooner see a man carry his supplies home than to take 'em home in a Packard; not that we've got anything against the Packards.

When Huey Long called the President a "liar" he simply proved how impetuous some of those Southerners are. Huey shouldn't have done that; that's awfully poor ethics to call the President a liar; besides that he might have trouble proving it.

If the press reports of that terrible rain and flood they had down in New York state, and the tremendous damage it did, are true (and we don't doubt but what they are), it would seem that the public should step in and lend a helping hand to those poor unfortunates, and if there has been a relief committee appointed to solicit help we hope they will remember that our address is Neligh, Nebraska. We are poor, but, by gosh, we are not broke yet.

"When the needy crieth turn thou not a deaf ear." We are not offering this as a correct biblical quotation, but it's darn good horse-sense just the same, and the boys west of the Mississippi river learned that when they went to Sunday school.

We have driven over a lot of Iowa's prize country the last couple of days and if you are looking for something that will cure sore eyes and make you doubt if the depression will last much longer than the coming harvest you should make a trip out to the northwestern part of this state. We note that they are harvesting some fields of rye and the bulk of the wheat will be ready for the harvester within a week. This country is a sight worth driving many miles to see.

A Place for the Alarmists

If the alarmists who are writing of the wars this country is liable to never have, should get writers' cramp and throw their pens away and get a bass rod and go fishing and give the public a rest, it would be all right with us.

We drove over to Lake City to see our friend L. A. Miller, who operates the Iowa theatre, but when we got there L. H. wasn't there; he had just left on a billing trip and we were told that he wouldn't be back until night. It's funny how the news of our coming always precedes us. Some day we are going to slip up on him when he isn't looking.

Going Right Ahead

Mr. W. W. Watt has added some new touches to his theatre in Sac City. He may be able to better the looks of it but we don't see how he could. When you are thinking that you have opposition you should think of Mr. Watt. The day we called on him he had for opposition one moving picture house, two tent shows and a circus, and the only way to beat that is to ring in a night ball game, a skating rink, a boxing match, a dog fight and the opening of a beer saloon.

In spite of this opposition Mr. Watt was going ahead just as though he was alone in a town of people who had never heard of tent shows and circuses. We had a delightful visit with him and Mrs. Watt and we have them listed on our register for the next time we visit Iowa. Doggone it, why can't we all be like Mr. and Mrs. Watt?

Tonight we are going downtown and call on Mr. Tracy, who operates one of the town's popular play houses and Mr. Norman, who operates the other. The last time we were here both of these boys were running loose and we understand that the mayor had given orders to the police to see that all henhouses were securely locked up. It's funny how all of these theatre boys like fried chicken. As we looked at it when we were here before, Storm Lake has no cause to want for better theatres nor better theatre managers than she already has right now, and we doubt if she could get any better if she wanted them.

Pussy Willows

Since they have started planting that "Shelterbelt" out in the two Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and the Panhandle, to "bring rain," and since New York has had a tremendous flood, it inclines to wonder if the "Brain Trust" has set the boys to planting pussy willows down in old New York state.

Well, Ernie says we've got to quit now, and when he tells us to quit we are going to quit, but before we quit we want to tell those badgers over in Wisconsin that we will be over there before long provided we will be admitted within the confines of the famous brick cheese state and don't have to exhibit a copy of our previous record. That would just be terrible.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

BEST MAN WINS, THE: Jack Holt, Florence Rice—Pleasing small town film.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY BILL: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—Good picture but the hot weather hurt it. Played July 6-7.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY BILL: Warner Baxter, Myrna Loy—One of the best pictures in long time but business off due to the misleading title and trailer. Word of mouth advertising brings up gross. Running time, 103 minutes. Played June 23-25.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

CAPTAIN HATES THE SEA: Victor McLaglen, John Gilbert—Left too much to the imagination. Patrons not satisfied with the ending. Running time, eight reels. Played July 3.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

CARNIVAL: Jimmy Durante, Lee Tracy, Sally Eilers, Florence Rice—Had a natural play date and caught everyone in carnival mood but picture will do fair on any midweek date. Running time, 75 minutes. Played July 4-5.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

I'LL LOVE YOU ALWAYS: Nancy Carroll, George Murphy—Pleased the ladies but not so hot with the men.—Harold C. Allison, Baldwin Theatre, Baldwin, Mich. Small town patronage.

I'LL LOVE YOU ALWAYS: Nancy Carroll, George Murphy—Good program picture. Didn't do so much business but pleased what few did come.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

LAW BEYOND THE RANGE: Tim McCoy, Billie Seward—Good action for Saturday patrons who eat it up when Tim shoots sixteen or seventeen down in barroom, both guns going. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 6.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

LET'S LIVE TONIGHT: Lilian Harvey, Tulio Carminati—A lemon without a doubt. Foreign accent. Half the audience walked out. The other half I gave rain checks and told them I was sorry. Played July 4.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. Rural patronage.

MEN OF THE HOUR: Richard Cromwell—Very good program picture. We played this pretty soon after "Bengal Lancer" (Paramount) on account of Cromwell.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MILLS OF THE GODS: May Robson, Victor Jory—Good picture. Really lots better than expected. We like Jory and he was good in this part.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

UNKNOWN WOMAN: Marian Marsh, Richard Cromwell—A fine program picture. Story interesting and stars and cast very good. Will average with most of the program pictures in giving satisfaction.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Jean Arthur—About as clever a drama as has been shown this year. Clever twists and unusual situations. While this belongs to the general cycle of gangster and G-men pictures, the story is different enough to put it in a class by itself. Edward G. Robinson is superb in the dual role and the entire cast does good work. Due credit should be given the director and the technical staff. No great drawing power but a good average, weather considered.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

First National

BLACK FURY: Paul Muni, Karen Morley—Leave it to Warners to bring a timely theme to the screen. Here is a production that will cause talk and give satisfaction, but is of such a nature that to properly advertise it would be dynamite. We are in the midst of strike trouble here and under such conditions had to soft pedal ad copy. Did fairly well under the circumstances and pleased generally. Running time, 90 minutes. Played June 28-29.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

CASE OF THE CURIOUS BRIDE: Warren William—Very good. No complaint.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

CASE OF THE CURIOUS BRIDE: Warren William—A mighty fine program picture. Story interesting. Gave good satisfaction. Played July 9-10.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenwille, Mich. Town and country patronage.

G MEN, THE: James Cagney, Margaret Lindsay—When this was released we booked it for the Fourth and our hunch was a good one. We got the sheriff to arrange an exhibit for us and with the previous buildup for this picture we played to record weekend business. Any exhibitor who fails to take advantage of the exploitation this picture affords has no one to blame but himself if he doesn't cash in on "G Men." It's a natural in any situation. Running time, 85 minutes. Played July 4-5-6.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

G MEN, THE: James Cagney—The best picture of the crook type we ever played. We honestly believe every theatre should play this picture for the reason it leaves a lot of people thinking our government is okay after all the filth we read in the paper. And is this boy Cagney good. Wait until you play it; your surprise will be double in box-office and picture. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

GIRL FROM TENTH AVENUE, THE: Bette Davis, Ian Hunter—Vitagraph is evidently aiming to star Bette Davis, but they will have to come better than this one if she is to go very far. The picture is dialogued to death, moves too slowly, has no action to speak of and no comedy; straight drama. Hunter has his English accent too perfect; diction all right but it has that stilted quality that is and has been in the English pictures that we have previously run. Not so hot for the sticks.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GIRL FROM TENTH AVENUE, THE: Bette Davis, Ian Hunter, Colin Clive—A splendid entertainment. Great work by the star. The picture gave good satisfaction. Did not draw very much business, but satisfied all we got. Played July 7-8.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

GO INTO YOUR DANCE: Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler, Glenda Farrell, Helen Morgan—Consensus is that Miss Keeler carried the picture with Helen Morgan very good in her role. An elaborate musical and the one single criticism of the picture that came from the audience was that there was too much Jolson. But that was to be expected. There is a good story running through it and the music is very good with "Quarter to Nine" the high spot in the show. But all hail to Ruby Keeler; she is plenty good. A couple of Jolson's songs could have been left out and helped the picture. It is the case with him as it was with Bing Crosby; they must sing just so many songs; a little restraint would not have hurt the picture and would have speeded it up a little.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GO INTO YOUR DANCE: Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler—Gave more satisfaction than any musical we have played for months. This has what it takes to entertain and in generous quantities. Strike conditions kept the gross low, but normally this would have clicked in a big way. Running time, 97 minutes. Played June 23-24-25.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GO INTO YOUR DANCE: Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler—Excellent. This is Ruby's best picture and can she dance! Al Jolson has rather an unsympathetic part but is good. Glenda Farrell as the hard-boiled dame is very good. Pleased all who came but had been shown in an adjoining town very nearly on release date and that cut down the attendance to the vanishing point. Running time, 97 minutes. Played July 5-6-7.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

GO INTO YOUR DANCE: Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler—Too much Al Jolson and not enough Ruby Keeler for my fans. They could have cut several songs of his out and never missed them. Folks came out saying too draggy and no comedy. Only fair business. Put some of the Warner comedy players in this and you would have saved a picture and buried Al. Running time, 97 minutes.—A. J. Simons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Gloria Stuart—Not so good at the box-office. Did not have any extra kick to it.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Gloria Stuart—This picture was the poorest from Warners we ever had. They overdid this picture. We played a Shirley Temple short, helping this picture out. We did only average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilby, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935: Dick Powell, Gloria Stuart—This bears but a shadowy resemblance to the famous original "Gold Diggers." While there is considerable amusement for the non-discriminating, this fails to measure up to the Warner Bros. hit musicals by a wide margin. Drawing power a bare hot weather average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

IN CALIENTE: Pat O'Brien, Dolores Del Rio—Business good and the customers enjoyed it. Say, who is that gal that does the hill-billy gag? Watch her, Warners, she went over big here. Horton and O'Brien both good here. (Now send the picture, Pat).—A. J. Simmons, Lama Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

LIVING ON VELVET: Kay Francis, George Brent, Warren William—A splendid cast, but a poor story, which proved to be somewhat disappointing. However, the stars pulled them in and our business was way above average. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 18.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

MARY JANE'S PA: Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee—From the reaction on this one, Kibbee and MacMahon had better go back in support. This comedy team is being forced along too fast, and it is my opinion that after the novelty of the first two pictures had worn off, and it apparently had from the business done, they were not strong enough with the public to carry on as head stars of a picture. Kibbee is a type and got places as long as he was not starred. This picture flopped very badly and I think for the reason that I have given.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MARY JANE'S PA: Guy Kibbee, Aline MacMahon—The Saturday customers ate it up. The little girl is great. It is a good comedy.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

MAYBE IT'S LOVE: Gloria Stuart, Ross Alexander, Frank McHugh—See report on "A Night at the Ritz."—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

RED HOT TIRES: Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor—A fine Saturday picture, liked by everybody. Running time, 66 minutes. Played June 21-22.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

RED HOT TIRES: Mary Astor, Lyle Talbot—A good action picture and a good story. Everyone that saw this picture liked it. A good picture for Friday and Saturday. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 4-5-6.—E. W. Sokolowsky, New Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Small town patronage.

TRAVELING SALESLADY: Joan Blondell—It is a good comedy for the small town. It is fast and has plenty of laughs.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

TRAVELING SALESLADY: Joan Blondell—While we played this on a double, it will stand alone for a weekend bill. Pleased everyone. Running time, 69 minutes. Played July 1-2-3.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

TRAVELING SALESLADY: Joan Blondell—A very good comedy that pays its way and the customers go out pleased. The kind of a picture that has kept this theatre going for several years. Don't overlook this girl Glenda Farrell, and Hugh Herbert. They add their share and it's a lot too. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

WHILE THE PATIENT SLEPT: Aline MacMahon, Guy Kibbee—Drew well and believe everyone was satisfied. Running time, 61 minutes.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

WOMAN IN RED, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond—Fair murder. Stanwyck weakening, both in box office and productions. Running time, 72 minutes. Played June 26.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

WOMAN IN RED, THE: Barbara Stanwyck, Gene Raymond—Very good and drew above average. Running time, 60 minutes. Played June 25.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

Fox

BABOONA: Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson—Nothing to rave over.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. Rural patronage.

DOUBTING THOMAS: Will Rogers—Even Bill thought this was poor, the way he walked through his lines, and it is just the worst Rogers picture ever made. All the old ladies' home of Hollywood was there in it, but poor Bill cannot put them all over. My advice is to skip it if you can. It will sure hurt Rogers here in his next picture. Running time, 76 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

FIRST WORLD WAR, THE: A group of newsreels collated wth one-man announcer. Played June 26.—Ben Brinck, West Point Theatre, West Point, Iowa. Rural patronage.

GEORGE WHITE'S 1935 SCANDALS: Alice Faye, James Dunn—Good show but did not draw very well.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

HELLDORADO: Richard Arlen, Madge Evans—Good story, excellent cast, and good photography, especially of the flood, makes this a much more satisfactory picture than some of the specials. This one will please any audience. Running time, 74 minutes. Played July 10-11.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

IT'S A SMALL WORLD: Spencer Tracy, Wendy Barrie—Pleased 100 per cent those who came to see it. This fellow Tracy well liked here. We hope he keeps on making this type picture. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple—Many patrons claimed this one better than "Little Colonel" and "Bright Eyes." We don't think so but who are we to take issue with the cash customers. Played to good business three days and first time in history of this house was a continuous show on Sunday necessary to handle the crowds. Running time, 63 minutes. Played July 7-8-9.—Roy C. Irvine, Ritz Theatre, Ritzville, Wash. General patronage.

OUR LITTLE GIRL: Shirley Temple—Well, at last Fox has started down on the two biggest stars. We had only fair business with this one and did not please as the other Temple pictures have. They go out shaking their heads and you wonder if they will ever come back after this one.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

SPRING TONIC: Lew Ayres, Claire Trevor—All I have to say for this one is it will be the audience that will need the tonic, and a lot of it. A cluck of the purest water. Terrible is the word for it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

$10 RAISE: Edward Everett Horton—Pleased. It's a good comedy.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

UNDER THE PAMPAS MOON: Warner Baxter, Ketti Gallian—Right up the alley for a ten strike in this man's town. Baxter is a favorite with our patrons and while this is not another "Cisco Kid," it registered well at the box-office and our patrons. Fine for a Friday-Saturday run. Running time, 80 minutes. Played July 5-6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN: George O'Brien—One of the best run-of-mine westerns we have had. George O'Brien good draw here. Played June 26-27.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

Mascot

MARINES ARE COMING, THE: William Haines, Armida—One of the best action pictures in a long time. Above the average. Armida very good. Glad to see Haines again. Nagel also turned in some good work. Running time, eight reels.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MGM

BABY FACE HARRINGTON: Charles Butterworth—Personally I thought this the most inane and tiresome picture I ever exhibited but it seemed to please about 98 per cent of my patrons and what pleases them is okay with me. Una Merkel is always good and Charles Butterworth gives a very good performance, if you like him. I do not. Running time, 63 minutes. Played July 3-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CALM YOURSELF: Madge Evans, Robert Young—A comedy drama that is just average. Business below average. Running time, 69 minutes. Played July 14-15.—R. D. Ashmun, Strand Theatre, Caro, Mich. General patronage.

DAVID COPPERFIELD: W. C. Fields, Frank Lawton, Freddie Bartholomew—Even our old friend Fields could not put this classic in the paying list for us. Played late owing to poor cooperation from exchange. Too bad. Running time, 105 minutes. Played July 10-11.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

DEATH ON THE DIAMOND: Robert Young, Madge Evans—It pleased the Saturday crowd.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

HELL BELOW: Robert Montgomery—This picture did us business in spite of heat. It's very different than the ordinary run and it gave the managers pleasure to say goodnight and receive compliments.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilby, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

MARK OF THE VAMPIRE: Lionel Barrymore—Another picture from Metro that will keep the folks away from your theatre, not only the picture but the trailer you are forced to run in advance. It, too, will frighten them away. Just another date wasted. Skip it by all means or become the mark yourself for running it. Running time, 83 minutes. Played June 28.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

MYSTERY OF MR. X: Robert Montgomery, Elizabeth Allan—They sure did talk about this picture, which kept them guessing till the very last. One of the few that builds up the second night.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NAUGHTY MARIETTA: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—Fine picture. They failed to draw enough to pay overhead. However, no fault of the picture. We just don't think these buckwheat towns are ready for opera. This fellow Nelson Eddy should go places in this business. Believe all theatres should play it for the few who do enjoy these type pictures. Don't forget this is the picture business and not the Metropolitan. Running time, 102 minutes. Played June 22-23.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

NIGHT IS YOUNG, THE: Ramon Novarro, Evelyn Laye, Charles Butterworth, Una Merkel—This is an extra good picture. I call it a special for any man's house. It gave extra good satisfaction and we shall play a return engagement on the picture. Evelyn Laye is certainly great, Novarro always good and the cast better than the average on pictures nowadays. Played July 11.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

RECKLESS: Jean Harlow, William Powell—I consider this Jean's best picture. A good story, good music and dance numbers and an excellent cast make this a very pleasing picture. May Robson, as usual, almost steals the show. Carnival shots are good. In fact, there is enough variety in this production to please the entire audience. Unusually hot weather cut down the box-office receipts but that is not the fault of the picture. Pleased. Running time, 99 minutes. Played July 13-14.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

SEQUOIA: Jean Parker—You will be glad to show this picture. It is something different and a wonderful picture. It pleased.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

TIMES SQUARE LADY: Robert Taylor, Virginia Bruce—This hardly rates a Sunday date as it is merely a good program production. As such it pleased fairly well and grossed no more than the strength of the picture warranted. Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 30-July 1-2.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

Monogram

DESERT TRAIL: John Wayne, Mary Kornman—Just a little too much shooting and too much riding. Rather light material and might do on double bill. We do not show double programs, so left us looking like we had just let a bird go.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

HOOSIER SCHOOL MASTER, THE: Norman Foster, Charlotte Henry—This is a great small town picture. Every one has read the book and it is well acted. The work of the stars is fine and a splendid cast. Pleased all hands here. Played July 9-10.—Bert Silver, Silver Theatre, Greenville, Mich. Town and country patronage.

MYSTERIOUS MR. WONG, THE: Bela Lugosi—If your patrons like Chinese pictures, here's one that will sure please them. We thought it very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

MYSTERIOUS MR. WONG, THE: Bela Lugosi—Very good Saturday offering. Above average. Running time, 68 minutes. Played June 20.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

MYSTERY MAN: Robert Armstrong—A very good picture. Fine with a western on Saturday night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

TEXAS TERROR: John Wayne—Like all other John Wayne westerns, it drew well and we made some money. They are nothing outstanding, but they fill the house. Hope we will have more and better westerns this coming year. They mean money in the small exhibitor's pocket. Running time, 51 minutes. Played June 28-29.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

ALL THE KING'S HORSES: Carl Brisson, Mary Ellis, Edward Everett Horton—Did a nice business the second night. Everybody pleased. Mary Ellis's marvelous singing captivated the audience. Carl Brisson also good; his superb dancing was comparable to Fred Astaire. Everyone was humming or whistling his songs for days. This picture should do well anywhere. Played July 5-6.—Fred J. Case, La Belle Theatre, La Belle, Fla. Small town patronage.

COLLEGE SCANDAL: Arline Judge, Kent Taylor—A murder mystery with a college background. Good story, good cast. Pleased everyone. Business above average. Running time, 78 minutes. Played July 7-8.—R. D. Ashmun, Strand Theatre, Caro, Mich. General patronage.

FOUR HOURS TO KILL: Richard Barthelmess—We consider this one of the finest pieces of acting and direction we have ever shown, but it did not get us any money. Played July 4-5.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piendmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

GILDED, LILY, THE: Claudette Colbert—Good picture. Drew well and pleased.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomation, Ala. Small town patronage.

GILDED LILY, THE: Claudette Colbert—My patrons liked this 100 per cent. Not a dull moment in the whole picture. I played this on "Ladies' Night" and did not fail at the box office.—E. W. Sokolowsky, New Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Small town patronage.

GLASS KEY, THE: George Raft—A well made pictures that gives George Raft a chance to act again. Good plot, excellent cast. Will please everyone. Played to average business. Running time, 77 minutes. Played July 2-4.—R. D. Ashmun, Strand Theatre, Caro, Mich. General patronage.

GOIN' TO TOWN: Mae West—The best picture this star has made failed to click for us. Just another play date wasted at the peak of film rentals. Running time, 73 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

HOLD 'EM YALE: Patricia Ellis, Cesar Romero—Just another quickie: that tells it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

LIMEHOUSE BLUES: George Raft, Jean Parker—Better than expected. Drew pretty good, too. Seemed to please.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone—Here is a picture that Paramount can be proud of. It can't be beat for a picture of this type. Every day or so I still hear someone mention the fact that it was one of the best pictures they had ever seen. Drew pretty good and pleased 'em all (so far as I can find out).—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small town patronage.

LIVES OF A BENGAL LANCER: Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone—A very good picture. I played it on a Sunday and Monday and did more than the average business. If it wasn't so warm we could have done better. Played June 30-July 1.—E. W. Sokolowsky, New Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn. Small town patronage.

McFADDEN'S FLATS: Walter C. Kelly, Betty Furness, Richard Cromwell—Good comedy but dialect hard to understand in spots. Lowest Sunday gross for many months. Played July 7-8.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

ONCE IN A BLUE MOON: Jimmy Savo—Poorest "flicker" I ever saw. Any one who takes money either for exhibiting or distributing should pin a tag on their lapel, "I am Jesse James." Running time, 70 minutes. Played June 27-28.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN MYSTERY: Randolph Scott, "Chic" Sale—Fair western but not the kind that gets in money. "Chic" Sale fine. Played July 6.—A. B. Jefferis, New Piedmont Theatre, Piedmont, Mo. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BREAK OF HEARTS: Katharine Hepburn, Charles Boyer—For me a lovely picture, marvelous in fact, but a box-office flop.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

ONE MAN'S JOURNEY: Lionel Barrymore, May Robson, Joel McCrea, Frances Dee—I had never heard of this picture, but glad we played it. A nice, clean story of a country doctor; Barrymore does his stuff, making it a typical weekend picture if you have many farmers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SILVER STREAK, THE: Charles Starrett, Sally Blane—While this gives the Burlington Road a lot of free advertising, they deserve it for cooperating so wholeheartedly in the making of this. I always have had a weakness for railroad dramas. but I guess the same is true of many theatre-goers. I do not recall a single failure in railroad dramas and I hope they will keep making more good railroad dramas. This is a real thriller which was highly enjoyed and it did a better than average business for the time of the year. I hope the big companies make at least one railroad drama a year.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: William Powell, Ginger Rogers—Very nice show. Too much booze for Kansas and it did not please so well. A good ad for the liquor interests.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

STAR OF MIDNIGHT: William Powell, Ginger Rogers—Nice little comedy that pleased midweek days and drew fairly good business. Watch this R. K. O. company. They are making small town movies and boy, we need them. Luck to you, Ned Depinet. Keep up the good work. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. J. Simmons, Lamar Plaza Theatre, Lamar, Mo. General patronage.

United Artists

CARDINAL RICHELIEU: George Arliss—Played to the smallest number of people we have ever experienced on a midweek date. Pulled only the Arliss fans and even they were not enthusiastic over the production. Not a small town picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played June 26-27.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

KID MILLIONS: Eddie Cantor, Ann Sothern, Ethel Merman—Pulled better and gave more satisfaction than any of this star's previous pictures. Elaborately produced musical comedy with Eddie, of course, just about the whole show. Clever finale in color. Running time, 92 minutes. Played July 7-8-9.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LET 'EM HAVE IT: Richard Arlen, Virginia Bruce—Coming at a time when interest in organized crime is high, this splendid production should click in any situation. Holds your attention from start to finish and reveals the inside workings of the federal organization for the combating of crime. Pulled great and pleased almost everyone. Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 3-4.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SCARLET PIMPERNEL, THE: Leslie Howard, Merle Oberon—Lay off if possible. Direction of this is so amateurish it even makes the English dialogue worse if that is possible. Next time I buy one of those London films, hope the roof falls in. Both customers walked out and would have refunded money if it weren't for Mickey Mouse "Band Concert." Running time, 95 minutes. Played July 7-9.—W. M. Allison, Mission Theatre, Clayton, N. M. General patronage.

WEDDING NIGHT, THE: Anna Sten, Gary Cooper—Very fine picture. All in the cast do a fine job of acting.—W. H. Hardman, Royal Theatre, Frankfort, Kan. Small town patronage.

Universal

CHINATOWN SQUAD: Lyle Talbot, Valerie Hobson—Good old bokum melodrama served up in generous quantities and with a dash of mystery and you have a swell dish which clicked in a big way with the payees. Suppose this would have to be classified as program, but then it's another case of a program offering going over better than a socalled special. O. K. for weekend showing. Running time, 65 minutes. Played July 6.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GOOD FAIRY, THE: Margaret Sullavan—Almost two hours of continuous chatter by four characters. The most tiresome socalled special we had in years, and we were foolish enough to believe the fairy tales of the producer. By all means shelve it or substitute something else. Our ears are burning yet. Played July 9th.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

TWO MORE ENROLL IN REPORTING STAFF

From widely separated communities on the Atlantic seaboard come two new additions to the steadily increasing army of reporters to "What the Picture Did for Me." One is from Florida, the other from Connecticut. They are:

Fred J. Case, LaBelle Theatre, LaBelle, Fla.

E. W. Sokolowsky, New Rialto Theatre, New Britain, Conn.

You'll find the first reports from these showmen in the department this week.

IMITATION OF LIFE: Warren William, Claudette Colbert—Without a doubt, this is one of the finest pictures we have played this year. We played this picture several months ago and they are still talking it. If you haven't played this picture, do so by all means. Wish we could get more like it. Receipts more than doubled the second night.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

MISTER DYNAMITE: Edmund Lowe—Many favorable comments on this. I can't say what it will do anywhere else, but it sure went over big in my town.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. Small own patronage.

MISTER DYNAMITE: Edmund Lowe, Esther Ralston—Don't expect too much from this picture. It did not give satisfaction. As a program picture it is below average. Running time, 70 minutes. Played July 11.—J. F. Schlez, Columbia Theatre, Columbia, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.
